THE GREEK ORIGINALS AND DATES OF THE PLAYS IN THE THIRD VOLUME

The Mercator is an adaptation of Philemon’s Emporos.¹ When the Emporos was produced, however, is unknown, as is the date of production of the Mercator, and of the Mostellaria and Persa, as well.

The Alazon, the Greek original of the Miles Gloriosus, was very likely written in 287 B.C., the argument² for that date being based on international relations during the reign of Seleucus,³ for whom Pyrgopolynices was recruiting soldiers at Ephesus. And Periplektomenus’s allusion to the imprisonment of Naevius⁴ might seem to suggest that Plautus composed the Miles about 206 B.C.

Philemon’s Phasma was probably the original of the Mostellaria, and written, as it apparently was, after the death of Alexander the Great and Agathocles,⁵ we may assume that Philemon presented the Phasma between 288 B.C. and the year of the death of Diphilus,⁶ who was living when it was produced.

THE GREEK ORIGINALS

In the Persa the Persians are spoken of as a people still independent.¹ The unknown Greek original of the play would therefore seem to have been written in the time of Demosthenes, before the conquests of Alexander.

ARGUMENTVM I

Missus mercatum ab suo adulescens patre
Emit atque adportat scita forma mulierem.
Requirit quae sit, postquam eam vidit, senex:
Confingit servos emptam matri pedisequam.
Amat senex hanc, ac se simulans vendere
Tradit vicino; eum putat uxor sibi
Obduxe scortum. tum Charinum ex fuga
Retrahit sodalis, postquam amicam invenit.

ARGUMENTVM II

Mercatum asotum filium extrudit pater.
is peregre missus redimit ancillam hospitis amore captus, advehit. nave exilit, pater advolat, vix visam ancillam deperit.
cuius sit percontatur; servos pedisequam ab adulescente matri ait emptam ipsius.
ARGUMENT OF THE PLAY (I)

A young man, sent on a trading trip by his father, buys and brings home a charming young miss. The old gentleman, after seeing her, inquires who she may be. His son's servant pretends that she was bought as an attendant for the young man's mother. Falling in love with her and feigning to sell her, the old gentleman entrusts her to a neighbour; and the neighbour's wife thinks he has got himself a mistress. Then Charinus is kept from leaving the country by his friend, who has found the young fellow's sweetheart.

ARGUMENT OF THE PLAY (II)

A dissipated son is packed off on a trading trip by his father. Despatched abroad, he loses his heart to a maidservant of his host, buys her, and carries her home. He disembarks; his father flies to the ship, and, at first sight of the maid, is smitten. He asks whose she is; his son's servant says the young man bought her as an attendant for his mother. Then the old gentle-

The old gentleman is first in the market and gets the girl. This neighbour's spouse, finding the girl in her house, takes her for her husband's mistress, and ejects him. ACT I

ENTER Charinus, pale and wan.

Char. (to audience) I am now resolved to do, at one and the same time, two things—acquaint you both with the plot of this play and with my passion. I shall not imitate those other lovesick lovers I have seen in the comedies, who confide their woes to the night, or day, or sun, or moon; very little care these, I fancy, about the complaints of mortals, their likes and dislikes. It is to you, rather, that I shall now confide my woes.

The Greek name of this play is the Emporos, of Philemon; in Latin we call it the Mercator, of Maccius Titus.

My father (with a wave of the hand in the direction of Demipho's house) sent me away from here on a trading trip to Rhodes; two years ago it is now, since I left home. There I fell in love with a perfectly beautiful girl. But how I became enthralled you shall hear, if your ears are at leisure and you will accord me your kind attention. (apologetically) And, by Jove, I have failed to follow fully the practice of lovers: this love of mine was the theme I announced, that was my starting point. For in the wake of love commonly come all these ills—care, sorrow and excessive display,\(^1\) and overtalking—which overtalking becomes undertalking because a lover constantly delivers himself of useless irrelevancies at the wrong time; and then again I pronounce this overtalking sub-talking, by reason of the fact that no lover is ever so artfully eloquent as to be able to say the things that help him. So you people should not be irritated at my own over-talking now: it was my legacy from Venus on the same day she gave me my love. To which love of mine I must now return, and resume my tale.

In the beginning, after I had come of age and lost my zest for childish things, I became completely captivated by a courtesan here; forthwith my father's property quietly went into exile to her. The ruthless pimp, who owned the girl, grabbed and made off with everything he could pounce on. My father denounced all this night and day, picturing the perfidy and injustice of pimps. To think that his own estate should be absolutely mangled, and that fellow's multiplied! All this at the top of his lungs; or now again he would mutter what he had to say—shake his head, and even insist that I was no son of his. All over the city he would go, bebawling and giving notice no

\(^1\) vv. 20–30: And this is a vice which takes a full and heavy toll, not only from the lover, but from everyone affected by it, nor is there a single soul, I swear, given to display beyond his means who does not pay an ample penalty. But love has still more ills which I omitted—sleeplessness, anxiety, uncertainty, fear and flight, silliness, yes, and stupidity and recklessness, and senseless unreflection, immodesty, wantonness and lust, ill-will, inertia, inordinate desire, sloth, injustice, contumely and extravagance.

one was to trust me when I looked for loans. Love had lured many a man into extravagance, he would tell me; but I was an intemperate, unrestrained, unprincipled waster, doing all I could to drain him dry; and the good substance he had acquired by his own unsparing toil was being scattered and squandered by me in the vilest way, on my amours. To think that he had supported me all these years to be a scandal to him! If I was not ashamed of such a life, I ought to end my life, and do it gladly. Why, here was he—he had not turned to love affairs and lolling about in idleness like me the moment he came of age, nor did he have a chance—so tightly was he held in check by his father. Work on the farm, dirty work and plenty of it, that was his training, and there was no visiting the city for him, except once every four years, and just as soon as he had set eyes on the sacred robe his father used to pack him off post haste to the farm again. And there he was the best labourer of them all by far, and his father would say: "It is for yourself you plough, for yourself you harrow, for yourself you sow, yes, and for yourself you reap, and for yourself, finally, that labour will engender joy." After life had left his father's body, he had sold the farm and with the money bought a ship of fifteen tons burden and marketed his cargoes of merchandise everywhere, till he had at length acquired the wealth which he then possessed. I ought to do the same, if I were what I ought to be.

As for me, when I realized that I was detestable to my own father and disgusting to the man I should delight, lovesick lunatic though I was, I summoned my resolution and declared that I would go on a trading trip, if he so desired: my love should be put aside if only I could please him. He thanked me and be-lauded my good intentions; but he did not fail to follow up my promises. He built a small Cyprian bark, bought merchandise, loaded the now completed vessel, and furthermore counted me out two hundred pounds with his own hand. A slave who had been my attendant in time past, when I was a tiny lad, he sent along with me as a sort of guardian. These preparations made, we weighed anchor.

We arrived at Rhodes, where I sold my whole cargo quite to my satisfaction. I made a big profit over and above the price my father set for me on the merchandise; so I cleared a good bit of pocket-money for myself. But while I was strolling about the port there, an old friend of ours recognized me and invited me to dinner. I went, and met with a jovial and lavish welcome at his table. On our going to bed at night, lo and behold! a girl came to me, an unsurpassed beauty of a girl! That night she spent with me by order of my host. See for yourselves how completely she charmed me: the next day I went to my host and begged him to sell her to me, saying I should be grateful and deeply obliged for the favour.

To come to an end—I did buy her, and brought her here yesterday. But I don't want my father to find out I have brought her. I just now left her at the harbour on board the ship, along with Oh, damn you! Quibbling when my life's at stake!

How am I quibbling, curse it, if I answer what you ask?

He really saw her?

Gad! As really as I see you, or you me.

Where did he see her?

There on board, as he stood near her; and he talked with her, too.

Ah, father, you've finished me! (to Acanthio) But look here, you! Look here, you! Why didn't you take care he shouldn't see her, you whipstock? Why didn't you hide her away, you villain, and keep her out of my father's sight?

Because we were busy with our own business: we were intent on furling sail and getting things shipshape. Meanwhile, up comes your father in a tiny cutter, and not a soul set eyes on him till he climbed aboard.

(tragically) In vain, oh sea, have I escaped thy tempests! Methought I now was surely safe on shore, only to find myself flung upon the rocks by the raging billows! Go on, go on, tell what took place!

After he spied the girl, he began asking whose she was.

What did she answer?

I ran up at once and broke in on 'em, saying you had bought her as a maid for your mother.

Did he seem to believe you?

Of course he did! But the blackguard began to pet!

For Heaven's sake! Her?

(snorting) Strange it wasn't me he petted!

Oh, Lord! My poor heart! It’s melting away speck by speck, just as when you put salt in water! I’m lost, lost!

(scornful) There! That’s the truest thing you’ve said! (pauses, then cheerfully) That’s all foolishness.

(in despair) What shall I do? I don’t believe my father will believe me, if I say I bought her for my mother; besides, (virtuously) I think it’s wicked to tell a lie to my own parent. He won’t believe it, and it can’t be believed, that I bought such an exquisite creature to be my mother’s maid.

Do keep still, won’t you, you idiot? He’ll believe you, Lord, yes! Why, he has already believed me.

Oh dear! How I dread his coming to suspect the real situation! Answer me this question, please, please!

What is your question, please, please?

He didn’t seem to suspect she was my mistress?

He did not. Why, he believed each and everything I told him.

(unconvinced) That is, you thought he did.

No, but he did.

Oh, Lord help me! It’s all over! But why am I wailing my life away here, and not going to the ship? (to Acanthio) Come along! (sets off down the street)

If you go that way, you’ll come plump and pat on your father. Then he’ll observe that you’re nervous and all upset: the next thing he’ll detain you, demand where you bought her, how much you bought her for—cross-examine you while you’re excited.

ACT II

ENTER Demipho, perplexed.

The Gods do make sport of us mortals in amazing ways! And amazing dreams they do send us in our sleep! Myself, for instance, just this past night—how I was hustled and hustled in my sleep! I seemed to have bought a beautiful she-goat. So that she might not be harmed by another she-goat I already had at home, and that they might not fall foul of each other if they were both in the same place, it seemed that after buying her I committed her to the care of a monkey.

Well, not long afterwards this monkey came over and heaped curses and abuse upon me: he said that, thanks to that she-goat and her arrival, he had let himself in for no end of disgrace and loss; that she-goat I had given him to keep for me, he maintained, had completely devoured his wife’s dowry. It seemed to me amazing that that one she-goat should devour the dowry of a monkey’s wife. But the monkey insisted she had, and this was his ultimatum—that unless I took her away from his house at once, he would take her into my own house to my wife.

And there I was, by Jove, seeming to have the tenderest sort of feeling for that she-goat, but without a soul to shelter her—which made my anguish, and anxiety as to what to do, all the greater, poor wretch! Meanwhile a kid, so it seemed, came up to me with the announcement that he had taken that she-goat away from the monkey, and began to laugh at me—for I was weeping and wailing at her abduction.

Now what this dream portends, I can't discover, except that, as to that she-goat, I suspect, I've already discovered what she is, or signified. For I went down to the harbour this morning at daybreak; after transacting the business I had in hand I suddenly spied the ship that brought my son from Rhodes yesterday, and for some unknown reason took a notion to go and look it over. Clambering into a boat, I was carried to the ship. And then (rapturously) I beheld a girl, a perfect beauty of a girl, brought here by my son to be his mother's maid! The minute I set eyes on her I fell in love—not as sane men do, but like a madman. Lord, Lord! I've been in love before, of course, when I was young, but never in any such mad way as this. Oh, Lord! One thing I do know now at any rate—it's all over with me! Oh well, see for yourselves what I am good for!

Now this is surely the way of it—the girl is that she-goat; but that monkey and kid, by Jove, are bringing me trouble, and who to say they are I don't know. (listening) But I must hush, for there's my neighbour coming out!

(after a moment's consideration) By Jove! It has just come to me what you mean: once a man gets old and reaches the senseless, witless stage, they do say he's apt to have a second childhood. Scene 3. ENTER CHARINUS, MUCH DEPRESSED.

r. (not seeing his father) There's no more miserable man alive than I am, I do believe, or one with more things eternally going against him. Isn't it a fact that nothing that I've set about can turn out for me and stay as I long to have it? Some confounded thing or other does always drop on me and botch my best laid plans! Here I had got myself the mistress that suited me, poor devil, and carried her off for cash, thinking I could have her unbeknown to my father. And now he has discovered it, and seen her, and done for me! And I haven't thought what to say when he questions me, what with the ten minds inside me all in confusion and conflict! What course to take now I can't conceive, I'm so worried and perplexed. At times my servant's plan suits me thoroughly; then again it doesn't suit me, and it seems impossible my father can be induced to think that such a girl was bought to be my mother's maid.

But supposing now I tell him how it really is and announce that I bought her for myself, what would he think of me? And as for her, why, he'd tear her away, transport her across the sea for sale! I know how harsh he is, and not from hearsay. So this is a lover's life? (bitterly) I'd prefer a ploughman's life to such a lover's life as this! He has already turned me out of his house once against my will, ordered me off on a trading trip. That's what got me into this mess! For what pleasure is there in a thing that brings you more grief than gratification? It was all for nothing I kept her close, concealed, under cover: my father's a regular fly—you can't keep anything from him, Quite so, sir, all the time—that is, while I was there; but on reaching port here I've somehow felt out of sorts.

(choking) Yes, sir.

So? And what do you think of her?

Why, really, sir, she is... not bad.

(severely) And her character?

I never saw a girl of better, sir, in my opinion.

So it seemed to me, too, by Jove, when I saw her. (affecting surprise) Oho! You saw her, father?

I saw her. But she won't do for us, she really isn't suitable.

(firmly) Don’t give her, and don’t say you’ve brought her.

(aside, delighted) I’m gradually making him waver!

(aloud) But I omitted to say—she’s hardly the proper sort of person to attend your mother, and I can’t permit it.

Indeed? Why not?

Because it would breed scandal for such a beauty to be the attendant of a wife and mother; when she passed through the streets all the men would eye her, ogle her, nod and wink and whistle, pinch her, accost her, annoy her; they would serenade the house and scrawl my doors black with their love ditties. And worse still—people are so slanderous nowadays—they would charge my wife and me with pandering. Now where’s the occasion for this?

(as though seeing a great light) By Jove, sir, you are quite right, and I agree with you! But what shall be done with her now?

(easily) That’s all right. I’ll buy your mother some big lusty wench, a good one, though not good looking, such as befits the mother of a family—some Syrian or Egyptian. She shall grind meal, cook, do her share of spinning, take her thrashings—a maid like that will bring no disgrace to our doors.

Dem. mavolo,
(after due reflection) How about returning my wench to the man I bought her of, then?
(hastily) Not for the world!
He agreed to take her back, if she didn't suit.
(with impressive dignity) There is no need of that: I want no dispute, no, no, nor to have your honour impugned. Good Lord! I much prefer to incur a loss, if I must, than to face opprobrium and the disgrace of throwing a woman out! (after cogitation) And I do believe I can sell her for you at a splendid figure.
(worried) Only . . . for heaven's sake, father . . . you mustn't . . . sell her for less than she cost me!
Hush, boy, hush! (confidentially) There's a certain old man who commissioned me to buy her—or a girl of her appearance.
(eagerly) But, father, a certain young man commissioned me to buy him a girl of precisely her appearance.
(momentously) I believe I could sell her for eighty pounds!
(triumphantly) But if I wanted to, why, I'm already offered a hundred and eight!
But I——
Why, I tell you, I——
(peeviously) See here! You don't know what I'm going to say! Do keep still! I can (turning and looking down the street) mint up twelve pounds more and make it a hundred and twenty.
Whom are you turning to?
To that buyer of mine.
(looking vainly) Where on earth is he?
There he is! I see him! He tells me to make it twenty pounds more this very moment!

(aside) Oh, damn! Heaven's curse on him, whoever he is!
There! There! He nods again, I am to add twenty-four pounds more!
(looking animatedly in the opposite direction) And my man says twenty-eight!
By Jove, he'll never beat me, never!
It's good honest coin he offers, father!
It's no use his offering! She's mine!
But his offer came first!
I don't care!
He's offering two hundred pounds!
He won't get her for four hundred! Can't you stop bidding against my earnest wishes? Good heavens! You'll make a tremendous haul! Why, the old man I'm buying her for is fairly crazed with love of her! You'll get your own price.
But that young man I'm buying her for—upon my soul, he's simply distracted, dying for love of her!
Lord, Lord, but that old man is much more so, if you only knew!
But, father, I swear that old man never, never was or will be more crazed from love than that young man I'm doing this for!
Be quiet, I tell you! I'll manage matters properly.
(after hard thinking) See here, father!
What is it?
I didn't take her with legal rights.
But he'll take her. Never you mind.
You can't sell her lawfully.
(untroubled) I'll find some way.
(desperate) Then, too, I own her in common with another man! How do I know how he feels, whether he wants her to be sold or not?

(floundering) But I swear I... believe there's some one who doesn't!

What does that matter to me?

Because he ought to have control of his own property.

What do you say——

(interrupting) I own her in common with him; and he isn't here now.

You answer before I ask!

And you buy before I sell, father! I don't know, I tell you, whether or not he's willing to have her disposed of.

What? Will he be willing, if she's bought for that "certain man" who commissioned you to get her, but unwilling, if I buy her for this man who commissioned me? Rubbish! By the Lord, never a soul shall have her in preference to the man I want her for!

(struggling with his emotions) Is that final, sir?

Don't you take it for final? Why, I'm going to the ship this instant, and there she'll be sold.

Do you want me to go with you?

I do not.

I don't like this, father!

You had better give those commissions of yours your first attention.

But you don't let me!

Well, lay the blame on me: say you did your best. You're not to go to the harbour, now mark my words.

You shall be obeyed, sir.

(wildly) Oh, this is death, death! They say the Bacchantes tore Pentheus to pieces! Ah, I do believe that was the merest nothing compared with the way I'm rent and riven! What have I to live for? Why not die? What joy is left in life for me? (pauses, then super-tragically) I will, I will! I'll to a doctor's and end it all with poison, now that I'm bereft of that which makes me long to live! (strides off)

ENTER Eutychus from Lysimachus's house.

Wait, Charinus, for heaven's sake, wait!

(without looking) Who calls me back?

Eutychus, your friend, your chum, yes, and your next-door neighbour!

(turning, still tragic) Ah, you know not what a flood of evils is upon me!
Yes I do; I overheard everything from the door-way, I know about it all.

What is it that you know?
Your father wants to sell——
You know it all!
——your mistress——

(startled) You know too much!
——against your will.

You know everything! But how know you that she is my mistress?
You told me about her yesterday, yourself.

(vacantly) Can it be I have forgotten that I told you?
That's nothing remarkable.
Te nunc consulo.

Bene vale.
(more tragic) I wish thy counsel now. Answer—by what death dost think I had best breathe my last?
Oh, shut up, won't you? Don't say a thing like that!
What wouldst thou that I say, then?
D'ye want me to bamboozle your father in fine shape?
(coming back to earth) Indeed I do!
D'ye want me to go to the harbour—- Go? Fly!
—and get the girl away by paying down her price?
Her price? Get her for her weight in gold!
Yes, but where's the gold?
I'll beg Achilles for the gold weighed out against the ransomed Hector!
(scrutinizing him) Do you feel normal?
Ah, me! If I did feel normal, I should not come to you for physic.
D'ye want me to buy her, no matter what he bids?
Oh, raise his bid, raise his best bid a hundred pounds!
Hush, man, hush! But see here—where will you get the money for payment when your father demands it?
(hysterically) Somewhere—anywhere, something shall be done! Oh, you're killing me!
Look here, I'm afraid of that "something."
Oh, can't you keep still?
(patiently) Your mute to command, sir.
Is your commission clear?
(confidently) Think of something else, can't you?
Impossible!
(turning to go) Good-bye, good-bye!

ACT III

(An hour has elapsed.)

ENTER Lysimachus, FOLLOWED BY Pasicompsa IN TEARS.

(pleased with himself) Well, I've done a friend a friendly turn—bought this piece of goods (indicating Pasicompsa) as my neighbour suggested. (to Pasicompsa) You're mine, my girl, so come along. (ogling her appreciatively) Don't weep: it's very silly of you to spoil such pretty eyes. Really now, you have more reason to laugh than to cry. Oh, you dear old gentleman, do be nice and tell me—

Ask anything you like.
— why you bought me.

Why I bought you? Why, so as to have you (amorously) do what you're bid, just as I would do your bidding.
(taking his hand, coyly) I'll certainly do what I think you like, to the very best of my ability and understanding, sir.
(smirking) I won't order you to do anything very hard.

Goodness, no, you dear old thing! For really, I never learned to carry anything heavy, or feed the flocks on a farm, or nurse children.
Bona si esse vis, bene erit tibi.

\(^1\) Corrupt (Leo): matura lamen aetate Leo.

\(^1\) Pasicompsa = altogether charming.
If you’ll be a good girl, you’ll have a good time.

(in feigned dismay) Oh dear! Then there’s no hope for poor me at all!
How’s that?

(archly) Because where I was brought from it’s usually the naughty girls who have a good time. That amounts to saying there’s no such thing as a good girl.

Oh, no indeed, I don’t say that; it’s not my way to announce a fact I think everyone’s familiar with.

(aside, delightedly) By gad, it’s worth more than she cost just to hear her prattle! (aloud) I want to ask you this one thing.

If you ask, I’ll answer.

Tell me—but what name shall I call you?

Pasiconpsa, sir.

(approvingly) Ah, a name given you for being so lovely! But tell me, (lingeringly) Pasiconpsa, if need arose, could you weave a fine woof?

I can, sir.

If you know how to weave a fine one, I know you can weave a coarser one.

At weaving, I’m not afraid of anyone of my own age. By Jove, you are a good girl, I do believe, and a useful girl, and plenty old enough, seeing you know how to do your duty, my lass.

Oh yes, sir, I’ve learned my lessons well. I won’t let anyone complain of my work.

Ah-h! That’s the way, by Jove! Now look here, I’ll give you a (pointing to Demipho’s house) sheep, a sheep sixty years old, for your very own.

As ancient as that, you dear old thing? Genuine Greek stock! If you take care of it, it will prove a very fine one, and you can shear it to perfection.
Honoris causa quidquid est quod dabitur gratum habebo.

I'll show my appreciation and be grateful for anything that's given me, sir. Now then, my girl, not to deceive you—you're not mine, don't think you are. Mercy me! Whose am I, then? You've been bought again for your own master. I did the buying, at his request. (thinking he means Charinus) Oh, I'm alive once more, if he keeps his word with me! Cheer up! He'll set you free, he will! Why, good Lord, he's dying for you, and to-day's the first time he ever saw you! Oh, sir, it's two years now since he began relations with me. I'll let you into our secret, now that I know you're a friend of his.

(astonished) What's that? Two years now he's had relations with you? Why, yes. And we promised each other solemnly, I him and he me, never to have a thing to do with any man or woman except our own two selves. Ye immortal gods! Won't he sleep with his own wife, even?

(with a start) Oh, my dear man, he isn't married?

(defiantly) He's not, and he won't be, either! Well, I wish he weren't! Lord, Lord, how he did lie!

There's no young man alive that I love more.

(quisically) He's a boy, a boy, silly! Really, you know, it's not long ago that his teeth dropped out.

(mystified) What's that about his teeth? Oh, nothing. (going towards his house) This way, please. He begged me to put you up for this one day, my wife being in the country.

ACT 2.

ENTER Demipho in high spirits.

At last I've claimed the privilege of going to the dogs! Here's a mistress bought, unbeknown to wife, unbeknown to son! I'll take up my old ways again, I certainly will, and be good to myself. Only a short space of life is left me, I'll sweeten it with pleasure and wine and love. Why, my age is just the proper season to have my fling. When you're young and your blood's fresh, that's the time to settle down to making your fortune; and then at last when you're old, why, that's the time to take your ease and enjoy your love affairs, while you can. For then each day of life is clear profit.

Now I propose to practise what I preach. Meanwhile, however, I'll just look in at home here: my wife has been hungrily awaiting me there this long while. (reflecting) Her tongue will do me to death in no time, once I'm back inside. (belligerently) But just the same, I tell you what, by Jove, for all that I'm—— (weakly) not going in. No, I'll see my neighbour here before I go back home; I want him to hire some house for me, for that girl to live in. (a noise at Lysimachus's door) Aha! There he is, coming out!

ACT 3.

ENTER Lysimachus.

(to Pasimpsa within) I'll bring him to you directly, if I come across him.

(aside) He means me.

(seeing him) I say, Demipho——

(tempestuously) Is the girl inside there?

(thoughtful) Well, what do you think?

(blithely) What if I have a look? (makes toward the door)

Look here now and listen to me, first: there's still something I think you should do first. Why, (ecstatically) Well, if you haven't got my mind in your body! You know just what I intend to do!

You'll be doing the wrong thing.

All the worse. Is a foul-breathed old goat like you to kiss a girl (emphatically) on an empty stomach? D'ye want to turn her stomach the moment you come near her? Gad! I see what a lover you are when you announce such intentions!

(crestfallen, then hopefully) Well, what if I attend to this then? If you think best, let's capture some cook to cook us up a meal here at your house against the evening.

(his hopes realized) There! I do think that best. Now you're talking in a wise and loverly way.

(impatient) Well, why stand here? Let's go, then, and see to our marketing, and make a beautiful day of it. (going) stay at my house a bit longer than to-day. I'm afraid of my wife's popping in on her, if she comes back from the country to-morrow.

That's all arranged! Come along! [EXEUNT.

ENTER Charinus, much wrought up.

Oh, I'm miserable! I can't be comfortable anywhere! If I'm at home, my thoughts are out; and if I'm out, my thoughts are at home! Such flames of love as my heart and breast are in! If it weren't for the protection of my tears, I do believe my head would be ablaze by now. (sublimely) My hope is all I cling to; my life I've allowed to go—whether to return or no, I know not! If my father crushes me by doing what he said, my life has left for exile; but if my chum has fulfilled his promise, my life is left for me. (pauses, then petulantly) But even if Eutychus had the gout, he could have got back from the harbour by this time. That's a terrible failing of his—being so awfully slow, in comparison with my heart's desire. (looking down the street) But is that he, that man I see running? It is, it is! I'll go meet him! Oh, he's stopping! Now I'm lost, lost! I don't like that look of his at all! That slow step! That gloomy air! Oh, my heart's on fire! I'm caught! He's shaking his head! (calling) Oh, Eutychus!

ENTER Eutychus.

(dejectedly) Oh, you Charinus! (beside himself) Before you get your breath—just one word, out with it! Where am I? Here, or with the dead?
Neither with the dead, nor here.

Nowhere at all.

Oh, damnation! Those words have killed me!

Too much talk in time of action does make words wearisome.

Whatever it is, come to the main points!

First of all—we’re done for.

(bitterly) Why don’t you tell me some news I don’t know, instead?

The girl has been taken away from you.

(tragic) Eutychus, you are committing a capital crime!

Eh? How so!

I am your comrade and your chum, a free born citizen, and now you murder me!

Heaven forbid!

You have thrust a sword into my throat! Ere long I’ll fall!

Now, now, for heaven’s sake, don’t lose courage!

I have none to lose! Tell me more, more of my misery! For whom was she bought?

I don’t know. She had already been auctioned off and taken away when I reached the harbour.

MERCATOR

upon me! Go on, go on, rack me, torture me, now that you've once begun!\(^1\)
I? What have I done?
You've destroyed me, and, with me, all my confidence in you!
God knows it's no fault of mine!
(savagely) Bravo! Calling God to witness, when He's not here! How can I believe your words? Because your beliefs are in your own control, as my words are in mine.
You're ready enough in repartee, but in carrying out commissions you're a lame, blind, mute, maimed remnant of a man! You promised to bamboozle my father—and I, I believed I had left the matter to an intelligent human being, only to find I left it to a great big block of stone!
(patently) What could I do?
What could you do? You ask me that? You could have investigated, inquired who he was or where he came from, who his family were, whether he was a citizen or an alien!
They said he was an Athenian citizen.
You might at least have found out where he lived, if not his name.

\(^1\) vv. 619-624:
I've been just as much harassed as you are by it, I certainly have.
Tell me, who bought her?
Upon my soul, I don't know.
Look at that! Is that the way to help a good friend?
What do you want me to do?
The same thing you see me doing—die! Why didn't you ask what the man who bought her looked like, and see if she could be traced that way? Oh dear, oh dear!
Do stop crying—the one thing you do do at present!
Nemo aiebat scire.
    At saltem hominis faciem exquireres.

No one seemed to know.
But at least you might have inquired about his appearance!
I did.
Well, then, what did they say he looked like?
I'll tell you—a gray-haired, knock-kneed, pot-bellied, big-mouthed, stubby fellow, with blackish eyes, lantern jaws, and feet a bit splayed.
That's no description of a man, it's some collection of freaks! Can't you tell me anything else about him?
That's all, so far as I know.
Lord, Lord! He has done anything but light my life with his lantern jaws! (in another tragic flight)
What makes you think of taking such a step as that?
Ah, because I suffer so from love!
But see here! When you reach the place you're about to go to, suppose love happens to overtake you there, and you still can't gratify it, will you then proceed to fly that place, too, and the next place as well, if the same thing happens again? Really now, what end will there be to your exile, what finish to your flight? What land or home can you ever call your own? Answer me that.
Look now, if you leave this city, do you think you'll leave your love behind you here? If you're absolutely assured of this, sure, sure as a man can be, how much better for you to go off into the country somewhere and stay there, live there, till your desire and love for this girl lose their grip on you?

(grimly) Have you finished talking?

I have.

You have talked in vain. This is my fixed intention. I shall go home to pay my respects to my father and mother, and then without my father's knowledge I shall flee this country, or (darkly) settle upon some plan!

[exit precipitately into house.

(looking after him) Well, that was a sudden start and exit! This is awful! Why, if he leaves home, everyone will say it came of my being such a slacker. (after a moment's thought) I'll do it, I'll hire all the public criers I can get to follow her up and find her! Next I'll pounce on the praetor and beg him to furnish me officers to search every quarter of the city. Yes, yes, that's the only resource left me now, I see! [exit.

ACT IV

ENTER Dorippa, irate.

Having got word at the farm from my husband that he didn't intend to go out there, I've acted upon my womanly instinct and come back, to pursue the man that flees me. (looking about) But I don't see our old Syra with me. Ah, there she comes at last, plodding along! (sharply) Why don't you hurry up?

MERCATOR

ENTER Syra laboriously, carrying a few parcels.

Mercy me, ma'am, I can't, with all this load upon me.
What load?
My eighty years and four, ma'am; with slavery, sweat, and thirst thrown in. These things I'm carrying weigh me down, too.

(glancing at the altar in front of Demipho's house)
Give me something for an offering on our neighbour's altar here. (as Syra fumbles at her parcels)
Yes, yes, let me have this laurel branch. (taking it) You go on in.
Yes, ma'am.

(EXIT. (at the altar) Apollo, I beseech thee, graciously grant thy favour, and safety and sound health, to our family, and may'st thou spare my son with thy gracious favour.

RE-ENTER Syra in consternation.

Oh, Lord, help us, Lord pity us! Oh, oh, this is terrible!
For heaven's sake, are you in your senses? What are you shrieking about?
Oh, Dorippa, my poor Dorippa!
For heaven's sake, what are you howling about?
There's some strange woman in the house here, ma'am!

(startled) What? A woman?
A hussy!
Really and truly?
Ah, ma'am, you showed good sense in not staying at the farm! Any fool could plainly perceive she's the mistress of that charming husband of yours.
Credo mecastor.

MERCATOR

My heavens, I do believe so!

(leading her toward the door) Just you come this way with me, so as to see your rival, Alcmena, for yourself, Juno mine!

Goodness me, indeed I will, just as fast as I can go!

[Exeunt into house.

2. ENTER Lysimachus, out of temper.

Isn’t it bad enough for Demipho to be in love, without his being so extravagant, to boot? Why, if he’d invited a dozen dignitaries to dinner, the food he bought would be excessive. But the way he kept exhorting the cooks, just as a coxswain does his crew! I hired a cook myself. (looking about) But I wonder why he doesn’t come, as I told him. (listening) But who can that be coming out of our house? The door’s opening. (withdraws)

3. ENTER Dorippa much agitated.

Oh, there’ll never be, never was, a more wretched woman than I am, to be married to such a man! Oh, dear me, dear me! Just see to what a husband you may entrust yourself and all you own! Just see to what a man I brought two thousand pounds in dowry, only to witness such sights, to suffer such insults!

(aside) Ye gods, I’m in for it! My wife’s back from the farm already! I’ll bet she saw that girl in the house! But I can’t catch what she says from here. I’ll get closer. (does so)

Oh, heaven help me!

(aside, feelingly) No, no, me!

I’m lost, lost!

(aside) Oh Lord! I'm the one that's lost and lost for good, confound it! She has seen her. May all the powers above consume you, Demipho!
Yes, indeed! This is the reason why my husband didn't want to go to the farm.
(aside) What can I do now but step up and speak to her? (approaching and addressing her with playful courtliness) Greetings from your husband to his wife, my dear! Have our rusties become city folk?
(hottly) They act with more decency than those who have not become rustics.
Our own rusties haven't misbehaved, have they?
Less than our city folk, mercy me, yes! And they do much less looking for trouble!
Well, well, but how have the city folk misbehaved? Tell me. By Jove, I'm eager to know.
You're simply sounding me, and you know it.
(viciously) Whose woman is that inside there?
(tentatively) You . . . saw her, eh?
I did.
And you . . . ask whose she is?
(turning away indignantly) I shall discover, just the same!
You want me to . . . say whose she is? She . . . by Jove, she . . . (aside) Damnation! I don't know what to say!
You're stuck!
(aside) I never saw a man more so!
Well, why don't you say?
Well, if I only had a chance—
You should have said it already.
(desperate) I can't, the way you keep at me; you hound me as if I were guilty!
(ironically) Oh, of course, you're not guilty!
You can say that with absolute assurance.

You say, then.
I will say.
But say it as it should be said, though.
She is . . . do you want her name, too?
What trifling! I've caught you red-handed in your guilt!
What guilt? Really now, that girl is . . . the girl that—What girl?
The girl . . .
Whose girl?
(badly flustered) Now— (on a new tack) if it weren't necessary, I shouldn't tell you at present.
You don't know who the girl is?
(suddenly illumined) Oh yes, now I know: I was made an arbitrator in her case.
An arbitrator? (drily) Now I know, too: so you've summoned her for a conference with you.
No, no, it's this way—she was left with me for safe-keeping.
(witheringly) I understand!
I swear it's nothing of that sort at all!
You absolve yourself too soon.
(aside) This is more than I can manage! I am stuck, to be sure!

Scene 4. Enter a cook, his assistants following at a distance and staggering under baskets of provisions.

(calling to assistants) Come, step along, stir yourselves! I've got to get up a dinner for an old gallant. On second thoughts, though, it's to be got up for ourselves, not for the chap that hired us. For if a lover has the girl he loves, he has his food—looking, caressing, kissing, chatting.

But as for us, I trust we'll go back home well loaded. (approaching Lysimachus's house) Come on, this way. (seeing Lysimachus) Aha, though! There's the old fellow that hired us. (the assistants trail in) (seeing them) Damnation! Will you look at that! Here's the cook!

(cheerfully) We've got here, sir.
(in a low tone) Get out!

What? Get out?
Sh-h! Get out!

Get out?
Get out!

You're not to have a dinner?
We've had our fill already.

But—

Oh, this is dreadful!

See here, sir! Is all this (indicating provisions) brought you, too, by order of the parties you were made arbitrator for?

(to Lysimachus) Is this your lady friend you told me you were in love with, a while ago when you were marketing?

(in agony) Shut up, can't you? (Dorippa comes closer)

A rather well-made wench, too! (confidentially)
But, my word, she is amuating!
Get to the devil out of here, will you?

(soothingly) She's not bad.
But you are!

By gad, I'll bet she makes a fine bedfellow!
Oh, won't you get out? I'm not the man that hired you a while ago!

Eh? What? None of that! By gad, you're the one, all right.

Yes, to me, by gad.
(to Dorippa, solemnly) So help me Heaven, my dear, I never said any such thing!
(icyly) You really deny it? It's perfectly plain that you do hate me.
I deny it, I tell you!
(to Dorippa in apparent guilelessness) No, no, ma'am, he didn't say he hated you, but his wife; and he said she was in the country.
(desperately) This lady is my wife. What makes you pester me?
Because you deny knowing me—but perhaps you're afraid of her.
(to Dorippa, placatingly) Which is wise of me, for she's my one and only.
D'ye want to try me?
(angrily) I do not!
Give me my pay.
Come for it to-morrow; you'll get it. And now get out!
(in tears) Oh dear me, dear me!
(aside) I'm proving the truth of that old proverb now: "A bad neighbour brings bad luck."
(to attendants) Why stand here? Come on, let's go.
(to Lysimachus, sweetly) If any harm has happened, it's no fault of mine.
(forlorn) Oh, damn it, man, you're eradicating me!

house) But as for you, neighbour, may all the powers above consume and rot you, you and your mistress and your amours together! The outrageous way he has swamped me with suspicions, stirred up enemies in my own household! (plainly) And my wife makes such a ferocious enemy! (after cogitation) I’ll go to the forum and tell Demipho flat that I’ll drag that girl into the street by the hair of her head, unless he takes her wherever he likes out of this house. (going, then noticing the provisions and calling at the door) Oh, my dear! I say, my dear! No matter if you are angry at me, you’d do well to have this stuff brought inside. We can use it bye-and-bye to improve our dinner.

ENTER Syra.

Where mistress sent me, to her father—he’s not at home: they said he’d gone to the country. So now I’m back to tell her.

ENTER Eutychus.

I’m all tired out with searching the whole city; and not a single trace of that girl can I find. (glancing towards his house) But my mother’s back from the country, for I see Syra standing in front of the house. (calling) Syra!
(without looking) Who’s calling me?
The master that you nursed.
Oh, bless your heart, my dear child!
Is my mother back from the farm already? (as Syra hesitates) Answer me.
(significantly) And a very good thing for herself and family that she is!
(noticing her manner) What’s the trouble?
Tuos pater bellissimus amicam adduxit intro in aedis.

MERCATOR

That most winsome father of yours has introduced his mistress into the house.

(amazed) How's that?

On arriving from the country your mother discovered her at home.

Good heavens! I never supposed my father was that sort? Is the woman still inside?

She is.

(hurrying to the door) Come along!

[EXIT INTO HOUSE.

My, my! Women do live under hard conditions, so much more unfair, poor things, than the men's. Why, if a husband has brought home some strumpet, unbeknown to his wife, and she finds it out, the husband goes scot free. But once a wife steps out of the house unbeknown to her husband, he has his grounds and she's divorced. Oh, I wish there was the same rule for the husband as for the wife! Now a wife, a good wife, is content with just her husband; why should a husband be less content with just his wife? Mercy me, if husbands, too, were taken to task for wenching on the sly, the same way as wanton wives are divorced, I warrant there'd be more lone men about than there now are women!

[EXIT INTO HOUSE.

ACT V.

ENTER Charinus from his father's house, in travelling dress, with sword and luggage.

(melodramatically, as he turns toward the house) Lintel and threshold, hail, aye, and likewise fare you well! To-day for the last time do I lift this nam ubi mores deteriores increbrescunt in dies, foot from my paternal home. The use and enjoyment, the sustenance and nurture of this roof are now cut off from me, estranged from me, killed for me! I am dead, dead! Ye Penates of my parents, father Lar of this abode, to you I commit the fortunes of my parents that ye guard them well. For myself other Penates, another Lar, another city, another country, will I seek: Athens I abhor! Aye, for where vice grows more rampant day by day, where the friendly and the faithless are indistinguishable, where that which most delights your soul is ravished from you—there, even though a throne be offered me, I could never desire to dwell!

ENTER Eutychus, exuberant, from his father's house.

(not seeing Charinus) Oh, thou who dost view both gods and men, yea, and dost dominate mankind, forasmuch as thou hast fulfilled the hope of my heart, I thank thee! Ah, is there any god happy as I am happy now? That which I sought for was at home! Six comrades have I found—life, friendship, country, joy, jubilation, and jollity; and by finding them I have simultaneously banished the worst of banes—ire, enmity, grief, tears, exile and want.¹ May God grant me a speedy meeting with him!

(to audience) I am all equipped, as you see. My pride I abandon. I myself am my own attaché and attendant, my own steed and groom and squire; I myself am my own commanding officer, and likewise my own subaltern, and I myself am

Thou dost ill to delay me when I am in haste. The sun is setting. You would do better to make the same haste in this direction as you do in that. A fair wind blows in this quarter now. Come, come! About ship! Here you have a clear western breeze, there a rainy southern blast; the one brings calm, the other raises all the billows. Make for shore here, Charinus! Do you not see how on your bows black clouds and rain storms lower? Cast your eyes to larboard—see you not how the sky is all aglow and Heaven bids you turn your course thither?

He has filled me with awe! I'll back! (turns, faltering)
You do wisely. (hurrying toward him) Ah, Charinus! Come, do your part, come meet me, come this way! Stretch out your arm!

Take it! (faintly as Eutychus supports him) Dost hold it now?
I do.

Keep holding it!
Where were you going just now?
Into exile.
To do what there?
What a wretched man should do.
(cheerfully) Have no fear; I'll soon restore you to your former joy in life. You shall hear what you most want to hear, what should make you happy. Your sweetheart—

What of her?
I know where she is.

Safe and sound!

Safe? Where?

(teasingly) I know.

I had rather know, myself!

Can’t you be of calm mind?

But what if my mind’s in turmoil?

I’ll bring it where there’s calm, restful and secure; never you fear.

For heaven’s sake, hurry, tell me where she is, where you saw her? Why are you dumb? Speak! You’ll be the death of me with your damnable closeness!

She’s not far away from us here. (looks down the street)

(following his eyes) Why don’t you point her out to me, then, if you see her?

By Jove, I don’t see her now, but I did see her a moment ago.

(a-quiver) Why don’t you let me see her?

I will.

“Will” is a long, long time to a lover!

Still afraid? Well, I’ll tell you all about it.

(pauses, then doubtfully) I haven’t a better friend living than the man who has her, one who has a better claim to my best wishes.

I don’t care about him: it’s about her I’m asking! Well, then, it’s about her I’m telling you. It really didn’t occur to me a while ago to tell you where she was.

Tell me now, then! Where is she?

(after prolonging the suspense) In . . . our house.

(ecstatic) Oh, excellent house, if you speak true! Exquisitely constructed, I consider! But how can I believe that? Did you see her, or is your news mere hearsay?
Eut. Egomet vidi.
Char. Quis eam adduxit ad vos?
Eut. Vt inique rogas.
Char. quid tua refert, qui eum istae venerit?

Eut. Em, nunc tu mihi places.

Char. ficere exsequar.
Eut. Non mihi credis?
Char. Omnia equidem credo quae dicis mihi.
Char. sed quin intro ducis me ad cam, ut videam?
Eut. Paulisper mane.
Char. Quid manebo?
Eut. Tempus non est intro eundi.
Char. Enicas.
Eut. Non opus est, inquam, nunc intro te ire.
I saw her, myself.

Who took her to your people?

A very unfair question! What does it matter to you who came with her?

Provided she’s there! (anxiously) You’re telling the truth?

Charinus, you haven’t the vestige of a sense of shame. Of course she’s there.

Then in return for this news, ask for anything you like!

What if I do ask for it?

(laughing hysterically) Well, pray God you’ll get it!

(tolerantly) Wag!

Only let me set eyes on her, and all’s well! But I must get out of this rig! (shouting at his door)

Hey, someone! Come out here, quick, and bring me a mantle! (strips off his travelling coat)

There! Now you suit me.

ENTER A SLAVE WITH MANTLE.

Just in time, my lad! Here, catch this coat (passing it over with his sword and luggage, and putting on the mantle) and stay right where you are, so that (glaring at Eutychus and relapsing into melodrama) if this news be false, I may continue and complete the journey I had begun!

You don’t believe me?

(suspiciously) I believe all you tell me, oh, of course. But why don’t you take me in to see her?

(embarrassed) Do wait a little while.

Why wait?

This isn’t the right moment to go in.

You’re killing me!

It’s not advisable for you to go in just now, I tell you.
Char. Responde mihi, qua causa?

Eut. Operae non est.
Char. Cur?
Eut. Quia non est illi commodum.
Char. Itane? commodum illi non est, quae me amat, quan ego contra amo? omnibus hic ludificatur me modis. ego stultior, qui isti credam. commoratur. chlamydem sumam denuo.
Eut. Mane parumper atque haec audi.
Char. Cape sis, puere, hoc pallium.
Eut. Mater irata est patri vehementer, quia scortum sibi ob oculos adduxerit in aedis, dum ruri ipsa abest: suspicatur illam amicam esse illi.
Sonam sustuli.
Eut. Eam rem nunc exquirit intus. Iam machaerast in manu.
Char. Nam si eo ted intro ducam—
Eut. Tollo ampullam atque hinc eo.
Char. Mane, mane, Charine.
Erras, me decipere haud potes.
Eut. Neque edepol volo.
Char. Quin tu ergo itiner exsequi meum me sinis?
Eut. Non sino.
Char. Egomet me moror. tu puere, abi hinc intro ocius.
iam in currum escendi, iam lora in manus cepi meas.
For what reason? Answer me!
There's no time for it.

Why?
Because it's not convenient for her.

(indignant) So? Not convenient for her—the girl that loves me, the girl that I love, too?
(pauses, then wildly, with a sly glance at Eutychus)
A pretty dance this fellow leads me! The more fool I, to trust him! (turning to the slave) He delays me! I'll on with my cloak again! (removes his mantle).

Do wait a minute and listen to me!

Here, boy, kindly take this mantle! (passes it over and dons his travelling cloak)

My mother's in a terrible rage at my father for having brought a wench into the house right before her face, while she was in the country. She suspects her of being his mistress.

(taking articles from slave, one by one) Ah, my belt! (puts it on).

And she's investigating the matter inside there now.

(growing wilder) Now I have my sword in hand!

(alarmed) You see, if I should take you in—

Aha! My flask! And now I go! (strides away)

(running after him) Wait, Charinus, wait!

You miscalculate, you cannot deceive me!

Good heavens, no! Nor do I want to!

Then why dost not permit me to continue on my journey?

(clutching him) I won't permit you!

I delay myself! (to slave) You, boy! Inside with you, quick, be off!

[EXIT Slave.

(tearing himself away, apparently frenzied) Now have I mounted my car! Now have I reins in hand!

But she's at home!

For what this man hath said is but a lie!

I've told you the truth, really I have!

Now am I come to Cyprus!

(succumbing in his alarm for Charinus's sanity and going towards his door) Come on, follow me, and see the girl you're after!

(hiding a smile) I have asked for her, but found her not!

I'll disregard my mother's anger now!

I'll pursue my search still further! Now have I reached Chalcis! There I see a host of mine from Zacynthus; I tell him what has brought me thither, and inquire if he has heard it rumoured who carried her there and who possesses her.

(at his door) Why don't you drop that nonsense and step inside with me?

My host replies that at Zacynthus they grow figs, not bad ones.

That's no lie.

But as for my sweetheart, he affirms that rumours reached him that she is (winking covertly at the audience) here in Athens!

That Zacynthian is a perfect Calehas.¹

That's true, what he says.

Well, you're the man he says it to.

(to Demipho) This makes it all the more true. Why, the impropriety in a man of your age to seize his son's sweetheart, when he's young, and loves her, and had bought her with his own money!

What's that? She the sweetheart of Charinus?

Oh dear me! This is awful!
That sort of thing is more commonly attended to by the young fellows.

you, and don’t let him be angry with me! Good heavens, if I had known, or if he had told me even jokingly that he was in love with her, I’d never have done such a thing as to deprive him of the girl he loved. Eutychus, I beseech you—you’re his chum—save me, stand by me! Do take an old fellow under your protection; you’ll say I remember a kindness.

(tittering) Beg him to overlook the vagaries of your hot young blood.

(angry) So you’re still keeping it up? Ugh! The superior way you drop on me! I only hope I get some such opportunity, too, to pay you back in your own coin!

I have abandoned such pranks by this time.

(fervently) And I, too, from this time on!

It’s no use: long self-indulgence will lead you back to them.

Oh, for heaven’s sake, make an end now! Come on, whip me raw, too, if you like.

A happy thought! But your wife will attend to that, when she learns about this.

(quaking) There’s no need of her learning!

(doubtful, then patronizingly) Oh, very well. She shan’t learn of it, don’t be scared. Let’s go inside: this is not a fit place to discuss your doings for the enlightenment of passers-by.

Yours is the happy thought, I swear! And that will shorten this play, as well. Let’s go.

Your son’s inside here with us.

Excellent! We’ll go home across the garden there.

Yes, yes, I believe you, but . . . I am awfully afraid.

Let’s go inside.

No! (to the audience) I move that before we go we frame a law for old men to keep and be kept by. (formally) Whatsoever man, having attained his sixtieth year, be he married or—yes, by gad!—be he celibate, shall be known to us to wench, with such man we shall deal in accordance with this law: we shall deem him a dotard, and we do swear, that, so far as in us lies, he who wastes his substance shall come to want. Nor is anyone hereafter to prevent his youthful son from having love affairs and mistresses, within due bounds. Such prevention shall cost him more privily than would open provision of the funds required. And furthermore, old men are to be subject to this law from this night on.

Fare ye well. And hark ye, young men, if this law please you, for the old men’s sake, I swear, you should applaud us roundly. [exeunt omnes.]

ARGUMENT OF THE PLAY (I)

A soldier carries off a courtesan from Athens to Ephesus. Her lover's servant, intending to bring this news to his master, who is abroad on an embassy, is himself captured at sea and given as a gift to that same soldier. Having summoned his master from Athens, he secretly opens a passage in the party wall of the two houses so that the lovers may be allowed to meet. The girl's guard sees them as he is roaming over the roof. But he is hoaxed and humbugged into believing her to be another girl. Palaestrio also induces the soldier to give up his mistress on the score that the wife of the old gentleman next door yearns to marry him. The soldier begs the girl to leave him voluntarily, and lavishes presents on her. Then he himself is caught in the old gentleman's house and comes in for punishment as an adulterer.

ARGUMENT OF THE PLAY (II)

A young Athenian and a free-born courtesan were madly in love with each other; but he left home on an embassy to Naupactus. A soldier falls in with the girl, and against her will carries her off to Ephesus. The Athenian's servant sets sail to inform his master of this fact; he is captured, however, and as a captive is presented to that same soldier. He writes to his master to

The servant opens up the wall between the houses so that the lovers may have a private passage way. He pretends that the girl's twin sister has come. Then the master of the house provides Palaestrio with a protegée of his own to cajole the soldier. He is taken in, hopes to marry, dismisses his mistress, and is flogged as an adulterer.

(contemplating his sword) Verily would I comfort this blade of mine, lest he lament and pine at lingering idle by my side so long, when he doth long, poor lad, to slash to shreds our foemen. (halting) But whereabout here is Artotrogus?
Artotrogus (popping out from behind, with a covert wink at the orderlies) Here, sir, beside our hero bold and blest and of princely bearing! While as a warrior—Mars would not presume to call himself your peer, or match his powers with yours.

I remember, sir. Of course you mean that one with the golden armour whose legions you puffed away with a breath, much as the wind does with leaves, or a thatch roof?

Begad, sir! It really was a mere nothing compared with other deeds I could mention—(aside) that you never did. (to audience, disgustedly, as the soldier stalks magnificently about) If anyone ever saw a bigger liar and more colossal braggart than this fellow, he can have me for his own with full legal rights. (reflectively) But there’s one thing about it—his olive compote does make elegant eating. (turning, expecting to find Artotrogus at his heels) Where are you?
(hopping over behind him) Here, sir! And that elephant in India, for instance! My word, sir! How your fist did smash his forearm to flinders!
Eh? Arm?
His foreleg, I should say, sir.
'Twas but a careless tap.
Lord, yes, sir! If you had really made an effort, your arm would have clean transperforated the beast, hide, flesh, bone, and all.
Enough now of these trifles.
Bless your soul, sir, it really isn’t worth while to recount your daring deeds to me who know of them. (to audience, as Pyrgopolynices resumes his parade) It’s my belly brings all these afflictions on me—I must 'ear him through with my ears, or my teeth will have nothing to teethe on. I’ve got to agree to any lie he tells.

Aha, sir! I know what it was already! By Jove, sir, so you did! I remember you did!
Did what?

It behooves me to study and understand your ways, sir, and to take care to scent your wishes before you speak.

Indeed I do, sir. (calculating) One hundred and fifty in Cilicia . . . . a hundred in . . . .
Jugotheevia . . . . thirty Sardians . . . . sixty Macedonians—that's the list of the men you slew in a single day, sir.
The sum total being what?
Seven thousand, sir.
(reflecting) Yes, it should come to that. Your computation is correct.
I have none of it written down, either, sir. Even so, I remember, just the same.
Upon my soul, you have a splendid memory.

Provided you conduct yourself as hitherto, you shall eat incessantly, and always share my table with me.
(reinvigorated) And how about that time in Cappadocia, sir, when you would have slain five hundred men all at one stroke, if your sword had not been dull?
Ah, well, they were but beggarly infantry fellows, so I let them live.
Why should I tell you, sir, what the whole world knows—that you are the one and only Pyrgopoleynes on earth, peerless in valour, in aspect, and in doughty deeds? All the women love you, sir, and you can't blame them, when you're so handsome. Those girls, for instance, that caught me from behind by the cloak, only yesterday.

(with laborious unconcern) What did they say to you?
They kept asking about you, sir. "Is he Achilles?" says one of 'em. "No, his brother," says I. "Goodness gracious! That's why he's such a fine, handsome gentleman," says the other one. "Just see what lovely hair he has. My! but the girls that cuddle him are lucky!"
(giving his cloak a rakish hitch) So they really said that, eh?
Well, sir, didn't the both of them implore me to lead you past there to-day, just as if you were a parade?
(trying to yawn) It really is such an affliction to be so handsome.
Yes, indeed, sir. The women are a nuisance, with their teasing, soliciting, exsupplicating me to let 'em see you, and sending for me so much that I can't attend to your affairs, sir.
(with an effort) Well, it seems to be time for us to go to the forum, so that I may pay the recruits whom I enlisted here yesterday. King Seleucus, you know, begged me most urgently to raise and enrol recruits for him. I have determined to devote this day to obliging the king.
Come, then, sir, let us be going.
(to orderlies) Attend me, minions! (sweeps off; Artotrogus and the orderlies mimicking his stately pace).

he who does not care to listen may arise and leave, so that there may be a seat for him who does. (pauses, with a glare ready for fugitives)

Now as to the reason for your assembling in this place of mirth, I shall acquaint you with the plot and name of the comedy we are about to act. The Greek name of this comedy is Alazon, a word which we translate as Braggart. This town is Ephesus. That soldier who left here for the forum is my master, a bragging, brazen, stercoraceous fellow, full of lies and lechery. He says that all the women insist on running after him. The fact is, wherever he struts, he is the laughing-stock of them all. Why, the harlots here make such faces at him, that most of them, you can see, have bowlegged lips. (tries to laugh contagiously)

Now I have not been serving long in his service, myself; and I want you to know how I came to be his servant and left my former service. Attention, please, for now I begin with the plot.

I had a master at Athens, a splendid young gentleman. He was madly in love with a courtesan in Athens, Athens in Attica, and she with him—which is the sweetest kind of love affair to have. Now he was sent as a public commissioner to Naupactus on a matter of public importance. This soldier, meanwhile, chancing to come to Athens, wormed his way into an acquaintance with that mistress of my master, and began to wheedle her mother with his wine and gewgaws and costly catering, till he got to be on very good terms with the old bawd there. But the moment his chance came our soldier played a game on the bawd—the mother of the girl my master loved ego quantum vivos possom mihi navem paro, ubi sumus proveeti in altum, fit quod di volunt, epiunt praedones navem illam ubi veetus fui:

prius perii quam ad erum veni, quo ire oceperam.
ille qui me cepit dat me huic dono militi.
hic postquam in aedis me ad se deduxit domum, video illam amicam erilem, Athenis quae fuit.
ubi contra aspexit me, oculis mihi signum dedit, ne se appellarem; deinde, postquam occasio est, conqueritur mecum mulier fortunas suas:
ait sese Athenas fugere cupere ex hac domu, sese illum amare meum erum, Athenis qui fuit, neque peins quemquam odisse quam istum militem.
egó quoniam inspexi mulieris sententiam, nam et venit et is in proximo hie devertitur isque illi amanti suo hospiti morem gerit itaque ego paravi hic intus magnas machinas, qui amantis una inter se faceorem convenas.

nam unum conclave, concubinae quod dedit miles, quo nemo nisi eapse inferret pedem, in eo conclavi ego perfodi parietem,
—by spiriting away her daughter, clapping her aboard ship, and carrying her off to Ephesus here against her will.

As for me, when I learned my master's mistress had been carried away from Athens, I got me a ship as fast as I knew how, and embarked to take the news to my master at Naupactus. Once out at sea, the gods saw fit for pirates to capture the ship that carried me. There I was, dished, before I had reached the master I was bound for!

My captor made this soldier a present of me. On being taken to his house by him, whom did I see but that sweetheart of master's who had been at Athens! When she spied me in front of her, she signalled me with her eyes not to speak her name; and then, when a chance came, she told me how unhappy she was, saying she longed to escape from this house to Athens, loving that man who had been my master at Athens as she did, and loathing no one worse than that soldier.

When I perceived how she felt, I got some tablets, sealed a letter, and gave it on the sly to a certain merchant to carry to that master of mine who had lived at Athens and loved her, so as to get him here. The message was not disregarded by him, for here he is, and in this house next door, too, (pointing) stopping with a friend of his father's, a delightful old gentleman, who is seconding his guest in his love affair and giving us every encouragement and help in word and deed. In consequence, I have got up a splendid scheme inside here for letting the lovers meet and be together. You see the soldier gave his girl one room in which no one but herself was to set foot, and I dug a hole through the wall of this room, so providing a secret passage for her from this house (pointing) into that one. And this with the old gentleman's knowledge—in fact, at his suggestion. Now, the fellow-servant of mine that the soldier set on guard over the girl is no good at all. What with our clever hocus-pocus and canny flimflam, we shall throw dust in his eyes and make him fail to see what he does see. And just to keep you from confusion later on, this girl (pointing to the soldier's house) will soon take the parts of two girls, appearing as one from this house, and one from (pointing to the house of Periplectomenus) that—the same girl, mind you, but pretending to be another one. That is how her guard will be made game of. (listening and looking) But I hear a noise at our old neighbour's door! He is coming out, himself. (to audience) This is that delightful old gentleman I was speaking of. (steps aside)

Periplectomenus (to slaves within) By the Lord, if after this you don't break the legs of every outsider you see on our roof, I'll make rawhide of your ribs! The idea of my neighbours witnessing what goes on in my house by looking in through the skylight in that way! Now mark my words, all of you! Whoever you see from that soldier's house on our roof, with the one exception of Palaestrio, pitch him off into the street! And as for his saying he's chasing a hen, or a dove, or a monkey—you're dead men, if you don't cudgel him till he's a corpse. And furthermore, just to keep them from breaking the Dicing Act, see to it that when they give a party there's not a set of bones amongst 'em!
Nescio quid malefactum a nostra hie familiast, quantum audio:

Estne avorsum hie qui advenit Palaestrio?

Quid agis, Periplectomene?

Res palamst.

Quae res palamst?

De tegulis modo nescio quis inspectavit vestrum familiarium per nostrum impluvium intus apud nos Philocomasium atque hospitem osculantis.

Quis homo id vidit?

Tuos conservos.

Quis is homost?

Nescio, ita abripuit repente sese subito.

Suspicor me perissse.

Vbi abit, conclamo: "heus quid agis tu" inquam "in tegulis?"
ille mihi abiens ita respondit "se sectari simiam."

Vae mihi misero, quoi pereundumst propter nihil bestiam.
sed Philocomasium hicine etiam nunc est?

Quom exibam, hic erat.
(aside) Someone from our house has been up to some mischief or other, I take it, since our old friend commands 'em to crush my fellow-servants' bones. He excepted me, though. Little I care what he does to the rest of 'em. I'll up to him.

(advances)

(seeing him) Isn't that Palaestrio coming towards me?

How goes it, Periplectomenus, sir?

There aren't many men I had rather see and meet now than you, if I had my choice.

What's the matter? What are you squabbling with our people for, sir?

We're done for!

What's the trouble?

It's all out.

What's all out?

Someone or other from your house just now looked in from the roof through our skylight and saw Philocomasium and my guest here kissing each other.

Who was it saw them?

A fellow-servant of yours.

Who was he?

I don't know. He darted off like a shot, all of a sudden.

(dryly) Methinks I am done for!

I yelled at him as he went. "Hey!" says I, "What are you doing on the roof?" "Chasing a monkey," says he, and disappears.

It's damned hard luck to see myself done for all on account of a worthless beast! But Philocomasium—is she still here? (pointing to Periplectomenus's house)

She was when I came out.
I sis, iube transire huc quantum possibilit, se ut videant domi familiares, nisi quidem illa nos volt, qui servi sumus, propter amorem suum omnes erucibus contubernales dari.

Dixi ego istuc; nisi quid alint vis. Volo. hoc ei dicio: profecto ut ne quoquam de ingenio degrediatur muliebri earumque artem et disciplinam optineat colere.

Ego istaece, si erit hic, nuntiabo. sed quid est, Palaestrio, quod volutas tute tecum in corde?

Please go tell her to go over to our house, sir, as fast as she can, so that folks there can see that she’s at home—that is, unless she wants her love affair to cause all us slaves to be made Companions of the Cross.

Consider her told. Anything else before I go?

Yes, sir. Tell her this—she must be sure not to depart one inch from women’s ways, but abide strictly by their tactics and training.

How do you mean?

So as to persuade the servant that saw her he didn’t see her. No matter if she were seen here a hundred times, she must deny it just the same. She’s cheeky and glib and crooked, with plenty of shrewdness and nerve; she’s full of intrepidity, indomitability, fraudulency. If anyone accuses her, she’s to turn on him and out-swear him. She’s stocked with smooth talk, smooth tricks, and smooth oaths, stocked with wiles, stocked with wheedling ways, stocked with humbug. I tell you, sir, a woman never applies to a costermonger, if she’s full of the devil; she has her own stock of garden stuff, and all the sauces, for dishing up every kind of devilry.

I’ll take this message to her, if she is here. (seeing Palaestrio is lost in meditation) But what are you communing with yourself about, Palaestrio?

Keep still a moment, sir, while I call my wits to council and confer as to what to do and how to take my turn at tricking that tricky fellow servant of mine that saw her kissing here, so as to make what was seen unseen.

2 His chains.
Think it out. I'll step over here in the meanwhile. (moves away and amusedly watches Palaestrio at his gesticulations) Just look at him, how he stands there with bent brow, considering and cogitating. He's tapping his chest with his fingers. Intends to summon forth his intelligence, I suppose. Aha! Turns away! Rests his left hand on his left thigh, and reckons on the fingers of his right hand. Gives his right thigh a smaek! A lusty whack—his plan of action is having a hard birth. Snaps his fingers! He's in distress. Constantly changes his position! Look there, though; he's shaking his head—that idea won't do! He won't take it out half baked, whatever it is, but give it to us done to a turn. Look, though! (as Palaestrio rests his chin on his hand) He's building—supporting his chin with a pillar. None of that! I don't fancy that sort of building, not for a minute. For I happen to have heard that a foreign poet has a pillared face and a couple of custodians always lying on him hour after hour. (as Palaestrio takes a new attitude) Glorious! A graceful pose, indeed! Just like the slaves in the comedies! Never will he rest this day till what he wants is all worked out. (Palaestrio suddenly seems illumined) He's got it, I do believe! (aloud, impatiently, as Palaestrio's light seems to fail) If you're going to do anything, do it! Wake up, don't settle down to a snooze—that is, unless you prefer to stand watch here pummeled to a piece of patchwork. I say, you! You didn't get drunk yesterday, did you? Hey! I'm talking to you, Palaestrio! Wake up, I tell you! Stir yourself, I tell you! It's morning, I tell you!

(still preoccupied) I hear, sir.
Don't you see that the enemy are upon you and endangering your rear? Lay your plans! Get hold of help and support to meet the crisis. This is a time for doing, not dreaming! Steal a march on them in some way, or encircle 'em with your army somehow. Aid our men, and ambuscade our foemen! Cut off the enemy's supplies; secure your line of march so that stores and supplies can come to you and your troops in safety. Act! Quick action's called for! Just you say you'll take charge of operations yourself, and I'm confident we can overthrow our foes.

(sublimely) I do say so. I do take charge.
(clapping him on the back) And I say you will obtain what you want.
And you, sir, may God bless you!
Won't you impart your scheme to me?

(magnificent) Silence, sir, while I conduct you into the purlieus of my machinations, that you may know my plans as well as I.
You shall have them back from me intact.
Now, sir, my master is circumcompassed with an elephant's hide, not a human being's, and he has no more sense than a stone.
I know that, myself.
Now this is the way I'll work it, sir; here's the machination I'll set agoing. I'll say that Philocomasium's own twin sister has arrived from Athens with some lover of hers, and that she and Philocomasium are as much alike as two drops of milk. I'll say they're being entertained at your house here.

Fine! Fine! Glorious! That's a great idea!

So if that fellow servant of mine goes to the soldier charging her with the fact that he saw her kissing a stranger here (indicating Periplectomenus's house) I'll rebut him, claiming that the fellow saw this sister at your house hugging and kissing her own lover.

Wonderful, wonderful! And I'll tell the same story, in case the soldier questions me.

But tell him they're absolutely alike, sir. And Philocomasium must be warned, so that she'll know about this and not make any slip, in case the soldier questions her.

A very shrewd scheme, indeed! But if the soldier wants to see them both together, what then?

That's easy, sir. Hundreds of excuses can be evolved:—"She's not at home . . . she's out for a walk . . . she's asleep . . . dressing . . . bathing . . . dining . . . at a party . . . she's busy . . . not at leisure . . . it's impossible." You can put him off in any number of ways, so long as we get him started right—believing the lies we tell him.

Yes, that sounds good.

Go in, then, sir, and if the girl's there, bid her go over home at once. And tell her about this, inform and instruct her fully, so that she'll understand this plan we're setting on foot, about her twin sister.
Docte tibi illam perdoctam dabo.

I'll give you a girl who's coached and coached completely. Anything else?
Just that you go in, sir.
I am going. [EXIT.
And I'll go home, too, and do the old gentleman a good turn, surreptitiously, by tracking down that fellow servant of mine who chased the monkey to-day. For he couldn't have helped talking and letting someone of the household share his news about master's mistress, how he saw her and a strange young fellow kissing each other here next door. I know their way—"Why, I just can't keep a secret all to myself." If I find the chap that saw her, I'll at him with mantlet and siege-shed. I'm ready for action, determined to take him by storm and assault. If I don't discover him in that way, I'll go sniffing about like a hound till I've followed the fox up by his track. (listening) But our door creaked! I must lower my voice. (Sceledrus appears in the doornay) Aha! It's my fellow servant, Philocomasium's guard, that's coming out. (steps back)

3. ENTER Sceledrus, WORRIED AND PERPLEXED.

Now if I wasn't walking on the roof in my sleep to-day, I'm positive, positive, by gad, that I did see master's mistress, Philocomasium, next door here looking for trouble!
(in a low tone) He's the chap that saw her kissing, from what I heard him say!
(hearing a voice) Who's that?
(advancing) Your fellow servant. How goes it, Sceledrus?
Oh, Palaestrio, I'm awfully glad to meet you!

THE BRAGGART WARRIOR

How is that? What is the matter? Let me know.

(looking about cautiously) I’m afraid—

Afraid of what?

Oh Lord! That all sorts of trouble and torture are what every one of us slaves here is in for to-day!

(coldly) In by yourself, then! No such innings or outings for me!

I daresay you don’t know about the horrible, unheard of thing that has happened at our house.

What is this horrible thing?

It’s shameless!

You keep your knowledge quite to yourself; don’t tell me; I do not want to know.

Well, I won’t let you not know. I chased our monkey to-day on their roof. (pointing to Peri-plectomenus’s house)

(drily) Gad, Seeledrus, then a useless man chased a worthless beast!

You be damned!

(vigorously) The appropriate thing for you—

(mildly) is to tell your tale, since you have begun.

I just happened to happen to look down through the skylight into the house next door here, and there I spied Philocomasium and some young fellow, I don’t know who, kissing each other.

(horrified) Seeledrus! What scandalous tale is this?

I certainly did see her.

You yourself?

I myself, with these two eyes of mine.

Oh, get out! A likely story! You saw no such thing!

I don’t seem bleary-eyed to you, do I?

A doctor is the proper person to consult about that.

THE BRAGGART WARRIOR

(earnestly) But for the love of Heaven, man, be in no hurry to father that fable! You are hatching a fatal affliction for your own heels and head by this now. Why, you have made double arrangements to do for yourself, unless you check your silly chatter.

(alarmed) Double? Really? How so?
(very superior) I will tell you how so. In the first place, if you accuse Philocomasium falsely, this will do for you; secondly, if it is true, you were appointed her guard, and that will do for you.

(doggedly) What'll become of me, I don't know; I certainly do know that this is what I saw. You persist, you poor devil? What d'ye want me to tell you, unless what I did see? Why, even now she's in this house next door.

(excitedly) Hey? She's not at home? Look and see. Go inside, yourself, for I'm not asking to be believed in anything, now.

(making for the door, madly) Just what I will do!

I'll wait for you here. At the same time I'll waylay that heifer and see how soon she bies herself hitherward from pasture to stall. (reflecting, gloomily) What shall I do now? The soldier made me her guard. So if I disclose it, I'm a dead man; but if I keep mum, I'm a dead man still, once this gets out. Oh, what's worse or more audacious than a woman? While I was on the roof, she left her quarters and slipped out of doors. Good Lord! That was an audacious thing to do! If the soldier should find this out, by heaven, I do

Pal. Quid negoti sit rogas?
Scel. Cur non rogem?
Pal. Noun tu tibi istam praetruncari linguam largilo-

Scel. Quam ob rem iubeam?
Pal. Philocomasium eccam domi, quam in proxumo

Pal. Quid iam?

Pal. Verbero, edepol tu quidem

RE-ENTER Palaestrio.

(shocked) Seeledrus, Seeledrus, where on earth is a more brazen man than you? Where is a man born under a more evil and more ireful star than yours?

(blankly) What's the matter?
Just tell someone to gouge out those eyes of yours, will you, that see things that never were.

What? Never were?

Not a rotten nut would I give for your life.

(worried) What's wrong?
You ask what's wrong?

Why shouldn't I ask?

Have that twaddling tongue of yours lopped off, will you?

Why so?

Why, there Philocomasium is, at home! And you said you saw her and some man kissing and hugging each other next door here!

(scornful) It's a wonder you live on darnel when wheat comes so cheap.

What do you mean?

Because you're bleary-eyed.

By gad, you ropesend, it is blind you are, not bleary-eyed! She certainly is at home, I tell you.

At home, indeed!

Yes, by gad, at home!

Get out! You're fooling me, Palaestrio!

How so!
Because I am fooling with filth.
You be hanged!
That will be your fate, Seeledrus, I promise you, unless you contrive to change your eyes and effusions. (listening) But our door creaked!
Well, I'm going to keep watch here on this door, (standing in front of Periplectomenus's house) for there's absolutely no way for her to cross from here to here (pointing to the soldier's house) except straight through the door.
But look, man, she's at home! I wonder what scoundrelism possesses you, Seeledrus!
I see for myself, I think for myself, and it's myself
I trust most. No man alive shall make me believe she's not in this house. I'll plant myself here (blocking Periplectomenus's door) so that she won't sneak over without my noticing.
(aside) I've got him! Now I'll hurl him down from his ramparts! (aloud) See here, do you want me to make you yourself admit that you are fool-eyed?
(defiant) Go on, make me.
And that you have not one scrap of sense or eyesight?
Prove it.
So you say master's girl is in there, eh?
(his eyes still glued on the door) Yes, and I claim that I saw her and some stranger kissing each other inside here.

I know that.

Well now—if she’s at home, if I let you see her come out of our house here, do you deserve a good hard hiding?
I do.

Just what I intend to do.
I shall soon have her standing here before you in the street.

(alarmed at Palaestrio’s confidence) Well, go on and do it, then. I want to know whether I saw what I did see, or if he can prove what he says he’ll prove, that she’s at home. I tell you what, I’ve got eyes of my own and I’m not asking other folks for the loan of any. (querulously) But this chap is for ever carrying favour with her; he’s her right-hand man, he’s first to be called to meals, and first to get his belly full. Why, it’s only three years or so, perhaps, that he’s been in our family, and no servant in master’s service has a softer time of it. But I must mind what I’m about and watch this door. Here’s how I’ll block it. (stands facing it, legs and arms outspread) Now, by heaven, they’ll never fool me, that’s sure!

4. ENTER Palaestrio AND Philocomasium from Pyrgopolynices’s house.

(aside to Philocomasium) See you remember instructions.
(aside to Palaestrio) It’s a wonder you warn me so often.
Well, I’m afraid you won’t be artful enough.

Come then, now's the time to work your dodges.
I'll drop back a bit. (does so) Well, Sceledrus?
(without moving) I'm at this job. I have ears; say what you want.
(noting his position) You'll soon have to trudge out beyond the gate in that attitude, I take it—arms outspread, with your gibbet on your shoulders.
(still eyeing the door) So? What for?
Here, man, look to your left! Who is that lady?
(turning, with a start and a gasp) Ye immortal gods! Why . . . it's . . . master's . . . mistress!
(dryly) Egad! So it seems to me, too. Come on now, when you like—(shaking) What shall I do?
Make haste to meet your end.
(wrathfully) Where is that worthy slave who falsely accused an innocent woman of such dreadful conduct?
(pointing to the dumfounded Sceledrus) There you are, ma'am! He told me what I told you.
You say you saw me in the next house here kissing, you wretch?
You and some young stranger, so he told me, ma'am. (grins maliciously at Sceledrus) (growing stubborn) Yes, by heaven, so I did!
You saw me? Me?
Indeed I did, by heaven, and with these eyes!
Eyes which you will part with, I warrant, since they see more than they do see.
I won't be scared out of having seen what I did see, never, by heaven!
What a silly fool I am to waste my breath on this lunatic, who shall be given short shrift, I vow!

Where else but from home?
From home?
(solicitous) You can see me?
(curly) Yes, I can see you. (pondering) It's awfully queer how she could cross from here to here; for we certainly have no balcony, and no garden, and no window that isn't grated. (to Philocomasium) I certainly did see you inside here. Still at it, you scoundrel? You persist in accusing her?
(in ingenuous wonderment) Goodness me! Then that dream I dreamt last night has come true for me!
What did you dream, ma'am.
I'll tell you all about it. But both of you be attentive, please. Well, last night in my sleep my own twin sister seemed to have come from Athens to Ephesus with a certain lover of hers; they both seemed to have come on a visit, stopping in this house next door.
(aside) Thus dreamed Palaestrio. (aloud, excitedly) Go on, go on!
I seemed glad to have my sister come, but owing to her I seemed to be subjected to a perfectly dreadful suspicion. For in my dream, it seemed that my own servant charged me, me, just as (to Sceledrus, resentfully) you are doing, with having kissed some strange young man, when it was that twin sister of mine kissing her own lover. This was my dream—that I was falsely accused, wrongfully.

(much impressed) So on waking, the same things befel you that you speak of dreaming about, ma'am? Well, well, by Jove! What a pat dream! In with you, ma'am, and pray! I would suggest, ma'am, that you tell the soldier about this.

(emphatically) Indeed I will; I'll not be falsely accused of shameful conduct and (with a vindictive glance at Sceledrus) let the insult pass unpunished!

(aside, much worried) I'm afraid I've gone and done it, the way my whole back itches. You realise that you are done for?

(with conviction) Well, now she's at home, for sure.

(wavering) This much is sure—I'm going to watch our door now, wherever she is. (plants himself in front of it)

But upon my soul, Sceledrus, how that dream she dreamed did correspond to your suspicion that you saw her kissing!

I don't know what to believe my own self in, now, for what I . . . believe I saw, I'm . . . thinking now I didn't see.

Gad, man, I fancy you will be too late in coming to! Once this matter reaches master's ears, you are finely finished!

Yes, there must have been a mist over my eyes; at last I realise it.

Lord! That was evident before—she having been inside here all along.

(scratching his head) I can't say anything for sure. I didn't see her, and yet I did.

(in an artificial voice, to servant within) Put fire upon the altar that I may give glad praise and thanks to Ephesian Diana and offer her the grateful odour of Arabian incense, since she saved me in Neptune's realm and blustering abode where I was so buffeted about by the angry billows.

(who has been listening and staring at her) Palaestrio! Oh, Palaestrio!

(mimicking him) Oh, Sceledrus, Sceledrus! What d'ye want?
This woman (pointing) just coming out from here—is she master's mistress, Philocomasium, or isn't she?

(looking at her, amazed) By Jove, I think so! She seems to be! But it's a marvel how she could pass from here (pointing) to here, if it really is she! You don't doubt her being our girl, surely?

(cautious) She seems to be.
Let's go up and hail her! (advancing) Hey there! What does this mean, Philocomasium? What right have you in that house? What's your business there? What are you silent for? I'm talking to you.

(hanging back) Gad, no! To yourself; for she makes no reply.

(glaring at her) It's you I'm talking to, you shameless slut, roaming about amongst our neighbours.

To you—who else?
And who are you, sir, or what is your business with me?
You ask me who I am?
Why should I not ask what I do not know?
Who am I, then, if you don't recognize him?

You don't know us?
Neither of you. (walks away)
(to Palaestrio aside, nervously) I'm frightfully afraid—
Afraid of what?
Why, that we've lost our identity somewhere; for this woman says she doesn't know you, or me, either.
(earnestly) Sceledrus, I want to investigate here and now whether we are ourselves or other people. Why, maybe some neighbour has transformed us meanwhile without our knowing it.
(after cogitation) I am certainly myself, anyhow.
(looking himself over) And so am I, by Jove! (to Philocomasium, severely) Madam, you're looking for trouble! (she pays no attention) I say, you! Hey! Philocomasium!
(indignant) Sir, what sort of fit have you got, to address me so absurdly by a coined name?
(open-mouthed) Eh? Eh? What is your name, then?

I?
Yes, you.
When I arrived at Ephesus from Athens just last evening with the Athenian gentleman who loves me?

(more respectful) Tell me this, ma'am—what are you doing here in Ephesus?
I heard it rumoured that my own twin sister was here, and I came to look for her.
You're a bad one!
(disdainfully) Oh, no, merely a very silly one, goodness me, yes! to be chattering with you two!
(turns away) I am going.
(seizing her) I won't let you go!
(struggling) Let me loose!
You're caught in the act! I won't let you loose!
Well, my hands and your face will soon smack, unless you do let me loose! (slaps him)
(to Palaestrio, angrily) What the devil are you standing by for? Why don't you grab her on the other side?

(narishly) I have no desire to get my back into difficulties. How do I know but that she is not Philocomasium, and only someone else that looks like her?
Will you let me loose, or not?
No! And unless you go home willingly, I'll use force and drag you home despite you, willy nilly!
This (indicating Periplectomenus's house) is my home while I am abroad here; and my real home is at Athens in Attica. As for that home of yours, I want nothing to do with it, and with you men I have not the slightest acquaintance.

(cautiously) What shall I do?

(more ferocious) Go in here and get me a sabre!

What'll you do with it?

(beside himself) I'll burst headlong into the house!

And whomsoever here within I see Philcomasium kissing, I'll slay him on the spot!

Think? No, by heaven! 'Twas plainly she!

Oh, it's glorious—that passage perforating the wall!

How is that? What is the matter?
There she is—master's mistress—at home!
At home, indeed!
Lying on her couch!
Good Lord! You surely have made a mess for yourself, from what you tell me.
How so?
By daring to lay hands on the lady from next door here.
(glum) Oh Lord! I'm awfully afraid I have!
But no one can ever make her anything but our girl's twin sister. Yes, by gad, it was her you saw kissing here.
You're right, it's clear enough she was the one. Oh! wasn't I within an inch of being done for, if I'd told master?
(very coldly) Well then, if you are wise, you will keep mum. A servant ought to know more than he tells. I am going to leave you, so as not to be at all mixed up in your manoeuvres, and drop in at our neighbour's here. This muddle of yours likes me not. If master comes and wants me, here is where I shall be; come here and get me.

[EXIT INTO Periplectomenus's HOUSE.]

(sullenly) So the fellow's gone, eh, and pays no more attention to master's affairs than if he wasn't slaving it in slavery? Well, our wench is surely in the house here now, for I myself just now found her on her couch at home. Now I'll get down to my watchman's work, that's sure.

Do you want to know for sure? Oh, but I do, sir!
Well, go into your own house this minute and see if that girl of yours is there.

(happily) So I will, sir. That's a fine suggestion. I'll be back with you directly, sir. [exit.

(laughing) Bless my soul! I never did see anyone more neatly and more amazingly mystified. (as the door opens) Ah, but here he comes!

RE-ENTER Sceledrus, very miserable.

(grovelling at Periplectomenus's feet) Sir, I beseech you by gods and men, and by my own stupidity, and by your knees—

(coldly) Why do you beseech me?
To pardon my senselessness and stupidity, sir. Now at last I realize I've been a blind, brainless blockhead. Why, there's Philocomasium inside, sir!

Well now, you gallowsbird? You have seen 'em both, eh?
Yes, sir.

(sternly) You will please produce your master. I admit I deserve an awful thrashing, sir, indeed I do, and acknowledge that I did your lady guest an injury; but I mistook her for master's mistress who was put in my charge, sir, by my master, the soldier. For, sir, you couldn't draw two drops of water from the same well more like each other than she's like that guest of yours, sir. And I admit I peeped down through the skylight into your house, too, sir.

Admit it, indeed! When I saw you do it! And there you saw my guests kissing each other, eh?

Yes, sir—why should I deny what I saw?—but I thought it was Philocomasium I saw.

(his indignation rising again) So rating me as the lowest rascal living, then, if I knowingly allowed my neighbour to receive such an infamous injury in my own house?

Now at last I do think I've acted like an idiot, sir, now that I understand the matter; but just the same, sir, I didn't do it maliciously.

No, presumptuously! For a beggarly slave ought to have his eyes, and hands, and tongue, too, under control.

(errently) Oh, sir, if after to-day I ever breathe a word, even of what I myself know for certain, have me tortured! I'll give myself up to you. Now do please pardon me this time.

(reluctantly) I shall constrain myself to believe that you did not do this maliciously. You are pardoned.

Oh, the Lord love you, sir!

(still stern) And as for you, by heaven, if the Lord is to love you, you will certainly hold your tongue in the future, and not know even what you do know, or see what you do see.

That's good advice, sir, and I intend to follow it.

(worried by Periplectomenus's sternness) But have I begged your pardon enough, sir?

(gruffly) Off with you!

(solicitously) There's nothing else you want with me now, sir?

(turning away) Yes—no further acquaintance.

ENTER Palaestrio from the house of Periplectomenus.

(very importantly to Pleusicles within) You folks stay inside for a few moments more, Pleusicles, and let me reconnoitre first, so as to prevent any ambuscade of the council we want to hold. Naturally, if your enemies have become acquainted with your plans, they tie your tongue and bind your hands with plans of your own making, and the very things you wanted to do to them, they do to you. you and your noble character; for me to look to you to help me with all your might, out of regard for me, and to have you aiding me in my-love affair, and doing these things that men of your years more often shun than seek. I'm ashamed, sir, to throw this burden on you in your old age.

A new kind of lover you are, if you're actually ashamed of anything you do! You are not in love, you're no lover, you're only the shadow of a lover, Pleusicles!

But to harass him, at his age, with my love affair? (a trifle piqued) How is this? You take me for a regular old Death's-head, eh? So I seem to be such coffin contents, eh, to be living such a very long life, do I? See here, my lad, I'm not over fifty-four, and I'm still keen-sighted, quick-handed, and nimble-footed.

(to Pleusicles, reprovingly) His hair may be white, sir, but not a sign of age does he show in spirit. He keeps precisely the same noble nature he was born with.

That's perfectly true, Palaestrio, and, upon my soul, I'm proving it. Why, his friendliness is as youthful as can be.

(entirely mollified) Ah, well, my dear boy, the more you test me, the more you'll be convinced of my good will toward you in your affair.

What need of conviction when I am convinced, sir?

I want you to prove it by your own experience, not at second hand. (with a knowing air) For unless a man has been in love himself, he can hardly see inside a lover's heart. Now I, I still have some fervour and freshness in my carcass, neque dum exarni ex amoenis rebus et voluptariis, vel cavillator facetus vel eonviva commodus item ero, neque ego obstuctor sum alteri in convivio:

I’m not yet dried up for all that charms and ravishes. You’ll find I can crack a good joke, too, or prove a tactful guest at table, and not one of those contrariwisers of another guest. Tactlessness at table is a thing I tax my memory to avoid. I take my fair share of talking, and my share of silence, too, when someone else has the floor. I’m none of your spitting, hawking, sniffling fellows, either, not I. In short, sir, I was born in Ephesus, not in Apulia; I’m no Animulian.¹

(much pleased) And you will find me better at showing my graciousness than at making a show of it. (warming up again) I never make free with another guest’s girl at a party, or appropriate the titbits, or grab the loving cup out of turn, or start a quarrel over the wine at a party, not I, never! If anyone there annoys me, I take myself home, cut off the conversation. At table I go in for graciousness, love, and gladsomeness. By gad, sir, all your ways are bound to beget graciousness. And from the self-same source (tapping his chest) I'll produce for you the gayest of dinner guests, or a peerless parasite, yes, and an incomparable caterer. And as for dancing, there's no professional (pirouetting) can step it so seductively as I. Why, if you spend anything on a bad wife and an enemy, that's expense; money spent on a good guest and friend is money made, and money spent on divine worship a wise man counts clear gain. God I may say so—I'm a rich man and could have taken a wife of wealth and station; but I have no desire to admit a she-yapper into my house.

Why not, sir? Getting children is a delightful duty, you know. I'll take oath that getting the joys of freedom is much more delightful.

You, sir, are a man who can give good counsel to another, and to yourself, as well. Yes, yes, it's all very pleasant to marry a good wife—if there were any spot on earth where you could find one; but am I to bring home a woman who'd never say to me: "Husband mine, do buy me some wool to make a soft, warm cloak for you, and some nice, heavy tunics so that you won't be cold this winter." Nothing like that would you ever hear from a wife, but before cockcrow she'd wake me up with: "Husband mine, give me some money for a present for mother at the Matrons' Festival; give me some wool to make preserves; give me some money to give to the sorceress at the festival of Minerva, and to the dream interpreter, and the clairvoyant and the soothsayer. It's a shame if I don't send something to that woman that tells your fortune from your eyebrows. And then the modiste—I must tip her, in common decency. And, oh, for ever so long the cateress has been angry at getting nothing. The midwife, too—she protested to me.

for sending her so little. What? Will you send nothing to the nurse that cares for the slaves born under your own roof?" These ruinous outlays of the women, and a lot more like 'em, keep me from taking a wife to torment me with talk like that.

The gods are kind to you, sir, for, by gad, once you let go of that liberty of yours, you won't readily restore it to its old place. But it's a praiseworthy thing, sir, for a man of a great family, and of very great wealth, to rear children as a memorial to his family and himself. Seeing I have plenty of relatives, what do I need of children? As it is, I live comfortably and happily, doing as I like and indulging my inclinations. My property, at my death, goes to my relatives, to be shared amongst 'em.¹ (chuckling) They're at my house before daybreak, asking if I passed a restful night.² They offer sacrifice, and give me a larger part of it than they give themselves; they take me to the sacrificial feast; they invite me to their houses to lunch, to dinner; the most depressed man amongst 'em is the one that has sent me least. Why, they're all in an endowment competition—and I murmuring to myself: "It's my property they're gaping for, but it's me they're competing to support and endow."

THE BRAGGART WARRIOR

Ah, sir, you know what's what, all right, and how to enjoy life! If you enjoy yourself, why, that's as good as twins or triplets.

Heavens! If I had had children, misery enough they'd have brought me! I should be in torment directly. If my son happened to have a fever, I'd think he was dying; or if he had got drunk and had a fall, or been thrown from his horse somewhere, I'd be afraid it had broken his legs or neck for him.

(to Pleusicles) Here, sir, is a man that merits his money and many a long year of life; he keeps an eye on his property, enjoys himself, and benefits his friends.

A perfectly delightful creature! So help me Heaven, the gods should have provided that we shouldn't all live lives allotted on the same principle. Just as a good market-inspector fixes the price of merchandise—fixing such a price on the good merchandise as to make it sell according to its merits, and paring down the owner's price on the bad according to its demerits—that's the way the gods should have allotted human life. The man of delightful characteristics should be granted a long life, while wicked scoundrels should be made to give up the ghost with despatch. If they had so provided, bad men would be less abundant, and would do their scoundrelly deeds less boldly, and furthermore, for the good man the cost of living would come down.

THE BRAGGART WARRIOR

(in kindly reproof) A man who found fault with the divine scheme of things, and censured the powers above would be a silly ignoramus. Enough now of all this. Now I must do some marketing, guest mine, so as to entertain you in my home as befits us both, courteously, delightfully—and with delightful things to eat.\footnote{Leo brackets following nam.}

I have put you to quite enough expense already, sir. Why, no guest can accept the hospitality of a friend like this without becoming an affliction after a three days' stay; but after a ten days' stay he becomes a whole Iliad of affictions. Even though the master is no unwilling sufferer, the servants grumble.

(genially) I have schooled my servants to do me servant's service, my friend, not to give me orders or keep me under their thumbs. If they dislike what pleases me, I steer my own course—if a task's an "affliction," they must do it, just the same, to the tune of a thrashing, willy nilly. (going) Now for the marketing I mean to do.

Well, if market you must, do be reasonable about it, sir, don't be extravagant; anything is enough for me.

(turning on him amiably) Oh, do dispense with that hackneyed, ancient twaddle, won't you? Really, my friend, now you're falling into the cant of the common run of guests. Why, when they're placed and dinner put on the table, it's the regular thing for them to say: "Host, host! What need of all this extravagance just for us? Good heavens, you were crazy! Why, this would do for ten men!” They cavil at the way you market for them—and yet consume it all.

(to Pleusicles) By gad, sir, that’s just what they do do! What a clever, sagacious philosopher he is!

(gratified) But no matter how high the table is heaped, these same men never say: “Have that dish taken off . . . remove this platter . . . away with the ham, I don’t care for any . . . off with that pork . . . this conger eel will be fine, cold—out with it, be off, take it away!” No such sentiments would you hear from a one of ’em, but down they flop, hanging their upper halves over the table, grabbing for food.

(still patient and polite) A good man’s description of bad manners, sir!
Oh, I haven’t told you a hundredth part of the things I could bring up, if there were time for it.

(grasping his chance) Then the matter in hand—that ought to have our first thought, sir. Now turn your attention here, you two gentlemen. I must have your help, Periplectomenus; for I’ve hit on a delightful ruse for clipping our long-haired soldier close, and giving our lover here a chance to carry Philocomasium off and keep her for himself.
Let’s have that scheme of yours.
Well, sir, let me have that ring of yours. (pointing) What can you use it for?
When I get it, then you shall hear the scheme I’ve devised, sir.
Per. Vtere, accipe. Accipe a me rsum rationem doli, quam institui.

Pl. Perpurigatis damus tibi ambo operam auribus.

Pal. Erus meus ita magnus moechus mulierum est, ut neminem fuisse aequa neque futurum credo.

Pl. Credo ego istuc idem.

Pal. Isque Alexandri praestare praedicat formae suam, itaque omnis se ulitro sectari in Epheso membrat mulieres.

Pal. Ecquam tu potes reperire forma lepida mulierem, cui facetiarum cor pectusque sit plenum et doli?

Per. Ingenuamne an libertinam?

Pal. Aequi istuc facio, dum modo eam des quae sit quaestuosa, quae alat corpus corpore, cuique sapiat pectus; nam cor non potest, quod nulla habet.

Per. Lautam vis an quae nondum sit lauta?

Pal. Sie consucidam, quam lepidissimam potis quamque adulescentem maxume.

Per. Habeo eccillam meam clientam, meretricem adulescentulam.

Pal. Sed quid ea usus est?

Per. Vt ad te eam iam deducas domum itaque eam huc ornatum adducas, ex matronarum modo, Use it, (handing him the ring) here you are!
And here in return is the scheme I’ve thought out, to swindle him. (pauses, reflecting)
Our ears are open and at your service.
Now my master is a woman-chaser such as never was, or will be, I believe.
(heartily) I believe the same.
He holds himself a handsomer man than Alexander, and tells how all the women in Ephesus therefore insist on running after him.
(cynically) There’s many a husband who heartily wishes the fellow really were so seductive. But I am perfectly aware he’s what you say. So be as brief as possible, Palaestrio.
Can you find some delightful looking wench, sir, with a mind and wit crammed full of cleverness and wiles?
(thinking) Freeborn or a freedwoman?
That’s immaterial, so long as you give me one who’s after money, whose body is her bodily support, and who’s ready of wit: she can’t be ready of mind, as a matter of fact, for no woman has one.
D’ye want a swell wench, or one that hasn’t yet swelled out?
Oh, you know—a fine juicy bit, just as delightful and young as can be.
(after a moment) Aha! I have her! A client of mine, a beauty of a courtesan! But what do you need her for?
You are to take her home to your house at once, sir, and bring her here all got up like a married woman—the usual head-dress... hair done high

... in ribbons—and she's to pretend she's your wife; she must be so instructed. I fail to see where you're bound for. Well, you will see. (to Periplectomenus) But has she a maid? Yes, and a precious sly one. (with increasing importance and imperiousness) She is needed, too. Give the wench and her maid these instructions: the mistress is to pretend that she's your wife, and dying for this soldier, and that she gave this ring to her petling of a maid who turned it over to me to give the soldier, I being the go-between in the affair. (sharply) I hear you. Please do not assume that I am deaf. I have full use of my ears. (less consequential) I shall give it to him, sir, saying it was sent by your wife and given to me so that I might bring her and him together. This is the sort he is—he'll be crazy for her, poor fool, for adultery is the rascal's leading interest. (genial again) Why, if you gave old Sol the job of hunting for 'em, he couldn't find two more delightful wenches for this purpose than I can. Rest easy. See to it, then, sir, but we need them quickly. (exit Periplectomenus). Now you listen here, Pleusicles. I am your obedient servant. Mind this—when the soldier comes home, remember not to call Philocomasium by her own name. What am I to call her? Dicea.

THE BRAGGART WARRIOR

Oh yes, the same name we recently agreed upon.
Enough! Be off with you!
(giving) I'll remember. But just the same, I want to know what's the use of remembering.
Well, I shall tell you when occasion demands; meanwhile hold your tongue, so that he, too, (with a wave in the direction Periplectomenus went) may do his job at once and you play your part later on.
I'm going inside, then.
[exit.]
(calling after him) And be sure you follow instructions sensibly.

What a mix-up I'm making! What machines I'm setting in motion. I'll get the soldier's girl away from him to-day, if only my troops are rightly trained. But I'll call that chap. (shouting at the soldier's door) Hey! Sceledrus! Step out here, if you're not too busy! It's Palaestrio calling you!

ENTER Lucrio, unsteadily.

(tipsily) Sceledrus is . . . not at . . . leisure.
Eh? How's that?
He's . . . asleep and . . . swigging.
What? Swigging?
Snoring, I . . . meant . . . to say. But seeing snoring is . . . much the same as . . . swigging—(indignant) Ha! Sceledrus asleep inside there?
Not with his . . . nose . . . anyhow, for that's . . . raising an awful . . . racket. He nabbed a . . . nip on the sly, when he . . . put some . . . nard in an . . . amphora, he being the . . . butler.
Ha! You rascal! You're his under-butler, so see here—

Vol. III.
Luc. Quid vis?
Pal. Qui lubitum est illi condormiscere?
Luc. Oculis opinor.
Pal. Non te istuc rogito, scelus.
procede huc. periisti iam, nisi verum scio.
prompsisti tu illi vinum?
Luc. Non prompsi.
Pal. Negas?
Luc. Nego hercle vero, nam ille me vetuit dicere;
neque equidem heminas octo exprompsi in urceum
neque illic calidum exhibit in prandium.
Pal. Neque tu bibisti?
Luc. Di me perdan tum, si bibi, si bibere potui.
Pal. Quid iam?
Luc. Quia enim obsorbui;
nam nimis calebat, amburebat gutturem.
Pal. Alii ebrii sunt, alii poscam potitant.
bono subpromo et promo cellam creditam.
Luc. Tu hercle idem faceres, si tibi esset credita:
quoniam aemulari non licet, nunc invides.
atque ut tu scire possis, ego dico tibi: si falsa dices, Lucrio, excruciabere.
Luc. Ita vero? ut tu ipse me dixisse delices, post e sagina ego eiciar cellaria, ut tibi, si promptes, alium subpromum pares.
THE BRAGGART WARRIOR

What d'ye want?
How has he thought fit to go to sleep?
With his . . . eyes, I suppose. (turns away)
I'm not asking you that, you villain! Step up here!
(Lucrio obeys) You're a dead man this minute, unless
I know the truth! Did you draw wine for him?
I did . . . not.
You deny it?
Why, of course I . . . deny it, for he . . . forbade me to . . . admit it. And I didn't draw him off eight . . . half-pints into a . . . pitcher, not I, and he didn't . . . drink it off . . . hot for lunch . . . either.
And you didn't drink, yourself, either?
May I be . . . damned, if I drank, if I . . . could have drunk!
Eh? How's that?
Because I . . . gulped it down. Why, it was so . . . blessed hot, it . . . scorched my gullet.
(enviously) Some folks get gloriously drunk, while others are always bibbing vinegar and water. A fine under-butler and butler the storeroom's entrusted to!
Lord! You'd be doing . . . the same, yourself, if it had been . . . entrusted to you. Now that you can't . . . imitate us, you . . . envy us.
See here! Did he ever draw wine before?
Answer me, you villain! And just to give you warning, I tell you this—if you tell any lies, Lucrio, you'll be lying on a cross.
Oh yes! Just to give you a . . . chance to tattle . . . what I told, and . . . after I'm ousted from my . . . storeroom . . . gorging, get another under-butler for . . . yourself, if you get the butler's job.

No I won't, upon my word. Come now, speak out boldly to me.
I never saw ... him draw any wine, upon my ... word. But it was ... this way: he'd give me ... orders, and then I'd draw it.
That's why the casks there continually kept standing on their heads.
Lord, no! That wasn't why the ... casks cut such ... capers. But there was a ... little spot in the ... storeroom that was awfully ... slippery, and there, standing ... so (illustrating) near the ... casks, was a ... two-quart jar, and this jar often ... filled itself up ... ten times over. I've seen it get ... full and empty ... especially ... full. And when the jar got to ... carousing, the ... casks got to cutting ... capers.

(angrily) Be off, be off inside with you now! It's you chaps do the carousing in the wine room. I'll bring master from the forum this instant, by Jove!

(aside) I'm done for! Master'll ... torture me, once he comes ... home and finds this out, because I ... didn't tell him. I'll run away somewhere, by ... gad, and postpone ... my punishment for a while. (to audience) Don't tell him, for ... heaven's sake! (staggers away)

Where are you off to?
I've been ... sent somewhere: I'll be ... back here soon.
Who sent you?
Philocomasium.
Be off, and come directly back.
Just the ... same, if there's any ... trouble doled out, and I'm ... away, you please take my ... share, just the ... same.

Acr. Si quid faciendum est mulieri male atque malitiose,
Well, now I understand what the wench has been at: Sceledrus being asleep, she has got rid of this under-guard of hers, while she crossed over to our house. Good! (looking down the street) But here comes Periplectomenus with the woman I commissioned him to get—and a delightful looking creature she is! By gad, the gods are with us in this! What a ladylike dress and walk! Nothing like a courtesan! Ah, this affair is shaping itself delightfully!

3. ENTER Periplectomenus, Acroteleutium and Milphidippa.

I explained everything to you at home, from beginning to end, Acroteleutium, and to you as well, Milphidippa. In case you don’t fully grasp this game of ours to gull him, I want you to begin again and school yourselves completely. If you do understand it, we had better turn to another topic.

(lightly) A silly goose I’d be, patron mine, to undertake another person’s work or promise to work for him, if once in the workshop I didn’t know how to be sly or tricky. But it’s better to admonish you.

(laughing) Everyone appreciates the immense value of admonishing a courtesan! Why, my ears had barely begun to drink in your discourse, when I myself volunteered to tell you how the soldier could be trimmed. Still, no one knows enough, alone. Why, I’ve often seen many a man avoid the neighbourhood of good advice before he really came near it. If a woman has anything mischievous and malicious ea sibi immortalis memoriam meminisse et sempiterna; sin bene quid aut fideliter faciundum eisdem veniat, obliviosae extemplo siunt, meminisse nequeunt.

to do, she remembers it with a memory that's unremitting and immortal; but if the same women have occasion to do anything good or loyal, they suddenly become forgetful, and simply can't remember. That's why I'm afraid of your forgetting, you two having occasion to do both things, you see; for in doing the soldier a mischief, you girls do me a service.

(smiling) So long as we're unaware of doing good, you needn't fear.

(heartily) Women are worthless wares.

(encouragingly) Don't be alarmed; they all fit in with women still more worthless.

The proper thing for you two! (proceeding toward his house) Come along.

(aside) I must hurry up to meet them. (approaching) Glad to see you safely here, sir, and, by Jove, you're delightfully arrayed (indicating the girls) for your stroll!

Good! A timely meeting, Palaestrio! Here they are! Here are the girls you bade me bring, and arrayed to order.

Splendid, sir! You're the man for me! (with a courtly air) Palaestrio presents his compliments to Acroteleutium.

(to Periplectomenus, with dignity) Who is this man, pray, who accosts me by name as if he knew me? This is our master-builder.

Good day, master-builder.

And good day to you. But tell me, has this gentleman crammed you full of instructions? They're two well-prepared wenches I bring you. I'm anxious to hear how they are prepared. (to girls) I dread your making some mistake.

I have added nothing new of my own to your instructions.
You want your master, the soldier, to be fooled, I understand?
You've said it.
It is all arranged, delightfully and shrewdly, properly and neatly.
And I want you to pretend to be this gentleman’s wife.
His wife I’ll be.
And to pretend that you’re smitten with the soldier. I shall be smitten.
And that this matter is being managed for him through me, as go-between, and your maid.
You could have made a fine clairvoyant, for what you say will all come true.
And that your maid brought me this ring from you to pass on to the soldier in your name.
Quite correct.
What’s the use of all that repetition of things they remember?
It’s better so. For consider this, my dear patron,—when you have a fine master-builder, and he has once laid down the keel true to line, building your ship is easy when that’s all laid and set. Now this keel of ours is laid finely as can be and well set, and the master-builder has workmen for this job that are not unskilled. If we’re not delayed by the timber-dealer with our raw material—I know what our powers promise—our ship will be ready in no time?
No doubt you know the soldier, my master?
It’s a wonder you ask. How could I help knowing such a general nuisance, such a boastful, frizzle- pated, perfumed lady-killer?

(anxiously) But he doesn’t know you, does he? Never having seen me, how should he know who I am?
How delightfully you do talk! What we do to him can be made all the more delightful! Can’t you leave the man to me, and feel easy as to the rest? If I fail to make a delightful fool of him, lay all the blame on me.
All right, then, you girls go inside, and set yourselves to work on this with all your wits.
(easily) Leave that to us.
Come, Periplectomenus, take these girls inside at once; I’ll meet our man at the forum and give him this ring, making out that it was given me by your wife and that she’s dying for him. The moment we get back from the forum, send this girl (indicating Milphidippa) to us as though she were a secret messenger to him.
We will. Leave it to us.
Only you manage your part; I’ll fetch him here already stuffed in fine shape.

Is the girl herself (nodding toward the soldier’s house) helping us?
Oh, delightfully, toutafaitly!
I trust things will turn out well. When we’ve lumped together our talents for mischief, I have no fear of our being beaten at artful wiles.

THE BRAGGART WARRIOR

Well, then, let's go inside to practice and think over our parts, so that we can put the job through carefully and properly, and make not a single slip when the soldier comes.

It's you that delay us. [exeunt.

ACT IV

ENTER Pyrgopolynices and Palaestrio.

Ah, it is a great pleasure to have your affairs proceed in just such a delightful fashion as you wish. My own case, now—to-day I sent my parasite to King Seleucus so that he might conduct to Seleucus the mercenaries whom I hired to protect his kingdom while I take a rest.

Come, sir, attend to your own business rather than Seleucus's. Such a love affair as I'm commissioned to submit to you, sir, a new one, a dazzling one! (condescendingly) Oh, well, everything else shall be secondary, and you shall have my attention. Speak. I surrender my ears to your suzerainty, by all means.

(mysteriously) Look about, then, sir, and see that no one is here to catch our conversation. For I was instructed to do this business secretly.

(majestically surveying the neighbourhood) No one is here.

(producing Periplectomenus's ring) First, sir, take this as a token of her affection.

(taking it) What have we here? Whence comes it?

From a dazzling and delectable lady, sir, who loves you, and longs to enjoy your beauteous beauty. And now she has sent me her ring by her maid, for me to hand over to you, sir.

Tush, sir! Would I dare be an envoy to you from a freedwoman, when you are unable to make adequate response to the freeborn ladies who

Is she married or unmarried?
Married and unmarried, both, sir.
How can the same woman be both married and Because she’s the young wife of an old husband, sir.

Excellent!
Oh, she’s delightful, sir, and every inch a lady!
No lies, my man!
Sir, she’s the one woman worthy of comparison

(genuinely surprised) By Jove, what a beauty she must be! But who is she?
The wife of old Periplectomenus here next door,
sir. She’s simply perishing for you, sir, and longs to leave him; she hates the old fellow. And now she has ordered me to beg and beseech you to grant her the opportunity and privilege of being yours.
(forgetting his indifference) By Jove, I certainly long to have her, if she wishes it. (slips on the ring)
Wishes it, sir? Longs for it!
What shall we do with that wench at home?
Why, sir, tell her to leave you and go where she to Ephesus with her mother, and they are after her.

Eh? What? Her mother has come to Ephesus? So say those who know, sir. By Jove! A delightful opportunity to get the girl out of my house! But listen, sir. Do you want to do it in a delightful way?

Speak, out with your advice. Do you want to put her out at once, sir, and yet have her part with you pleasantly? I long to!

Then this is what you should do, sir. You have any amount of money: bid her keep the jewels and finery you fitted her out with for a present and take them and go away where she likes. A good suggestion! But just look out that I do not let her go, only to have this other one break faith.

Tut, tut, sir! You're joking! When she loves you as her very eyes. ✓

(aside to Palaestrio) Hush! Let us listen quietly and see if any mention is made of me.

( aloud, looking everywhere save in their direction) Is there anyone near, I wonder, that minds other people's business more than his own, to spy out my doings—someone that doesn't have to earn his supper? They're the people I'm afraid of now, that they'll hamper me or hinder somewhere, if mistress leaves her home, on her way across here, longing to lie in the arms of the man she loves—that, oh, so delightful, oh, so handsome soldier, Pyrgopolynices!

(aside to Palaestrio) So this wench is dying for me, too, eh? She admires my looks. Upon my soul, her words need no ashes.

How do you make that out, sir? Why, because what she says is so elegant and polished.

And why not? She speaks of you, sir: she has a polished subject.

Moreover, her mistress is a most delightful and elegant woman. Upon my soul, Palaestrio, I do begin to fancy her a bit already.

Before you've set eyes on her, sir? My confidence in you amounts to seeing her.

Not to love her, sir, by gad, no! This girl is engaged to me: if the mistress marries you to-day, the maid becomes my wife directly.
Then why so backward in speaking to her? (stepping forward) This way, then, sir.

Oh, for a chance to meet the man I came out to see! (Palaestrio steps back again and pulls back the soldier) (in a melodramatic tone) You shall have it, and what you pray for will come to pass. Be of good heart, have no fear; there is a certain man who knows the whereabouts of what you seek.

answer this wench: she's the one from that woman I spoke of a while ago.

A. (bored) From which one? So many come to my mind, you know: I cannot remember.

B. From the one who despoils her own fingers and decks yours, sir. (pointing to the ring) For I brought him (indicating Palaestrio) this ring from a lady who pines for you, sir, and he passed it on to you.

A. Well, woman, what wish you now? Speak.

B. For you not to scorn a lady who longs for you, sir, who now lives but in your life. In you alone rests her hope, whether she is to survive or perish.

A. Well, what is her wish?

B. To converse with you, sir, to clasp you in her arms, caress you. Ah, sir, unless you bring her succour, she will soon be broken-hearted. (seizing his hand) Oh, my Achilles, come, grant my prayer, graciously save that gracious lady, draw forth from the wells of your mercy, O capturer of cities and slayer of kings! (Palaestrio nearly collapses) (pushing her away) A fine to do! Lord, Lord, this is so tiresome! (to Palaestrio) How many times have I forbidden you, you villain, to promise my services in this fashion to the common crowd?

A. Do you hear, woman? I told you this before, and I tell you again: this boar must receive compensation, or he won't consort with every little sowlet.

B. (humbly) He'll be given any sum he asks for.

A. He must have two hundred pounds; he will take less from no one.

Oh, now, now, sir! You've certainly been a rare stallion, that's sure, the way you run after everything, male and female. Do get down to business now, sir!

(deciding not to be angry) As to that advice you give me—I want you to discuss the matter with her yourself; for you are an ideal person to parley with her.

How is that better than going to her yourself, sir, and managing your own affair yourself?—Say it's necessary for you to marry; your relatives urge it, your friends force it upon you.

(reluctant) That is your opinion?

Of course it is, sir.

(gathering himself together) I will go inside, then. You keep watch in front of the house, meanwhile, so as to call me out when the other one comes out.

(reassuringly) Just you see to your part of the business, sir.

(with affected ease) Oh, that is seen to. Why, if she declines to go of her own free will, I shall put her out by force.

Oh, sir, don't do that! No, no, do let her leave you on good terms. And give her those things I spoke of; let her take away the jewellery and finery you furnished her with.

Lord! I only hope she will!

I think you'll easily prevail upon her, sir. But do go in, sir. Don't keep standing here.

I am yours to command. [Exit slowly into house.

(blithely, to audience) Does this wenching warrior seem to fall at all short of what I told you he was a while ago? Now for Acroteleutium to appear, or that little maid of hers, or Pleusicles! (Peri-

Oh. Not a soul do I see, I vow, except the man we want to meet.

And I you.

Oh. How goes it, master-builder?

I the master-builder? Bosh!

Oh. What makes you say that?

Why, because compared with you I'm not fit to pound a peg in a wall!

Oh, come now, really!

Oh, she's the smoothest rogue! How delightfully she did trim the warrior!

Oh. Not enough yet, though.

Cheer up! The whole affair is shaping itself well now; only keep on giving it a helping hand, as you have so far. Our soldier, you know, has gone inside to (chuckling) entreat his mistress to leave him and go to Athens with her sister and mother. Fine! Splendid!

More than that, he's made her a present of all the jewellery and finery he fitted her out with, as an inducement to leave him: that was my suggestion. Her leaving is easy enough, if she wishes it, while he's crazy for it.

Don't you know, sir, it's when you've climbed out of a deep well, right up to the top, that at the top the danger's greatest of your falling down again? We have our affair at the top of the well now: if the soldier gets suspicious, it'll all escape us. Now's the time when we most need to be artful. I see we have at hand enough material for our siege—three women, you, sir, for a fourth, me for a fifth, and the old gentleman for a sixth; with the stratagems we six have to draw on, I know for sure that whatever city should be assigned us can be captured by our arts. Only give me your attention. That's why we are here, to learn your wishes. Delightful of you! Now this is the mission I command (to Acroteleutium) you to undertake. Your desires shall be compassed, commander mine, to the best of my ability. I desire our soldier to be delightfully, cleverly, and superbly swindled. Goodness me! Your command is a pleasure. You know how? By pretending that I'm rent with passion for him, of course. Precisely. And that this passion has made me divorce my husband (with a nod toward Periplectomenus's house) in my longing to marry him. Quite correct. There's only one more point, though—say that this house (indicating that of Periplectomenus) is part of your dowry, and the old man left you and went away after you divorced him. We mustn't have our warrior timid about entering another man's house later on. A good suggestion! But when he comes out, I want you to stay there at a distance and pretend to scorn your own beauty in comparison with his, and to be awed

Yes indeed. Will it be enough if I produce a piece of work so finished that you can't find a fault in it?
Quite enough. Now, sir, (turning to Pleusicles) it is your turn to learn my commands. Just as soon as all this is done and she (indicating Acroteleutium) has gone inside, you are to come to us here at once, in shipmaster's togs: wear a broad-brimmed, rust-coloured hat, a woollen patch over your eyes, and a short, rust-coloured cloak—that's the maritime shade—this to be fastened on your left shoulder, with an arm stuck out; and contrive to be all tight and trim. You're to pretend to be the master of a ship. The old gentleman has all these things, for some of his slaves are fishermen.

Well? Why don't you tell me what to do when I'm in those togs?
Come here for Philocomasium, in her mother's name, and tell her if she intends to go to Athens to hurry to the harbour with you, and to order anything she wants put aboard to be carried to the ship. Say that if she's not going, you will cast off directly, there being a fair wind. A very pleasing picture! Proceed.
The soldier will promptly urge her to go, to hurry up, so as not to keep her mother waiting. There's no limit to your foresight!

I'll tell her to ask for my assistance in carrying her luggage to the harbour. And to the harbour

Quick now, sir, be off and put on your togs.

Well, Philoeomasion has granted my wish just as I wished, in all friendliness and good will. What on earth kept you in there so long, sir?

How is that, sir?

How I did have to talk and talk! What stubborn stuff she was to deal with! However, I finally gained my point in the way I wished: I granted her, gave her, all she wished, all she asked for. I gave you to her, also, as a gift.

(taken off his guard) Me, too? (quickly) Oh, how can I live without you, sir?

shall obtain your release from her, trust me. As a matter of fact, I endeavoured in every way to gain her consent to go without taking you with her; but she was too much for me.

(trying to resign himself) My hopes will rest in heaven and you, sir. But at any rate, sir, bitter though it is to me to be deprived of such a wonderful master as you, this at least is a joy to me—that your own irresistible beauty, and my efforts, have brought you this affair with our neighbour whom I'm now securing for you.

Enough said. You shall be a free man, and a wealthy one, if you carry it through. Carried through it shall be, sir. But I'm aching for her!

Gently, sir, gently! Get yourself under control, and don't be too eager. (pointing) Aha, though!

There she is coming out. (they step back)

3. ENTER Milphidippa and Acroteleutium.

(seeing them; aside to Acroteleutium) There’s the soldier all ready for you, ma’am!

(looking about, covertly) Where?

To the left.

I see him.

Look at him sideways so that he won’t realize we see him.

(doing so) I see him. Well, well! Now's the time for two bad girls to become still worse.

You must lead off.

(aloud, awed) Oh heavens! You met him, yourself? (aside to Milphidippa) Don’t spare your voice; make him hear us.

(proudly) I talked with him in person, ma’am. I did indeed, calmly, ma’am, just as long as I liked, quite at my ease, quite as I saw fit.

I do, sir. How happy she is at having approached you!
Oh, you fortunate woman!
(aside to Palaeastro) How the women do seem to love me!
You deserve it, sir.
My goodness! That is a most amazing story that you had access to him and prevailed upon him. Why, they say he is addressed only by dispatch or envoy, just like a king.
No doubt, for, dear me, such a time as I had approaching him and winning his consent!
(aside to the soldier) How renowned you are, sir, amongst the ladies!
(devoutly) I must resign myself, since such is the will of Venus.
Ah, I offer thanks to Venus, and beg and entreat her that I may win the man I love and yearn for, and that he may be gracious to me, and not grudge me my desire.
I hope it will be so, ma’am, although there are many women that yearn for him: but he scorns them, spurns them all, ma’am, except you alone.
(despairingly) Ah, that, that disdain of his, is just what makes me suffer so from fear that his eyes may make him change his mind, on seeing me, and that a man of his fine taste may spurn my poor attractions instantly.
No he won’t, ma’am; do cheer up.
How little she thinks of her own charms!
I fear me your description flattered such beauty as I have.

(aside to Palaestrio) I must not let the woman die, surely. Shall I approach her? By no means, sir. Why, you'll cheapen yourself, if you lavish yourself, unasked. Let her come to you, unasked; let her do the seeking and pining and waiting. Do you want to lose that reputation that you have? Please, sir, don't do it. For I am sure that no mortal man save two—you yourself and Lesbian Phaon—has had the fortune to be so loved by woman.

How do you know?
I know, ah Heavens, I know! I can smell. Yes, yes, my nose would detect it from the odour, were he within!
(aside to Pyrgopolynices) She has second sight, sir.
Because she loves me, she is therefore endowed by Venus with powers of divination.
(sniffing delicately) Somewhere hereabout is the man I yearn to see! I smell him, I do, I do!
(aside to Palaestrio) Upon my soul, the woman actually sees better with her nose than eyes! Love blinds her, sir.
(catching sight of the soldier) Hold me, hold me, for heaven's sake! (about to swoon)

(supporting her) Why?
(weakly) Or I'll fall!

What for?
Because I cannot stand—so do my senses fail me by reason of my eyes!

(after a moment of mystification) Heavens! You've spied the soldier! (looks about) Yes!

I don't see him. Where is he?
Ah me! You would see him, if you loved him!

r. How tremulous and terror-stricken she was when she beheld you!

than that a woman lets you in for. I really do believe they do it just out of habit. Now here's my case—come to fetch this Philocomasium. (looks about for her disgustedly) But I'll knock at the door. (does so) Hello! Is anyone here? (stepping up to him) What's the matter, sir? What do you want? What are you knocking for? (brusquely) I'm looking for Philocomasium. I come from her mother. If she's going, she must go now. She's delaying everyone: we want to cast off.

We have been ready this long time. Palaestrio, go get some assistants to help you to carry her things to the ship, her jewellery, trinkets, clothes, all her valuables. All the stuff I gave her is packed up: let her take it away.

Going, sir. [EXIT. (shouting after him) And for God's sake, hurry! He will not keep you waiting. (interested in Pleusicles's bandage) What ails you, pray? What have you done with your eyes?

(lifting the bandage a bit from his right eye, which is more exposed) Lord, man, I have an eye, all right. But the left one, I mean. Well, I'll tell you. It was my love of the deep, by gad, that cost me the full use of this eye, for if it wasn't for this deep-love of mine, I'd be using it as well as the other one. (hastily) But they're keeping me too long!

(as his door opens) Look, there they come. (to Philocomasium, in the doorway) For heaven's sake, ma'am, will you never cease weeping?
IV. 8.

Phil. Quid ego ni fleam? ubi pulcherrume egi aetatem, abeo.

Pal. Em hominem tibi, qui a matre et sorore venit.

Phil. Video.

Pyrg. Audin, Palaestrio?

Pal. Quid vis?

Pyrg. Quin tu iubes ecferri omnia quae isti dedi?

Pl. Philocomasium, salve.

Phil. Et tu salve.

Pl. Materque et soror tibi salutem me iusscrunt dicere.

Phil. Salvae sient.

Pl. Orant te, ut eas, ventus operam dum dat, ut velum explicent; nam matri oculi si valerent, mecum venissent simul.

Phil. Ibo; quamquam invita facio, impietas sit nisi eam.

Pl. Sapis.

Pyrg. Si non mecum aetatem egisset, hodie stulta viveret.

Phil. Istuc crucior, a viro me tali abalienarier, nam tu quemvis potis es facere ut afluat facetiis; et quia tecum eram, propterea animo eram ferocior: eam nobilitatem amittendam video.

Pyrg. Ne fle.

Phil. Non queo, quom te video.

THE BRAGGART WARRIOR

8. ENTER Palaestrio and Philocomasium.

(sobbing bitterly) How can I help . . . weeping? Life has been . . . oh, so . . . beautiful here, and now I'm . . . going away!

(pointing to Pleusicles) Look! There's the man who's come from your mother and sister. I . . . see him.

(calling) Palaestrio! Do you hear me? What is it, sir?
Why do you not order all the things I gave her to be carried out? (Palaestrio goes to the door and gives instructions to slaves within)

Good day, Philocomasium. Good day to . . . you, sir. Your mother and sister told me to give you their best wishes. They have . . . mine.

They beg you to come while there's a fair wind, so that they may set sail. If your mother's eyes had been in condition, they would have come along with me, of course. I'll . . . go. Although I go . . . unwillingly, it would be . . . undutiful not to go.

That's a sensible girl. But she would be a simpleton still, if she had not lived with me.

(adoringly) That is what . . . torments me—to be . . . separated from such a man as . . . you—for you can make . . . anyone (glancing slyly at Pleusicles) clever as can be. And because I was with . . . you, it did make me so . . . so proud, and now I see I must . . . forfeit that . . . distinction. (Breaks down entirely) (condolingly) Don't cry. I can't . . . help it, when I . . . look at you!

Pyrg. Habe bonum animum.
Phil. Scio ego quid doleat mihi.
Pal. Nam nil miror, si libenter, Philocomasium, hic eras, si forma huius, mores, virtus, animum attinuere hic tuom, quom ego servos quando aspicio hunc, lacrumo quia diiungimur.
Phil. Obseero licet complecti prius quam proficisco?
Pyrg. Licet.
Phil. O mi oculle, o mi anime.
Pal. Obseero, tene mulierem, ne adfligatur.
Pyrg. Quid istuc quaesost?
Pal. Quia abs te abit, animo male factum est huic repente miserae.
Pyrg. Curre intro atque ecferto aquam.
Pal. Nihil aquam moror, quiescat malo. ne interquaeo, dum resipiscit.

Pyrg. Capita inter se nimis nixa hisce habent.
non placet. labra ab labellis aufer, nauta, cave malo.
Pl. Temptabam spiraret an non.
Pyrg. Aurem admotam oportuit.
Pl. Si magis vis, eam omittam.
Pyrg. Nolo, retine.
Pl. At ultro misero.
Pyrg. Exite atque ecferte huc intus omnia quae isti dedi.

THE BRAGGART WARRIOR

Bear up, bear up.
Ah, but I know how I . . . suffer!
Indeed, I don't wonder at all that you loved to live with him, Philocomasium, and that his beauty and his ways and his bravery hold your heart here, for, mere slave though I am, when I look on him,
I (hiding his face) weep at our being parted.
May I embrace you before I go my way, oh, may I?

(gravely) You may.

(falling on his breast) Oh, my precious one, oh, soul of my soul!

(drawing her away and guiding her tottering steps to Pleusicles) For heaven's sake, hold the woman, sir, or she'll dash her brains out! (Pleusicles supports her, much too tenderly, as she swoons)

(looking at them) Eh? Eh? What does that mean?

(hurriedly) She's suddenly fallen into a faint, poor thing, because of leaving you, sir?

Run inside and bring some water!

Never mind the water, sir; I think she had better rest. (as Pyrgopolynices advances toward her) Don't get near her, sir, for mercy's sake, while she's recovering!

(doubtfully) That pair have their heads too closely together. I don't like it. (shouting, as Pleusicles kisses her) Hey, sailor, get your lips away from hers! Look out for trouble!

I was trying to see if she was breathing, or not.
You should have used your ear for that.

(indifferently) If you prefer, I'll let her go.

No, no! Keep hold of her!

But I'll be glad to let her go.

(still more alarmed, to servants within) Come out here, and bring out all those things I gave her!
Pal. Etiam nunc saluto te, Lar familiaris, prius quam eo. conservi conservaeque omnis, bene valete et vivite, bene quaesio inter vos dicatis mi med absenti tamen.

Pyrg. Age, Palaestrio, bono animo es.

Pyrg. Fer aequo animo.

Pal. Scio ego quid doleat mihi.

ENTER SERVANTS WITH Philocomasium's LUGGAGE.

(turning for a last sad look into the house ) And now once more, God of this household, I salute thee before I go! And you, my fellow servants all, male and female, good bye and good luck to you! Speak good things of me amongst yourselves, I pray you, absent though I am! (sobs violently) Come, come, Palaestrio, take heart!

Ah, sir! I can't help . . . weeping at leaving . . . you!

Bear it bravely.

Ah, but I know how I suffer!

(regaining consciousness, slowly) But what is this?

(looking about vacantly) What's the matter? What do I see? Ah, light of day!

Have you recovered now?

(horrified) For heaven's sake, what man have I embraced? Oh, this is death! Am I in my senses? (sinks again on Pleusicles's breast)

Never fear, (in a low tone) my heart's delight!

(noticing Pleusicles's unnecessary fervour) What does this mean?

(stepping up to them) She lost consciousness just now, sir. (in a low tone to Pleusicles) I'm frightfully worried this'll finally become altogether too public! (Philocomasium revives again)

(overhearing, in part) What do you mean?

(extemporizing weakly) Our being followed through the city now by all this stuff, sir. (pointing to Philocomasium's luggage) I'm afraid people may turn this to your discredit, sir.

(loftily) These gifts come from me, not from them; little I care about such folk. (impatient) Come, be off, and heaven bless you!

It's on your account I say this, sir.

THE BRAGGART WARRIOR

Of course, of course.
And now farewell, sir.
And fare you well, my man.

(Man, bustling the others off) Quick! Go along! I'll follow you directly: I want a few words with (choking with sad devotion) my master.

[Exeunt, Philocomasium supported by Pleusicles and looking back wistfully at Pyrgopolynices.]

Although you have always held other slaves more loyal to you than me, sir, I am nevertheless deeply grateful to you for everything; and if it were your will, sir, I should much prefer to be your slave than another's freedman. (sobs)

Bear up, bear up! Ah me, sir, when I . . . reflect how I must change my . . . ways—learn the ways of . . . women, and forget the . . . warriors'!

Be a good, honest fellow.

(hopelessly) I can't, sir . . . now! I've lost all my . . . desire!

Go, follow them, don't delay!

(going reluctantly) Farewell, sir, farewell!

And fare you well, my man.

(stopping) Sir, if I find myself beginning the life of a free man—I'll send you word of it—please do remember not to . . . desert me.

That is not my way.

Reflect, sir, now and then, upon my . . . fidelity to you. If you do this, sir, you will . . . finally know who your good and . . . bad servants are.

I know it now, I have often noted it.

But even though you've known it before, sir, you'll know it . . . to-day, especially. No, sir, I warrant that . . . later on you'll say all the more that I was a servant that just suited you this day.

Well, be off, now!
(turning away) I'll bear . . . whatever comes, sir.
Fare you well, then.

(EXIT, SHAKEN WITH EMOTION.

(calling after him) Once more, farewell! (reflectively) Before to-day's experience I always considered this fellow the worst sort of servant: but I find he is devoted to me. 9. ENTER A SLAVE BOY FROM THE HOUSE OF Periplectomenus.

(to those within) You needn't remind me. I remember my duty. Yes, I'll reach him, no matter where on earth he is! I'll track him down, I'll spare myself no pains!
(aside) He is looking for me. I'll up to the lad.

Oh, murder, murder!
Not yet; you anticipate.
(brandishing his knife) Shall I fly at the fellow now, sir?
Oh no, he must be clubbed, first of all.
Give him plenty, plenty! (all close in on him)
How did you dare seduce another man’s wife, you shameless villain?
I swear by the love of heaven, sir, she made the first advances!
(to a slave) He lies! Beat him!
Wait, sir, let me explain!
(to slaves) What makes you so slow? (they raise their cudgels)
Won’t you let me speak, sir?
Speak.
I was begged to go to her, sir.
But how did you dare go? There! Take that!
(flogs him with his cane, the slaves joining in, earnestly)
Ow-w-w! Oh, I’ve been clubbed enough! Oh, for heaven’s sake!
(very zestful) How soon shall I cut, sir?
When you like. (to the slaves who hold him) Spread him apart, stretch him out as far as he’ll go!

Out with them.

(g. What for?

(g. (hastily) You shall have it!

(o. That's wiser of you. As for your tunic and military cloak and sword, have no hopes of them, you won't get 'em. (to Periplectomenus) Shall I club him again, sir, or will you loose him now?

(g. (drearily) Really, sir, I've been beaten till I'm loose already. Have mercy!

(to slaves) Release the fellow. (they do so)

If I catch you here hereafter, you shall lose those witnesses.

[Exeunt Periplectomenus and slaves.]

(looking down the street) Ah, I see my servants!

Enter the slaves, back from the harbour.

Has Philocomasium set out already? Tell me, tell me!

Long ago.

Oh, damnation!

You'd say that all the more, if you knew what I know. Why, that chap with the woollen patch on his left eye was no sailor.

(startled) Who was he, then?

Philocomasium's lover.

How do you know?

I know. Why, they no sooner got outside the city gate than they fell to kissing and hugging each other.

(aside) Oh, poor fool that I am! I've been gulled, I see it now! It's Palaestrio, that scoundrel of a fellow, that enticed me into this trap! (pauses, then with dignity) My finding is, "A true bill." If other adulterers were so treated, adulterers would be fewer here, their apprehension would be greater, and their appetite for such affairs less.

(to slaves) Home we go. (to audience) Give us your applause.

ARGUMENT OF THE PLAY

Philolaches, in his father's absence, purchases and sets free the girl he loves, and runs through all his property. When the old gentleman returns, Tranio takes him in with a tale how his house was haunted by ghastly apparitions which long ago forced the family to leave it. A money-loving moneylender obtrudes himself and demands his interest. Again the old gentleman is made the butt, Tranio alleging that they had got a loan to make a payment on the house they had bought. Asked what house it was, Tranio said it was their next-door neighbour's. The old gentleman inspects it. Later, though stung by being made a laughing-stock, he is nevertheless appeased by his son's chum.

Scene:—Athens. A street in which stand the houses of Theopropides and Simo, an alley between them.

ACT I

ENTER Grumio, roughly dressed as a farm hand, from the house of Theopropides.

(very irate) You kindly come out of the kitchen, you ropes-end! Showing me how smart you can be amongst your saucepans! Come on out from the house there, you family vampire! By gad, once on the farm and I'll pay you back in fine shape, sure as I'm alive! Come out, I tell you, you stench, from the kitchen! What are you skulking for?

ENTER Tranio, dapper and debonair.

Why the devil are you making all this row out in front here? Think you are on the farm, do you? Away from the house with you! Off to your farm! Off and be hanged! Away from the doorway! There! (cuffs him) Is that what you were itching for?

(covering) Oh, oh-h! What are you hitting me for?

Oh, for living. All right, all right! But only let old master come back, only let him get safely back—the man you're eating out of house and home while he's away!

You neither tell the truth nor anything like the truth, you growth! How could anyone eat anyone out of his house, when he's not in it?

THE HAUNTED HOUSE

Oh, yes, you city swell, you public pet, you! So you're throwing the farm in my face, eh? And I reckon I know why, all right, Tranio—because you know you'll be landed in the mill before long. Within a few days, by gad, you'll be swelling our numbers on the farm and joining our ball-and-chain club! So now you've got the chance, and choose to do so, drink away, wreck the property, demoralize that fine young son of master's! Get fuddled day and night, live like Greeks, buy girls and set 'em free, feed parasites, go in for fancy catering! Are these the instructions the old master gave you when he went abroad? Is this how he'll find his property here has been attended to? Is this your notion of a good servant doing his duty—to ruin his master's estate and son, together? For ruined he is, I take it, from the sort of things he's going in for. Why, before, there wasn't a young fellow in all Attica that had his reputation for thrift, or led a cleaner life, while now he wins the prize the other way. And it's you and your teachings he can thank for it! What the devil do you mean by minding me or my affairs? At the farm, for heaven's sake, have you no cows to mind? I choose to drink my wine, to have my love affairs, to bring home girls. I take chances with my own hide thereby, not with yours. Listen to the cheek of him!

Oh, be damned to you! Phew! You smell of garlic! Ugh, you lump of native filth, you clod-hopper, he-goat, pig-sty, mixture of mire and manure!

Well, what do you expect? We can't all smell of imported perfumes, if you do, or dine at the head of the table, or live on the fat of the land like you. You just keep those squabs of yours and your fish and your game for yourself, and leave me to my garlic and my lot. Your lot is happy, mine is miserable. Very well, very well! So long as a good time is coming to me, and a bad time to you! You seem rather wrathy, Grumio, because I am having the good time, at present, and you the bad one. But that is quite as it should be—I am the man for the ladies, you for the lowing herd. Fine fare for me and husks for you is quite correct. Oh, I bet the hangmen will have you looking like a human sieve, the way they'll prod you full of holes as they run you down the streets with your arms on a cross bar, once the old man gets back! How do you know you may not come to that before I do?

Because I never deserved it, and you have, and do. (advancing) Well, save yourself some of that talk, unless you crave the honour of being badly beaten up.

(retiring) Are you folks going to give me some fodder to take to the cattle? Give it here, if you're not—eating. (dodging as Tranio advances on him) All right, go ahead, now that you've begun. Drink, live like Greeks, eat, gorge yourselves, kill the fatted calf!

Shut up, and be off to the farm! I want to go to the Piraeus and see about some fish for supper for myself. To-morrow I shall send someone to the villa with (emphatically) your fodder for you. (as Grumio bridles) What ails you? What are you scowling at me for now, gallowsbird?

By gad, that'll be your own name by and by, I'm thinking!
Dum interea sic sit, istuc actutum sino.

Yes, I see. But just you remember this—"Swifter come the things unwelcome, swifter far, than things we crave."
Stop annoying me this instant! Back to the farm! Vanish! By Jove, I will certainly be held up no longer by the like of you! [exit.
(looking after him, dourly) So he's gone, eh? And never cared a straw for what I said! Oh, good Lord, save us, for mercy's sake, and get our old master back from this three years' absence at once, before everything goes to smash—house and farm and all! Unless he does return, a few months will finish up the remaining remnants.
(looking down the street) But I'll be off to the farm now. For there's master's son—ruined, poor lad, and he used to be such a fine young fellow!
[exit.

Enter Philolaches, somewhat maudlin.

2. There's a matter I've been giving much . . . consideration and long thought, one I've been arguing out at length by myself. And I've been revolving this matter in my . . . mind—if I've got a mind—and debating, reasoning about it this long time. It's this—what I'm to think a man is similar to, when he's born, what is his . . . semblance. And now I've found this parallel.

A new . . . house, that's what I think a man is similar to, when he's born. I'll tell you my reasons for it.¹ And I know you . . . people there, when you hear what I say, won't say anything different, but admit it's exactly as I now aver. Listen while I let you hear how I... reason it all out. I want you to be as... well informed about it all as I am.

As soon as a house is all... complete, all finished off, constructed to a T, they... compliment the builder and commend the house. Everyone prays the owner for the... plan, everyone wants one like it for himself, and spares himself no expense and effort. But when some... slacker with a shiftless household, some slovenly good-for-nothing sluggard moves into that house, then the house suffers for it, being a good house, but badly... cared for. And then it often happens that a... storm comes and smashes the tiles and gutters. Then the shiftless owner refuses to replace them. Down comes a... rain, and runs right through the walls, oozes into 'em, rots the... timbers, ruins the builder's work. And now the house grows the worse for wear. And it's not the builder's fault at all, but this is the way with most people—if a thing can be repaired for sixpence, they... put it off and put it off and don't attend to it, till finally the walls cave in—and the whole house has to be rebuilt.

So much for... buildings. Now I want to go on and state why you should think men are similar to houses. Now in the first place, parents are the... builders of their children. They lay the foundations of their children's lives. They rear them, do their best to construct them... solidly, and spare nothing necessary to making them useful and ornamental as men and citizens. Money spent on this they don't count expense.
expoliunt: docent litteras, iura leges, sumptu suo et labore nituntur, ut alii sibi esse illorum similis expetant. ad legionem cum ita paratos mittunt, adminiculum eis danunt tum iam, aliquem cognatum suom. eatenus. abeunt a fabris. unum ubi emeritum est stipendium, igitur tum specimen cernitur, quo eveniat aedificatio. nam ego ad illud frugi usque et probus fui, in fabrorum potestate dum fui. postea quom immigravi ingenium in meum, perdidi operam fabrorum ilico oppido. venit ignavia, ea mihi tempestas fuit, mi adventu suo grandinem¹ attulit; haec verecundiam mi et virtutis modum deturbavit detexitque a me ilico; postilla optigere me neglegens fui. continuo pro imbre amor advenit,² is usque in pectus permanavit, permadefecit cor meum. nunc simul res, fides, fama, virtus, decus desernerunt: ego sum in usu factus nimio nequior. atque edepol ita haec tigna umide iam putent: non videor mihi sarcire posse aedes meas, quin totae perpetue ruant, cum fundamento perierint nec quisquam esse auxilio queat. cor dolet, cum scio ut nunc sum atque ut fui, quo neque industrior de iuventute erat quisquam nec clarior arte gymnastica: disco, hastis, pila, cursu, armis, equo ¹ Leo brackets following imbremque. ² Leo brackets following in cor meum.
They put on the finishing touches—teach them literature, the . . . principles of justice, law, expend their money and their labour in striving that others may pray for their own sons to be like them. So . . . constructed, they send them into the army, now at the last giving them as a support some kinsman of their own. So much for this. They leave the builders' hands. And after one campaign is served, then signs are seen how the building will turn out.

Myself, now—till then—while I was in the builders' hands, I was always a steady, serious-minded chap. But after I . . . moved into my own disposition, I ruined the builders' work instantly and entirely. A spirit of idleness came over me. That was my . . . storm. Coming upon me heavy with hail, it instantly beat down and bared me of my poor coating of modesty and morals. And after that I was too negligent to . . . re-cover myself. Presently, in place of rain, love came and kept dripping, dripping into my breast, drenching my very heart. And now my money and my credit, my reputation, character and good name all are gone together. I, also, have become very much the worse for wear. Yes, by heaven, these . . . timbers of mine, too, are all soaked and rotten now! And I seem unable to repair my house and keep it from . . . caving in entirely and falling in everlasting ruins, foundations and all, and not a soul can help me.

It makes me sick at heart to see what I am now, and what I was. Not one of our young fellows trained harder or was better known as an . . . athlete. Discus, spear, ball, running, victitabam volup,
parsimonia et duritia discipulinae aliis eram, optumi quique expetebant a me doctrinam sibi.
nunc, postquam nihil sum, id vero meopte ingenio repperi.

ENTER Philematium and Scapha with toilet articles from the house of Theopropides.

Gracious! I haven't enjoyed a cold bath more for ages! I do believe I never had a better scouring, Scapha, dear. (puzzled) What has that harvest got to do with my bath?

(lightly) No more than your bath has to do with the harvest.

(aside, seeing her) Oh, lovely queen of love! Here, here, is the storm that stripped me bare of all my covering of modesty! Then love and passion oozed into my breast, and now I can't re-cover it, ever. Now the walls of my heart are drenched, this house an utter ruin!

(prinking) Scapha, dear, do please look me over and see if this gown is really becoming. I do so want to please Philolaches, (fondly) my darling, my protector!

Why not wear just winsome ways for decoration, since you are so winsome yourself? It's not the gown a lover loves, but the gown's contents.

Oh, look, do look me over and see if this is becoming!

You’re so lovely yourself that whatever you have becomes you.

(soberly) I don’t want you to flatter me.

You’re a very silly girl, then. Oho! You’d rather be run down insincerely than sincerely admired? Goodness gracious, I much prefer a compliment, insincere or not, to sincere criticism, or to having folks make fun of my looks—indeed I do!

(quietly) I love sincerity, I want what is said to me to be sincere. I hate a liar.

I swear by your love for me, ma’am, by your Philolaches’ love for you, you’re simply charming!

THE HAUNTED HOUSE

Oh, do please show me what it is, if I'm making any mistake!
"Mistake"? I should say you were—the way you're all wrapped up in that one man and fairly worship him, without as much as looking at anyone else! This giving yourself up to one lover is all right for married women, but not for mistresses.

I (aside) Good Lord! Why, what sort of monster's at large in my house? May I be damned by all the powers above to death and torment, if I don't do that old hag to death, with hunger, thirst, and cold!
Scapha, I don't want any such wicked advice from you!
But you are silly, that's plain, to think he'll always be fond of you and nice to you for ever. I warn you—he'll leave you when you're older and he's colder.

(nistful) I hope not.
"More oft come true our hope-nots than our hopes." I tell you what, ma'am, if words can't convince you that my words are true, just look at facts. You see what I am now. And, oh, what I used to be! I was loved no less than you are now; I devoted myself to just one man—and he, oh well, when age came on and changed the colour of this head of mine, he left me, deserted me. That will be your case, too, I fancy.

I (aside) It's all I can do to keep from flying at her eyes, the fiend!
He spent his own money to set me free, just me, and just for himself. I feel I'm only doing what I ought in devoting myself to him, and just him.

THE HAUNTED HOUSE

1. (aside) Ye immortal gods! Now, isn't she a sweet, pure-hearted creature? By Jove, I did a good job, and it's glad I am to be a ruined man for her sake!
My goodness! Such a little stupid!
Why?
To care about his loving you.
"Care"? For mercy's sake, why shouldn't I?
You're free now. Now you've got what you were after. As for him, unless he still goes on loving you, he'll have thrown away all that money he paid out for you.

1. (aside) By gad, I'll be damned if I don't kill that woman off by inches! Trying to spoil the girl with her vile suggestions, the old bawdyslut!
I can't ever be grateful enough to him, never! And don't you try to make me think any less of him, Scapha.
But see you consider this one thing—if you give yourself up to him entirely now while you're young, you'll rue it bitterly when you're old.

1. (aside) Oh, if I could change to a quinsy, so as to catch that viper in the throat and kill her off, the foul old fiend!
I ought to feel the same affection, now I've obtained my wish, as I did when I used to pet him before I'd won it.

1. (aside) May Heaven work its will on me, if I don't set you free all over again for saying that—and also, if I don't kill Scapha!

Well, if you have a guarantee that he’ll be food for you eternally and be your own fond lover all your life, the thing for you is to put yourself at his sole disposal and—(almost venomous) fix up your hair for the wedding.¹

One is generally able to get money according to the sort of name one has. If I always keep a good name, I shall be rich enough.

₁. (aside) By Jove, now, even if it comes to selling my father, sold he shall be, much sooner than I’ll let you come to want or beggary while I’m alive! What’ll become of those other men that are in love with you? They’ll love me all the more when they see that I show gratitude to my benefactor.

₂. (aside, ecstatic) Oh, for news now of my father’s demise, so that I could disinherit myself of all I owned and make her my heir! All he has, anyhow, will soon be squandered—eating and drinking day and night, with no one giving a thought to thrift. Downright stuffing, I call it.

₃. (aside) Thrift? By gad, I’ll try it, for a fact, and try it first on you. Not a thing to eat or drink shall you have in my house for the next ten days!

₄. (firmly) If you wish to say something nice about him, do so. But if you go on abusing him, I swear you shall have a whipping directly!

₅. (aside) By gad, if I had made an offering of an ox to Jove Almighty with the money I paid out for her, it would never have been so well invested. You can see she loves me with all her soul. Oh, I’m a fine one! I’ve freed an advocate to plead my case for me.

THE HAUNTED HOUSE

I see you feel there's no one fit to hold a candle to Philolaches. So I'd rather agree with you, and not get whipped on his account.¹

Give me the mirror and the jewel casket. Quick, Scapha! I must be all got up when Philolaches comes, (reminiscently) the darling! (takes mirror and arranges her hair)

It's the woman that's dubious about her looks and years must use a mirror. What do you need of a mirror, when you yourself are the very mirror's own best mirror?

1. (aside) You shan't make such a pretty speech for nothing, Scapha. I'll certainly give you something for your very own—Philematium dear. Is everything all right—won't you look? Is my hair put up prettily enough? When you're pretty yourself, you can be positive your hair is pretty.

1. (aside) Bah! Can you mention anything worse than that woman there? Now she's all compliments, the slut! A moment ago she was all contradictions!

Give me the ceruse.

Ceruse, indeed! What for?

To rub on my cheeks.

You might as well expect to whiten ivory with ink.

7. (aside) Very neat—ivory and ink! Bravo, Scapha! Congratulations!

Well, then, give me the rouge.

No, I won't. Lots of sense you show! You want to daub fresh paint on a perfectly lovely picture?

¹ V. 247: If you have a guarantee that he'll be your friend forever.
non istane aetatem oportet pigmentum ullum attingere, neque cerussam neque melinum, neque aliam ullam officiam.

Phil. Cape igitur speculum.
Philol. Ei mihi misero, savium speculo dedit. nimis velim lapidem, qui ego illi speculo diminuam caput.
Sc. Linteum cape atque exterge tibi manus.
Phil. Quid ita, obsecro?
Sc. Vt speculum tenuisti, metuo ne olant argentum manus:
ne usquam argentum te accepisse suspicetur Philolaches.

Philol. Non videor vidisse lenam callidiorem ullam alteras. ut lepide atque astute in mentem venit de speculo malae.

Phil. Etiamne unguentis unguendam censes?
Sc. Minime feceris.
Phil. Quapropter?
Sc. Quia ecastor mulier recte olet, ubi nihil olet. nam istae veteres, quae se unguentis unetitant, interpoles, vetulae, edentulae, quae vitia corporis fuco occultunt, ubi sese sudor cum unguentis consociavit, ilico itidem olent, quasi cum una multa iura confudit cocus.
quid olant nescias, nisi id unum, ni male olere intellegas.

Philol. Vt perdocte cuncta callet. nihil hac docta doctius. verum illud esse maxima adeo pars vestrorum intellegit, quibus anus domi sunt uxores, quae vos dote meruerunt.
Girls of your age shouldn’t touch a bit of colour, or ceruse, Melian cream, or any other cosmetic. Here, then, take the mirror. (holds it close to her face for a final examination and then hands it to Scapha)

Pol. (aside) Blast it! She kissed the mirror! Oh for a stone to smash that mirror’s head with! Take a towel and wipe your hands.

For mercy’s sake, why?
(grinning) Now that you’ve held the mirror, I’m afraid your hand will smell of silver, and that’s something Philolaches mustn’t suspect you of taking from anyone.

Pol. (aside) I don’t believe I ever saw a sharper old bawd. Pretty neat—that idea about the mirror, and canny, too, the sinner!

Surely I should put on a little perfume, don’t you think?
Most certainly not.

Why?
Goodness me! Because a woman smells right when she doesn’t smell at all. Why, those ancient dames that pickle themselves in perfume, made-up crones without any teeth, that try to paint away their bodily blemishes—as soon as their perfume and perspiration come together, they smell the same as when a cook combines a lot of sauces. You can’t tell what they smell of, but you’re sure of one thing—they smell vile.

Pol. (aside) Oh, she’s a mighty wise one! She’s up to it all! There never was a wiser old wench! (turning to the audience) You know she’s right, most of you who have old dames at home for wives, that bought you with their dowries.

THE HAUNTED HOUSE

(after a few final adjustments) Here now, Scapha, do look over my jewellery, and gown, and see if it really is becoming. That shouldn’t be any concern of mine. Whose should it be, then, for goodness’ sake? Well—Philolaches’! So that he won’t buy anything except what he thinks suits himself. But what’s the use of showing off to him, unasked, something he doesn’t want to own? A pretty girl is prettier undressed than dressed in purple. For then she’s overdressed, if she’s really pretty.

1. (aside) I’m keeping hands off too long. (stepping up to them) What’s going on here? (in his arms) I’m getting all dressed up to please you.

1. (ogling her) Oh, you’re dressed enough! (to Scapha, gruffly) Be off inside with you, and take this (with a wave at the toilet accessories) frippery along. [Exit Scapha. But, my darling, my own Philematium, I’d love to have some wine with you. Oh, and I with you! For whatever you like, I like, my (snuggling closer) darling.

1. (rapturous) Ah! That word would come cheap at a hundred pounds. (smiling up at him) Well, give me fifty, there’s a dear! I want you to buy at a bargain.

1. (lightly) You owe me fifty still—tot it up, dear, if you like. It was a hundred and fifty I paid for you.

1 V. 286: Why, it’s his mistress’s favours a lover buys with jewels and purple.
2 V. 288: Purple belongs to shady years, jewels to ugly women.
3 Vv. 290–291: And then it’s no use being nicely dressed if one’s ways aren’t nice. Disgusting ways soil a pretty dress more than mud.
Phil. Cur exprobras?
Philol. Egone id exprobrem, qui mihi met cupio id opprobrier?

(hurt) Why do you throw that at me?
I throw it at you? When I long to have it thrown up to my own self? Why, I’ve not made such a fine investment anywhere for many a day.
(happily) And I’m sure I couldn’t do anything better with my love than give it to you, dear.

Then our books balance perfectly—you love me, and I love you, and both of us think that’s just as it should be. (looking, rapt, to heaven) And may those who rejoice with us rejoice forever at their own unending joys. And those who envy us—may absolutely no one ever envy them for their blessings.

drawing him to a couch) Come, then, take your place. to a slave within) Some water for our hands, boy! Put a small table here. And the dice—look for them. (to Philolaches) Would you like some perfume?
(his arm around her on the couch) What for? With essence of myrrh beside me!

ENTER SLAVE WITH TABLE, ETC.

(looking down the street) Is that my chum, though, rolling up here with his mistress? It is. It’s Callidamates, and that’s his mistress with him. Hurray, dearest! Look! The regiment’s assembling! Our pals are coming for part of the plunder!

4. ENTER Callidamates, VERY DRUNK, WITH Delphium AND A SLAVE.

(to slave) I... want you to... come to... Philolaches’... and get me... and... come in time. Mind... now! There! You’ve... got your... orders. [EXIT SLAVE.

(to the world at large) Well . . . the place where I . . . was, I . . . just cut and . . . ran from it, I got so . . . damn tired of the . . . company and . . . conversation. Now I'll go over to . . . Philolaches’s for . . . something to drink. They'll be . . . jolly and give us a . . . good time.

(to Delphium) Would you . . . say I . . . ma-ma-mat all drunk? (stops for her to survey him)

The same as usual. (pulling him along) You're delaying yourself. Here's (pointing to the house of Philolaches) the place to go to.

(leering at her) I'll hug . . . you, and you . . . hug me, d'ye . . . want to?

(patient) Very well, if you'd enjoy it.

(embracing her) You sweet . . . thing! Take my . . . arm, that's a . . . dear. (lurches)

See you don't fall. (getting a firmer hold on him) Stand up!

My o-o-only one! I'm your . . . baby . . . boy, honey dear!

Yes, but do see you don't sit down in the street, before we can get to that nice, soft couch where we can lie down together.

(sleepily) Let, let . . . me fall.

(struggling to keep him up) I'll certainly let this fall. (dropping a parcel she carries and pulling him to his feet) If you fall, you shan't fall without my falling with you.

Somebody'll find us lying here and . . . pick us both . . . up, after a . . . while.

The man is drunk!

(pulling away from her indignantly) You say I-m-m-m-drunk?

(placatingly) Do give me your hand. I certainly can't have you break your neck.

(stretching it out, unsteadily) There! Take it!
(leading him on) All right now, go along!
Where am I . . . to go?
Don’t you know?
(thinking) I know. It just . . . came to me.
Of . . . course! I’m going . . . home to have . . . something to drink.
No, no, you’re going there. (pointing to the house of Philolaches) (gravely sighting along her finger) Now I remember!
(to Philematium) You don’t mind if I go meet them, do you, precious? I think more of him than any friend I have. (gets up and goes toward pair) I’ll be back in a minute.
(tenderly) That minute will be hours to me!
(bawling in the direction of Philolaches’s house) Anyone at . . . home?
Here we are!
(embracing him) Fine! Philolaches! How . . . are you? You’re the . . . best friend I’ve . . . got in the world!

(steering him to the couch) God bless your soul! Here’s your place, old fellow! Where do you hail from?
(sinking down on the couch) Where you get . . . well drunk.
Come, come, Delphium dear, why don’t you settle down? (places her beside Callidamates. To the slave) Give him a drink.
(after draining the glass) Now I’m . . . going to sleep. (flops back on the couch)
(to Delphium, smiling) Nothing new or strange for him, is it?
What shall I do with him now?
Oh, leave him by himself just as he is, my dear.

ENTER Tranio in grim consternation. Stops at some distance from the house and rearranges a toppling load of parcels.

(to himself) Jove Almighty's after us, with all his might and main, bound he'll ruin me and young master Philolaches for good! Our Hope is dead; Confidence can't find standing room; not even Salvation herself can save us now, no matter if she yearned to! Such a mountain mass of misfortune and misery as I just now set eyes on at the harbour! Master's back from abroad, and Tranio's bound for ruin! (to the audience) Anyone anxious to make a bit of easy money by taking my place at an execution? Where are those valiant, fetter-offrictionacious young rawhides, or those bold chaps that for four bob will rush the ramparts of the foe where you generally get five or ten spears stuck through you at once? I'll give two hundred pounds to the first man to charge my cross and take it—on condition his legs and arms are double-nailed, that is. When this is attended to, he can claim the money from me cash down. But I—ain't I a cursed fool not to race off home on the run? (hurries on towards the house)

1. (seeing him) Here we are! Here are the provisions! Look! Tranio's back from the harbour! Philolaches!

Ol. Oh, what shall I do? This is awful! He'll be here soon and find me drunk, and his house full of revellers and women! Oh, it's an awful business—waiting till thirst has you by the throat before you dig your well! That's my fix—my father back and I just wondering what to do, poor fool!

(who has been meditating) Look at him (pointing to Calcidamates), will you? Head down again and gone to sleep! Stir him up!

7. It's all up with me!
Hush, hush! I'm the man to think you up a sedative for all this. Will you be satisfied, if I fix it so that when your father arrives, he'll not only keep out of the house, but take to his heels out of its neighbourhood, too? (to slaves) Inside with you fellows now, yes, and clear away this stuff (indicating the table, etc.), and be quick about it!

7. Where shall I be?
Where you like best to be—with this girl, with that one.
Suppose we go away from here, then?
(confidently) Not an inch, Delphium! No, and you're not to drink a drop the less inside there because of this.

7. Oh dear! I'm all a sweat from fear what this smooth talk of yours will end in!
(sternly) Can't you keep cool and do what I tell you?
(cowed) Yes, yes!
First of all, Philematium, you go inside, and you, too, Delphium.
(going) We'll do anything you like, both of us.
[exeunt.

I hope to heaven you will! (to Philolaches, who is gazing anxiously down the street) Here, you! Your attention at once, while I tell you what I want seen to! In the first place, now, have the house all shut up. And mind you don't let anyone breathe a word inside.

And no one is to answer when the old man knocks at the door.

(shuddering) Anything . . . else?

(thinking) The front door key—have that brought out to me directly. I intend to lock the house up from the outside.

(forlornly) I'm putting myself and my hopes in your hands, Tranio! [Exit.]

(complacent) It doesn't matter a feather's-weight whether it's patron or client who's the better man. Why, a fellow without a bit of nerve in his chest can make a mess of things easily enough, on the shortest notice. But it takes a mighty smart man to see to it that all the mess that's planned and perpetrated turns out nicely, without landing him in such trouble that he's sorry he's alive. And that's what I'll do—fix it so that all the storm we've raised here will absolutely clear away and quiet down, without bringing us a bit of discomfort.

ENTER A SLAVE FROM THE HOUSE.

But what are you coming out for, Sphaerio?

(showing a key) You'll soon—

(grandly) Very good! You have obeyed orders. He told me to beg you my very best to frighten his father away somehow from coming in upon him.

Well now, you just tell him this—that I shall see to it he does not dare give that dwelling so much as a glance, but cover his head and take to his heels in an awful funk. Come, the key! (takes it)

1 Laconicam—a key fashioned for locking a door from the outside, rather than from the inside, as was usual.

THE HAUNTED HOUSE

Inside with you, and lock up! I shall lock up from the outside.

[Exit Slave, Tranio locks the door. Now let him come! It's a royal send-off I'll give the old chap to-day, while he's alive and with us—which is more than he'll ever get when he dies, I'm thinking. I'll just drop back from the door (stands in the alley by Simo's house) and keep a look out, from over here, for my chance to load the old boy up when he arrives.

Scene 2. Enter Theopropides, followed by slaves with his luggage.

(dryly) I am deeply grateful to you, Neptune, for letting me get away home with a bit of life left in me. But if you ever hear of my going one foot's-breadth on the billows after this I give you leave to go straight ahead and do what you wished to do with me this time. Avaunt! Avaunt, now and forevermore! I've trusted you with all I mean to trust you.

(aside) Gad, Neptune, you made a big mistake in letting go such a fine chance!

(approaching his house) Here I am, home from Egypt after three years! And a welcome arrival I'll be to my household, I fancy.

(aside) An arrival we could welcome much more, by gad, would be that of a man with news of your death!

(trying to open the door) But what does this mean? The door locked in broad daylight! I'll knock.

(does so) Hey! Anyone inside? Open up, will you?

(stepping out, with a horrified air) Who's the man who got near our house?

(doing so) It's perfectly safe.

THE HAUNTED HOUSE

The master here overpowered his guest and (suddenly clutching Theopropides's arm, to his discomfiture) murdered him! That fellow who sold this house to you, in my opinion!

Murdered him?

And robbed him of his gold—his guest!—and buried him—his guest!—here, here in the house!

What makes you suspect that all this happened? Listen, and I'll tell you. (after peering about, warily) One night when your son had dined out, after he got back home from the dinner, we all went to bed. We fell fast asleep. I happened to have forgotten to put out the light. And then, all of a sudden, he let out a frightful (loudly) yell!

(with a start) Who? Who? Not my son?

Sh-h-h! Keep quiet! Just listen! He said that in his sleep that... dead man came to him!

(regaining some of his composure) Oh, so it was in his sleep, then?

Yes. But just you listen! He said that... dead man spoke these words to him.

In his sleep?

(irate) It is odd he didn't speak to him when he was wide awake, considering he's been killed these sixty years! You are an awful dunderhead at times, Theopropides!

(meekly, impressed by Tranio's tremendous earnestness) I'll say nothing.

But hear what that dead man told him in his sleep, sir—(melodramatically) "Diapontius am I, a guest from o'er the sea. Here do I abide, this house is the abode allotted me. For Orcus hath denied me entrance into Acheron, I having been..."

cut off before my time. I trusted, and I was betrayed. Here was I murdered by my accursed host, for the sake of gold, and in this very house did he give me secret, unhallowed burial. (aside) Damnation! Those people in there will soon be dishing this whole performance! Lord! I'm horribly afraid he'll catch me at it! What's that you're muttering there? (comes nearer)

I have nothing to fear. I am at peace with the dead.

Tell me why you're breaking off the conversation. (more loudly) Be gone! Be gone!
What possesses you, Tranio? Who are you saying all that to?
(turning in surprise) For heaven's sake, it wasn't you that called, sir: Lord love me, I thought that dead man was getting savage because you knocked at the door! (listens intently, Theopropides watching him with renewed nervousness; then in sudden alarm) But you (Theopropides gives a start)—you're still standing here? Not minding what I say? What shall I do? Run! Cover your head! And don't look back! (scared, but somewhat suspicious) Why don't you run, yourself? I am at peace with the dead. I see. But how about a moment ago? Why were you in such a panic then?
(still listening at the door) Don't bother about me, sir, I tell you. I'll look out for myself, all right. (listens more intently; a look of horror comes over his face; he leaps into the air with a screech) Run, run, for all you're worth, as you began! And call on Hercules!

THE HAUNTED HOUSE

(aside, seeing him) Oh, my Lord! I'm in a most everlasting mess now, and no mistake! There's the moneylender that let us have the cash to buy the girl and run the house with! Everything's out, unless I get the start and hit on some way of keeping the old man in the dark. I'll go meet the fellow. (glancing down the street in the opposite direction and seeing Theopropides) But what on earth is he coming home so soon for? I'm afraid he's got wind of this! I'll up and at him! (going to meet him) But, oh dear, I am in an awful funk! There's nothing more awful than a guilty conscience—and mine does bother me! Well, no matter what's up, I'll keep on complicating things. That's what the case demands.

ENTER Theopropides.

Where have you been, sir?

(scrutinizing him) I have met the man I bought this house from.

You didn't tell him anything about what I told you, sir?

Indeed I did, by Jove,—everything.

(in a low tone) Oh dear, this is the very devil! I'm afraid my scheme has gone to smash everlastingly!

What are you saying to yourself?

(hurriedly) Why, nothing. But tell me, sir, did you tell him, really?

I did, I say—everything from beginning to end.

And he confesses about the guest, eh?

He does not. He denies it utterly.

The villain denies it?

Denies it up and down, I say.

Think again, sir! Doesn't he admit it?

(seeing him) Aha! There's Philolaches' servant, Tranio! Neither principal nor interest do I get from those two!

(as Tranio edges toward Misargyrides) Whither away?

(stopping) Oh, nowhither. (aside) Lord! but I'm an unlucky rascal! It was an evil star I was born under! He'll catch me now while the old man's here! Lord! but I am an unlucky chap—the way they're hounding me right and left! But I'll board him first. (advances toward Misargyrides)

(aside) See him grin! He's fooling himself.

(aloud) A very good day to you, Misargyrides.

Good day! How about the money?

Kindly get out, you beast! The minute I get in range, you open fire on me!

(disappointedly, seeing no sign of a wallet) There's nothing in this fellow.

There's second sight in this fellow, that is sure.

Come, drop that chaffing, will you?

Come, tell me what you want.

By the Lord, I certainly will yell!

See here, you pay me my interest! Why all this trifling?

(sarcastically) Splendid, by Jove! You certainly—

THE HAUNTED HOUSE

Oh, for the love of heaven, sir, tell us to throw that money in his face, the filthy beast!
Tell you——?
Tell us to pound his face in with the money, will you, sir?
(grinning) I won't be bothered a bit by pounds of money.
D'ye hear him? By the Lord, now! Isn't he just the sort to be a moneylender, the worst pack of rascals living?
(sternly) I am not concerned with who he is, or what he is, or where he's from. What I want to be told, what I'm anxious to know, is what that money is.
(floundering) It's—well, Philolaches owes him a little something.
How little?
About—er—two hundred pounds. Of course you surely can't think that's much, sir, surely.
(more sternly) It's a "little something," indeed! Beside, there's interest due to him, too, I understand.
Two hundred and twenty pounds, sir, altogether, principal and interest, both.
Exactly! I'm not claiming any more.
(who is casting about for an inspiration) By gad, I just wish you would claim one penny more! (to Theopropides) Tell him you'll pay him, sir, and get rid of him.
Tell him I'll pay him?
Tell him, sir. I?

Answer me—what has become of this money?
Oh, it’s secure.
Well, secure it yourselves, then, if it’s secure.
(the inspiration arriving) Your son has bought a house, sir.
A house?
A house.
(growing pleased) Ah, that lad’s capital! A chip of the old block! Quite a business man already!
A house, you say?
Yes, sir, a house! D’ye know what kind of a house, though?
How should I?
(admiringly) Whew-w-w!
What about it?
Oh, don’t ask me, sir!
Eh? Why not?
It would dazzle a mirror, sir! Simply stunning!
Bless my soul, that’s fine! Er—how much did it cost him?
Three hundred pounds, sir,—times the sum of you and me.¹ But this two hundred was in part payment. And he got the money from this fellow. (indicating Misargyrides) Is it all clear, now, sir? You see, after this house turned out as I told you, he bought himself another at once.
Bless my soul, well done!
Hey there! It’s getting nigh noon!
(outraged) For mercy’s sake, pay him off, sir, or he’ll splutter the life out of us!
(to Misargyrides, with dignity) You are to deal with me, young man.
You mean I’m to look to you for my money?
Yes, look for it to-morrow.

(going) I'm off—well off, if I get it to-morrow.

[EXIT.]

(aside) Get hanged to-morrow! I hope to heaven he does, the way he all but sent my plans to pot! By gad, you can't find a more disgusting, or less honourable, class of men than these moneylenders! Whereabouts is the house my son bought?

(aside) Aha! Here I am, floored!
Are you going to answer me?
I will, sir. But . . . I'm trying to get hold of the owner's name.

Come on, then, think of it.

(aside) Now what shall I do—unless I pass it off on our next door neighbour here, and say his son bought this house? By Jove, the best kind of lie, so I've heard, is a red hot one. Here goes! I'll give him whatever the gods give me to say!

Well now? Have you thought of it yet?

The devil take that fellow! (aside) Or, better, this fellow! (aloud) It's your next door neighbour's house here that your son bought, sir.

Honestly?

Why, yes, honestly, if you pay the bill, but not if you don't, sir. But didn't he buy in a jolly fine quarter, sir?

"Fine?" The very best! Bless my soul, I'm eager to look over this house! Come, knock at the door and call someone out, Tranio.

(aside) Aha! Here I am, floored again! Now I don't know what to say! Driven up again against the same old rock! What now? By gad, what I'm to do now I can't imagine! I'm caught in the act!

Come, quick! Call someone out and ask him to take us round. (advances toward house) (desperate) Oh, I say, sir! Why, there are ladies here. We've got to see whether they're willing or not, first.

(listening and looking) Good! Splendid! Here's the owner of the house, Simo himself, coming out! I'll just step back here, (stations himself in the alley) while I summon my wits to a senatorial session in my chest. Then when I've hit on a plan of action, I'll at him.

An after-luncheon snooze is no good. Lord deliver me! I sneaked away and slipped out. She's in there all boiling over at me, I know that.

You know now what I mean. (approvingly—and receptively) That's the way! Be good to yourself! Yes, and reflect how short life is. What? Oho! I didn't quite understand you—these doings of ours, you mean. I tell you! That's a life in the elegant style, just what it should be! With your wining and dining...fancy food...choice fish...ah, that's living!

That was living, you should say, sir. That's all over for us, now, everything at once. Why, how's that?
We're a total wreck, Simo, the whole lot of us. Don't talk like that! Everything has been going smoothly for you all this time.

Quite right—I'm not denying that. We've certainly had the tiptop life we wanted. But how the wind has failed our ship now, Simo!

What do you mean? In what way?
The very worst!
A ship that was hauled up safe on shore?
Ugh!

What's wrong?
Lord help me! I am a wrecked man!
How so?
Because a ship has come to ram our craft.

Not a glimmer, sir.
He hasn't given his son a blowing up?
He's serene as any summer's day, sir. And just now he told me to ask you most urgently to allow him to inspect this house of yours.

Oh yes, sir, I know that. But the old fellow wants to build women's apartments on to his own house here, and baths, and a walk, and a portico.
Well, what sort of a dream has he had?
It's this way, sir. He wants to get his son married as soon as possible. That's why he wants new women's apartments. And he says some architect or other has praised your house to him as being awfully well built. So now he wants to take it for a model, if you don't mind. He's all the keener, you see, sir, for taking it as a model because he has heard you're so wonderfully shaded there during the dry summer weather, all day long.

It's just as I tell you. But he wants to inspect it, just the same, sir. Let him, if he likes. If there's anything that suits him, he can use my house for a model and build away.

Shall I go and call him here, sir?
Go call him. (aside, approaching Theopropides) They say the great Alexander and Agathocles were a pair that did mighty big things. How about myself, for a third, with the immortal deeds I'm doing, single-handed? This old chap (indicating Simo) is carrying a pack, and this other one (indicating Theopropides, who is still admiring the house) is carrying another. A new line, this, I've organized, and it's not half bad—why, your mule drivers have their pack mules, but I have pack men! And how you can load 'em! They carry anything you stuff 'em with! (aside, seeing Theopropides is still rapt) I wonder if I ought to have a word with him now. Yes, I'll have at him! (aloud) I say, Theopropides! Eh? Who's that calling me?

Come then, move, lead the way!

He does? Why?

He begs me to persuade Philolaches to let him have it back.

That's a fact.
Well then, sir, don't seem to have the laugh on him or to be over-eager. I shouldn't mention having bought the place.
I see. That's certainly a good suggestion, and one, I think, that shows fine feeling. (to Simo) Well?

That's very kind and considerate of you, I'm sure. Oh, you're quite welcome! ¹

Fifteen pounds for the pair of them, besides the freight.
Bless my soul! They’re in very much worse condition than I at first supposed!
How’s that, sir?
Well, well! Because a worm has been at work on the base of both of them.
They (slyly indicating the old gentlemen) were felled out of season, I fancy; that’s what ails them. They’re all right enough even now, though, with the help of a coat of tar. It wasn’t any slopwillling foreigner did this job, I tell you, sir. Do you see those door joints?

(going to the other side of Theopropides) Well then, sir, look that way (pointing vaguely) toward yourselves, and since you can't distinguish the crow, see if you can't, perhaps, discover the vultures.

(following instructions without profit, then impatiently)

No picture of a bird at all do I perceive here, so have done with it!

All right, sir, I'll let it pass, and make allowances. Your eyesight isn't what it used to be.

I'm mightily pleased with everything I can see, that's sure.

Well now, you'll find it worth your while to look about still further.

Yes, yes, a good suggestion!

(calling to a slave within) Hey, boy! Take this gentleman over the house, all the rooms. I'd take you in myself, you see, except for having business at the forum.

None of that taking in for me! Whatever it is, I had rather go wrong than have anyone take me in.

(with a wink at Tranio) In the house, I mean.

Well, I'll go in, then, without anyone taking me in.

All right, all right!

I'll go inside then. (makes toward door)

(winking at Simo) Hold on, sir, please! Let me see whether the dog——

(halting, very abruptly) Yes, yes, do see!

(in the doorway) S-s-st! Get out, you cur! S-s-st! Get out, damn you! Get to the devil out of this! What! You won't budge? S-s-st! Get out of that!

There's no danger. Come, come, now! She's as gentle as any bitch in pup. You can go on in boldly as you please. Well, I'm off to the forum.

Now, now, sir, do look and see how quietly she's lying there—unless you choose to seem a fussy coward!

ACT IV

ENTER Phaniscus.

(smugly) Slaves that stand in awe of a thrashing, even while they're free from fault, they're the ones that are apt to be useful to their masters. For when those that stand in awe of nothing, have once earned a thrashing, the course they take is idiotic. They train for racing. But when they're caught they earn and save more welts from whips than they ever could earn and save from tips. Their income grows from almost nothing till they become regular rawhide kings. But personally, my plan is to beware of welts before my back begins to pain me. I feel it desirable to keep a whole skin, as I have hitherto, and debar drubbings. If I only control this article (surveying his pilfering left hand), I'll keep well roofed, and when it's raining welts on the rest of 'em, I won't get soaked. For a master's generally what his slaves choose to make him. If they're good, he's good; if they're bad, he gets

'When they're called on to fetch their master home, it's: "I'm not going, don't bother me! I know what your hurry is—itching to be out somewhere! Oh yes, you mule, now you want to be off to pasture!" That's all the thanks I got from them for being dutiful. I left 'em. Here I am, the only one of the whole gang to see master home. To-morrow, when he finds it out, he'll give 'em a morning dose of cattle hide. Oh well, I consider their backs of less consequence than mine. They'll go in for tanning long before I do for roping. (laughing) Gad! He ought to know his own pillow!

If you were sober, you wouldn’t say such nasty things.

Am I to mind you when you won’t mind me?

(moving on) Well, come along with me to meet master, you riff-raff. And for heaven’s sake, drop that sort of talk now!

I will, and take a crack at the door. (pounding on it furiously) Hey! Anyone here to defend this door from assault? Anyone going to open up? (listens) No one’s coming out from here, that’s sure! They’re just what you’d expect of good-for-nothings! (pounds still more furiously, then listens again) But I must be more careful, or someone may come out and make a mess of me.

(they step aside)

3. ENTER Tranio and Theopropides from Simo’s house.

What do you think of this for a bargain, sir?

I’m delighted, delighted!

You don’t think it cost too much?

By gad, I know I never saw a house thrown away anywhere, if this one wasn’t now!

So you’re quite satisfied, sir?

Quite satisfied? Lord, Lord, man! I’m supersatisfied, and that’s a fact!

How about those women’s apartments? And the portico?

Awfully fine! Really, I don’t think there is a public portico any bigger.

As a matter of fact, sir, I myself, and Philolaches, measured all the public porticoes.

Well, what about it?

It’s the longest of all, by a long way.

THE HAUNTED HOUSE

Ye immortal gods! What a lovely bargain! By Jove, if he should come and offer me a cool eighteen hundred pounds for it, cash down, I would never take it.

By Jove, sir, and if you yearn to take it, I'll never let you.

Our money is well invested in such a bargain!

Own up frankly, sir, that it all came of my prompting and persuasion. It was I compelled him to go to a moneylender and borrow the sum we gave him in part payment.

You saved the whole ship! So four hundred pounds are due to him, then?

Not a penny more, sir.

He can have it to-day.

By all means, sir, so that he'll have no excuse to back out. Or you might pay it over to me, and then I'll see he's paid.

(surveying him sharply) Only there must be no catch in it for me, if I should give it to you.

(wounded) Would I ever dare deceive you, sir, in word or deed, even in fun?

And would I ever dare not be on my guard against you, against trusting you with anything?

What? Have I ever tricked you at all, sir, since I've been in your service?

Hm! I have been precious well on my guard. You can thank me and my good sense for your rectitude. I show sufficient wisdom, if I simply guard against you alone.

(aside) I agree with you.

Now be off to the farm, and tell my son that I have arrived.

Anything you say, sir.

(living again at Theopropides's door) Well! Not a sound from the party in here, as there always has been! (Pinacium joins him) And I don't hear any music girl singing, or anyone else, either.
(aside, seeing them) What does that mean? What are those fellows after at my house? What do they want? What are they looking in for?
I'll keep on dinging at the door. (banging it) Hey, unlock! Hey, Tranio, open up, will you?
(aside) What sort of show is this?
Open up, will you! We've come for our master, Callidamates!
(advancing, but stopping at a safe distance) Hey, you boys! What are you up to there? What are you battering down that house for?
(after another series of bangs) Hey, you old man! What are you asking questions for, about what's none of your business?
None of my business?
Not unless you chance to be a newly elected prefect, to poke and pry and look and listen in other folks' affairs.
That house you're in front of is my affair.
What's that? (to Pinacium) Philolaches hasn't sold the house now? Or is that old man merely bediddling us?
I am stating the facts. But what is your business here?

Your master at a party here?

That's what I say.

You're joking, boy!

And we've come to get him.

Whom?

Our master. For mercy's sake, how many times must you be told?

But, boy, no one lives here! (scrutinizing him) Yes, you do seem to be a good lad.

Doesn't young Philolaches live in this house here?

He did, but he moved out long ago.

The old chap's surely ripe for the asylum.

You're making a bad mistake, father. For unless he has moved out to-day, or yesterday, I know for certain he does live here.

Why, nobody has lived here for six months now.

You're dreaming!

I?

Yes, you!

Don't be impertinent, you! Let me talk with him (indicating Phaniscus). No one lives here.

Well, he does, that's sure, for yesterday and the day before, and the day before, and the day before, and the day before—why, from the very time his father went abroad there's never been a three-days' stretch without a spree.

(troubled) What's that you say?

That there hasn't been a three-days' halt in the eating and drinking and wenching, in leading the gay life and bringing in lute girls and flute girls.

(more troubled) Who was doing all this?

Philolaches.

What Philolaches?

m.
In this house, yes.

Boy, boy, you're more muddle-headed than you look! Just consider now whether you didn't happen to drop in somewhere for a snack and drink a wee bit too much.

m.
(warmly) What's that?
I say it just to warn you from coming to the wrong house by mistake.

m.
I know the way I should go, and I know the place I've come to. Philolaches lives here. His father's Theopropides. And after his father went away on a trading trip, he set free a music girl.

(with a start) Philolaches? Really?

m.
Just so—and her name's Philematium.

(feverishly) How much?
m.
Three thousand.

(appalled) Pounds?
m.
Non, par dieu! Shillings.

He set her free?
m.
Indeed he did, rather! For a hundred and fifty pounds.

You say a hundred and fifty pounds were spent for a mistress for Philolaches?

That's what I say.

And he freed her?

THE HAUNTED HOUSE

Has Tranio done anything?
No! He has done me out of everything! Oh, the outrageous way he took me in to-day!
What’s that you say?
It’s just as I tell you—he everlastingly took me in to-day! (after a moment’s thought) Now do please be a good fellow and let me have your help and services.
What do you want?
Come over to your house with me, I beg you.
All right.
Give me the use of your slaves and some straps.
Help yourself.
I’ll let you know about it all on our way—the absolute and utter fool he made of me this day!

[exeunt into Simo’s house.

ACT V

ENTER Tranio, disgusted.

A man that’s timid in a crisis isn’t worth a stiver—but bless me if I can explain what a stiver is! Now after master sent me to the farm to summon his son, I slipped off that way (pointing) through the alley to our garden, and the garden gate in the alley—I opened it, and led out all our forces, male and female, that way. After I had got my troops safely out from under siege, I considered it wise to call a council of my comrades. But as soon as I called it, they crowded me out of the council.

Seeing they’re selling me out in my own market, I’m losing no time in doing what most other folks do when affairs look alarming and muddled—they go on muddling 'em still more, so that they can't be settled at all. For I'm well enough aware that this can't possibly be kept from the old man now. There's not another friend or . . . for the sake of . . . the man who . . . at the same time to master. I'll preoccupy the ground, forestall 'em, and strike a treaty. But I'm delaying myself. (moves on, then stops, listening) Eh? What's this creaking of our neighbour's door?

ENTER Theopropides INTO Simo's doorway.

Oho! It's my master? I'd like to sample his conversation. (steps back into the alley) (to slaves within) Stand there where you are, just inside, ready to spring out the second I call. Then, quick! Clap on the handcuffs! (coming out) I'll wait for that funnyfooler of mine in front of the house, and sure as I'm alive, I'll soon make his hide look funny!

(aside) The cat's out! Now, Tranio, you had better see what to do.

I must play him cleverly and artfully when he arrives. I won't show him the hook all at once, but let out line gradually. I'll pretend not to know a thing about the matter.

(aside) Oh, such a slyboots! You cannot name a cleverer chap than he is in all Athens. Why, that chap is no more to be bamboozled by anyone than a—lump of rock. I'll up and have at him!

(advances) (not seeing him) Now I should like him to come along!

1 Verses 1056–1060 are hopelessly fragmentary.

THE HAUNTED HOUSE

(aloud) Well, well, sir, if it's me you're looking for, here I am, face to face with you.
Bravo, Tranio. How goes it?
The farmers come from the farm, sir. Philolaches will arrive shortly.
And an opportune arrival for me, by Jove! This neighbour of ours, in my opinion, is a bold, bad man.
How so, sir?
Because he denies knowing you people.
Denies it?
And denies your ever having given him a single penny.
Oh, get out, sir! You're fooling me! I don't believe he denies it.
What now?
I know—now you're joking. Good Lord! Of course he doesn't deny it!
You're wrong. I swear he does deny it, positively, as well as having sold this house to Philolaches.
Now, now, sir! You don't mean to say he denied being given the money?
Man alive, he agreed to take oath, if I wished, that he had neither sold this house nor been given the money.¹ . . . That is the very thing I said to him.
What did he say?
He agreed to give me all his slaves for cross examination.²
Bosh! Never a one will he give, by gad!
Oh, yes he will.
Come on, sir, go to court with him. Let me find him. (makes off)

THE HAUNTED HOUSE

Wait! (Tranio stops) I'll try his slaves, I think. (pauses, as if debating the question) Yes, that's what I'll do.

(edging over toward the altar in front of Simo's house) No, no, sir! You bring the fellow to me. Or else order your son to make formal demand for the house from him.

No, no! First I want to take his slaves for cross examination.

(close to the altar) The very thing, by gad, I do believe!

(very guilelessly) Well then, what if I should call them out?

(with a knowing grin) You should have done that earlier! Meanwhile, I'll just occupy this altar.

(seats himself upon it jauntily) (trying to hide his discomfiture) Why so?

You have no sense, sir. Why, so that the slaves he gives you to cross-examine can't take refuge at it. I'll keep guard for you here and prevent the examination from falling through.

(as gently as possible) Get up!

Oh no, sir!

Don't occupy the altar, for heaven's sake!

Why not?

I'll tell you. (hesitates) Why, . . . because . . . that's (inspired) just what I most want—for them to take refuge there! Let them! Then it will be all the easier for me to get the judge to award me damages.

You follow your first plan, sir. Why go on sowing trouble for yourself? Don't you know how ticklish a thing it is to go before a judge, sir?

Get up and come here, then. There's something I want your advice on.

(making himself more comfortable) Well, I can give my advice from here, just as I am. I'm a whole lot wiser sitting down. Besides, advice is more reliable coming from a holy place.

Get up! No nonsense! Come, look me in the face. (does his best to put on a kindly expression)

(chuckling) I have, already. (looks at him)

(genially) You see?

I do. (chuckling again) If a third man came between us, he'd die of starvation.

How is that?

(breaking into a guffaw) Because there'd be no pickings for him. We're both so devilish sly!

Oh, damnation!

What ails you?

You bamboozled me!

Really? How?

You cleaned me out in fine fashion!

(surveying Theopropides's nose) Do please see if I did a good job, sir. No mucus running, is there?

Oh, no! You cleaned out all the brains from my cranium! I tell you, I've uncovered all your rascality from the roots up; yes, by Jove, and not only from the roots up, but from the roots down.

Well, I'll never accommodate you by leaving this place unless I like, you can count on that.

I'll soon have you in a circle of firewood and flames, you gallowsbird!

I wouldn't. Folks find me tastier boiled than baked.

THE HAUNTED HOUSE

Oh, one with feet, hands, with fingers, ears, eyes, lips.

(stamping and chafing) That's not what I asked you! Well, that's not what I'm answering you. (looking down the street) Aha, though! I see your son's chum, Callidamates, sauntering up here. Treat with me in his presence, if you want anything.

ACT 2.

ENTER Callidamates.

(to himself, drowsily) After I'd buried my souse in slumber and slept it all off, Philolaches told me about his father being back from abroad and how his slave made a fool of him when he arrived. Said he was afraid to up and face his father. So now I've been selected as sole spokesman from our fraternity to make his peace for him with the old gentleman. (sees Theopropides) And there he is! Splendid! (rushes up and grasps his hand) Well, well, sir! And it's glad I am to see you well, on your return from abroad, Theopropides! You must have dinner with me to-day! Do!

(stiffly) Heaven bless you, Callidamates. As for the dinner, no, thanks.

Why won't you come, sir?

(cheerily) Accept. I'll go in your place, if you don't care about it.

Still jeering, are you, you whipstock? Just because I offer to go to dinner in your place? Well, you won't go! I'll have you carried, as you've deserved—to a cross.

Oh, now, now, sir! drop all that and say you'll come to me for dinner!

A man without any brains came along, and scared me half to death. (to Theopropides) Now state what I’ve done. Here’s an arbitrator (indicating Callidamates) for both parties now. Come on, present your case.

(struggling with his emotions) I say you corrupted my son.

(easily) Just you listen to me. I admit he caroused, set his mistress free, while you were gone, got money at interest—and got rid of it, I don’t mind adding. Has he done anything different than (with a wave toward Callidamates) sons of the best families do?

Well, well! I must look out for you, with that wily, wily tongue of yours!

(to Tranio) Come now, let me judge the case. Get up! I am the man to sit there.

By all means! Take the case in your own hands.

(as Callidamates perches himself on the altar, crowding him off) I say! This is a case of being taken in!

(aside to Callidamates) See that I have nothing to be afraid of, and do my fearing for me, yourself!

The most galling thing about it all is the way he made a fool of me!

A good job, by gad, and I’m glad I did it. Men of your age ought to have some sense in their hoary heads.

(to Callidamates, and glaring at Tranio) What shall I do now?

Well, if you’re a friend of Diphilus or Philemon, tell ’em how your servant gulled you. You’ll have furnished ’em with the best dupe scenes on the comic stage.

THE HAUNTED HOUSE

(vainly attempting to wither Tranio). Very well.

(to Theopropides) Sir, you know that I am your son's best friend. He appealed to me, for he was ashamed to appear in your presence, with the things on his conscience he knows you know of. Now I beseech you, sir, do forgive him for his folly and his youth. He's your own son. And you know that young fellows are always playing such pranks. Whatever he did, he did along with the rest of us. We're all at fault. As for the interest, principal, and all the expense of buying the girl, we'll club together and settle for it all at our own expense, not yours.

(especially pleased by the peroration) A more persuasive spokesman than you couldn’t have come to me. I'm not angry with him now, I don't hold anything against him. No indeed, let him love, drink, do what he likes, before my very eyes. If he's ashamed of this—ashamed of having spent all that money—I'll call that sufficient chastisement.

He's awfully ashamed, sir.

(yawning obstreperously) Well, he's forgiven—what about me now?

You shall be flogged, strung up and flogged to tatters!

(with mock plaintiveness) And no matter if I am ashamed?

By the Lord, I'll be the death of you, sure as I'm alive!

Make it a general pardon, sir. Come, come, forgive Tranio this offence, for my sake! There's not another thing I wouldn't sooner grant you than forgo sending that devil down to what his deviltry deserves!

Come, come, let him off!
Let that rascal off? (as Tranio strikes an insolent attitude) D’ye see that pose? The criminal!
Tranio! Quiet down, if you have any sense!
And you keep quiet yourself, about this request now. As for him, I'll reduce him to quiescence with a whip.
(casually) Uncalled for, I assure you.
Oh, come now, do grant this favour I ask.
I don’t want you to ask it.
There, there now! I beg you!
I don’t want you to ask it, I say.
It’s no use your not wanting it. Just this one offence—let it pass, I beg you, for my sake.
Why so reluctant? As if I shouldn’t be committing another offence by to-morrow! Then you can settle the score handsomely for both of ’em, this one and the next.
(as Theopropides almost smiles) Do let me prevail upon you, sir!
(to Tranio) All right, get out, get out! I'll let you off. But there’s the man (indicating Callidamates) to thank for it. (coming forward) Spectators, our play is over. Give us your applause.

THE PERSIAN

Scene:—Athens. A street, in which are the houses of Dordalus and Toxilus's master, an alley between them.

ACT I

ENTER Toxilus, in low spirits, from the forum.

The lover that first set out on the highways of love with an empty purse went in for harder labours than Hercules. Why, I had rather wrestle with the lion, or the Hydra, or the stag, or the Aetolian boar, or the Stymphalian birds, or Antaeus, than with Love. Such a devil of a time as I'm having, just looking for a loan—and the people I ask, all they know how to answer is "Can't be done."

ENTER Sagaristio, very jaunty.

(not seeing Toxilus) A slave that wants to slave it to suit his master, by gad, he certainly has to stow away a lot of things in his chest that he thinks will please his master, present and absent, both. Personally, I don't take to slaving it cheerfully, and master doesn't entirely take to me. But yet, just as if I was a sore eye, he can't keep hands off of me, can't keep from giving me commissions and making me the prop of his affairs.

(aside, seeing him) Who's that standing there facing me?

(aside, seeing him) Who's this standing there facing me this way?

(aside) It looks like Sagaristo.

(aside) Why, it's my friend Toxilus. (they study each other doggishly)

(aside) It is he, surely.
Eum esse opinor. Congrediar. Contra adgredibor.

Mihi quidem tu iam eras mortuos, quia non te visitabam.

Negotium edepol— Ferreum fortasse?

Ergo edepol palles. Saucius factus sum in Veneris proelio: sagitta Cupido cor meum transfixit. Iam servi hic amant?

Quid ego faciam? disne adveser? quasi Titani cum eis belligerem quibus sat esse non queam?
(aside) I do believe it is.
(aside) I'll go meet him.
(aside) I'll up and meet him.
(advancing) Ah, Sagaristio! God bless you!
(advancing with a grin) Ah, Toxilus! God will grant your desires. How are you feeling?
(doleful) However I can.
What's doing?
I'm living.
Quite to your taste, then?
(more doleful) Quite—if the things that I hope for happen.
(clapping him on the back) You use your friends like a perfect fool.
How's that?
You ought to give us orders.
Well, you've been as good as dead to me—always out of sight.
Oh well, my business—
(with a faint smile) Ironware, perhaps?
(gravely) For more than a year I have been Minister Extrairondinary and Plentyblowtentiary at the—mills.
An old familiar post of yours.
And you? Have you been well all this time?
Not particularly.
Oho! That's why you're pale.
(romantically) I have been wounded in the lists of Love! My heart has been transfixed by Cupid's shaft!
(derisively) So slaves here have their love affairs, now, eh?
What can I do? Should I defy the gods? Like the Titans, should I wage war with those I am no match for?

THE PERSIAN

Only look out your (grinning) hide isn’t transfixed by catapultic shafts of elmwood.

(chuckling) I’m celebrating the Feast of Freedom in royal style.
How’s that?
Because master’s abroad.
So? Abroad, is he?
(with a wink) If you can endure enjoying yourself, come along; you shall live with me and be regaled right royally.
(in mock consternation) Wow! It makes my shoulders tingle already to hear you talk like that!
(doleful again) But there is one thing does torment me.
Ah? And what is it?
This is the day, the final day, that decides whether my sweetheart’s to be free, or stay slaving it in slavery for life.
Well then, what d’ye want now?
(earnestly) You can make me your friend for life.
(unenthusiastically) How?
By giving me sixty pounds to pay for her release, merely a loan that I’ll repay directly, in the next three or four days. (seizing his hand) Come on now, do be a good fellow and help me out!
(shaking him off) Where do you get the nerve to dare ask me for such a sum, you cheeky rascal? Man alive, if my whole carcass was put on sale, it would hardly bring the amount you ask of me. Why, you might as well look for water from a pumice stone, that’s thirsty itself.
(wounded) Is this the way for you to treat me?
How should I treat you?
Can you ask? Why, beg someone for a loan.

could beat 'em at edacity. Yes, and their family surname was Hardheads. It's from them I inherit this profession and ancestral position of mine.

(primly) As for being a professional informer, that likes me not, and it really is unbecoming to go and snap up other people's property without risk to myself, and I disapprove of men that do so. Do I speak plainly? Of course, when a man does it more for the public welfare than for his personal profit, one may be induced to believe him a good and loyal citizen. But (magisterially) I wish to see a law enacted providing that whosoever procures the conviction of a malefactor give half the proceeds to the public treasury. And another provision of this law should be, that in case an informer summons anyone to court, that party may in turn summon him for the same amount, to the end that they may appear before the court on even terms. Were this rule in force, I warrant those fellows who attack other people's property here with their white nets would disappear entirely.

But ain't I an ass to bother about the public welfare, when we've got magistrates whose duty it is to do the bothering? (moving on toward Toxilus's house) Now I'll step inside here for a look at yesterday's leavings, and see if they had a restful night or not, and didn't suffer from fever, and were snugly covered to prevent anyone's creeping up on 'em. But the door's opening! I must slow down!

(shouting at his door, as if to servants within) See to things there, you lads, and show more speed! I mustn’t be made to wait an instant on my return. Mix the wine and honey. Get the sparrow-apples and pod-fruit ready; warm it well in the platters and season it with a dash of sweet calamus. (as if to himself) Yes, yes, he’ll soon be here, I suppose—that mate of mine.

(aside, his mouth watering) He means me. Glorious! He’ll soon be arriving, I suppose, all spick and span from the baths.

(aside) He does have it all down pat!

(sticking his head in the door again) See you boil the macaroni and those loin slices for the soup till they’re soft! No serving ’em to me underdone!

(aside, earnestly) Precisely to the point, that! It’s no good raw; you want it well boiled when you gulp it down. Then, too, unless macaroni broth has a thick rich body to it, it’s no good, that thin, transparent, peek-a-boo gown stuff. Why macaroni broth ought to be a regular great-coat! I want food that goes to my belly, not my bladder.

Ah Saturio! You’ve arrived just in the nick of time!

Well, you shall eat, for the braziers for your belly are smoking inside there. I have ordered the left-overs to be warmed up.

(eagerly) The ham—it's in order that ham should be served up cold the day after. So I ordered.

And some fish-sauce?
Pshaw! Can you ask?

Ah, you're a man of taste, extraordinary taste!

But you—do you remember that matter I mentioned to you yesterday?

I remember: lamprey and conger-eel must not be warmed up; for they make much better picking cold. But why do we delay to open battle? All men should eat while yet 'tis morn.

It's almost too much morn.

The business you begin in the morning (smacking his lips) progresses all day long.

(severely) I must ask you to give me your attention. I have explained things to you already, yesterday, and begged you to let me have sixty pounds, as a loan.

I remember, I know—you begged me for it and I didn't have it for you. A parasite with money of his own is a ruined man: he instantly hankers to begin banqueting, to gobble things down at his own expense, if he has the wherewithal. It jolly well behooves a parasite to be a poverty-stricken cynic—let him have a flask, strigil, cup, sandals, cloak, and a purse garrisoned with next to nothing for the sole delectation of his very own household.

I don't want money now. Just give me the use of your daughter.

And so she is!
This pimp (pointing to Dordalus's house) doesn't know either you or your daughter.
How could anyone know me, unless he's a man who furnishes me with meals?
Just so. You can secure this money for me.
I yearn to; I do, really.
Then let me sell her.
(aghast) You? Let you sell her?
(thoughtfully) No, not me—I'll engage someone else to sell her, and let him profess to be a foreigner. For you see, it's not six months since that pimp moved here from Megara.
(pulling Toxilus toward the house) The left-overs are spoiling. But that matter of yours can come later.

(angrily jerking away) It can, eh? Now you look here! Not a bite, I swear it, shall you eat with me this day, and don't you fool yourself, before you agree to do what I ask you! Yes, sir, and unless you bring your daughter here with you as fast as you know how, upon my soul, I'll run you out of this club of mine! Well now? What's the matter? Why don't you say what you intend to do?

(after a moment's reflection) Oh well, for God's sake, sell me too, even, if you like, so be you sell me full!

Yes, yes. I'll do what you want.

ACT II

ENTER Sophoclidisca from house of Dordalus; turns to Lemniselesis who stands in doorway.

Sophoclidisca: Why, any foolish, forgetful, fat-witted thing could understand, ma'am, after all the times you've said it. Really, I think you must take me for some awful ninny, for some country girl. I do drink wine, to be sure, but I never had the habit of drinking down my orders along with it. I supposed you had tested me and my talents thoroughly enough by now. Why, goodness me, this is the fifth year I've been attending you, and in that time I do believe even a sheep, if it went to school, could have been taught to rattle off its A B C's. But as for you, you haven't even yet learned my capacities in all this time, speaking or silent. Can't you keep still, ma'am? Can't you stop admonishing me? I remember, I understand, I have a perfectly good mind and memory. Mercy me! You're in love and feeling miserable. You're all boiling over inside. Well, I'm the one to calm things down for you.

Lemniselesis: (dejectedly) Oh, the misery of one in love!

[Exit Lemniselesis into house of Dordalus.]

Sophoclidisca: (to herself) And, oh, the nothingness of one in love with nothing! Yes indeed! What is there in life for such a person? Well, I must go and do what mistress says so as to help her to get her freedom the sooner. I'll find this Toxilus; I'll stuff his ears with my message. (turns toward Toxilus's house, then stops and examines curiously a letter she carries)

Tox. All plain and clear to you, is it? You remember, you've got it all, have you?

Paeg. (yawning) Better than my teacher.

Tox. (irate) Is that so, you beat-head?

Paeg. (pertly) Yes, that's so.

Paeg. I'll tell it to her all right enough.

Tox. By gad, you don't know!

Paeg. By Jove, just you bet me I don't remember and know it all. (scornfully) Yes, and bet me you know yourself how many fingers you've got on your hand this moment.

Tox. (superciliously) I bet with you?

Paeg. Yes, like a man, if you're hankering to lose.

Tox. Oh, let's call it quits, instead.

Paeg. Well then, let me go.

Tox. I let you and order you, both. (impatiently) But I want you to go in such fashion as to be home when I think you're there (meaning Dordalus's house).

Paeg. (making for Toxilus's house) Certainly.

Tox. Then where are you bound for now?

Paeg. (grinning) Home—so as to be at home when you think I'm there.

Tox. (angrily) You're a young limb, and (forcing himself to be pleasant) I'll give you something all for yourself in return for it.

Paeg. Oh yes, I know what a shameless reputation a master's promise generally has, and how he can't ever be forced to face a judge for that promise.

Stop!

Good gracious! So am I.

No indeed, not a thing.

Stick out your hand, then.

Where is the other—your light-fingered left?

(still holding it behind him) Oh, that’s at home. I didn’t bring that one along.

A poor investment!

How so?

Well, because love’s unprofitable when it’s unwelcome.

Ah, but soldiering in that sort of service calls much more for spirit than for weight. However, this is wasted effort.

I'm the same as you; if you don't know, I don't—except mushy words, perhaps.

I'm going.

And I'll be gone. [EXIT INTO Dordulus's HOUSE.

O Jupiter, thou opulent, glorious son of Ops, deity supreme, powerful and puissant, who dost bestow opulence, happy hopes, and bounty, gladly do I thank thee and duly do I offer praise for that the gods do bestow upon my friend in friendly wise this bounteous benefit by enabling me to help him in his need with an opulent loan! Upon my soul, I no more dreamed or supposed or believed I should have this opportunity—it almost seems to have dropped from heaven! You see, my master has sent me to Eretria to purchase some plough-broken oxen for him, and he gave me the money, for the fair there, said he, comes a week from now. The poor fool! I'll reduce it all to one crowded day of glorious life. Master will play tic-tac on my back. I don't care. Now's my chance to shower my friend with plough-broken oxen from my wallet.

I tell you what, it's a grand and glorious thing to get a good nip at those triple-plated, doddering, greedy, dried-up old tight-fists who look up their very salt-cellar, salt and all, against their slaves. aulg. But oh, father dear, no matter how eager you are to enjoy other people's food, would you really sell your own daughter for the sake of your stomach?

at. (gruffly) A likely thing I should sell you for the sake of King Philip or Attalus, rather than for my own sake, when you're mine.

aulg. (gently) Which do you consider me, father, your maidservant, or your daughter?

at. Whichsoever seems more serviceable to my stomach, by Jove! I have authority over you, I take it, not you over me.

aulg. Yes, father, you have the right to do it. Just the same, even if we are nothing but poor people, it's better to live modestly and as our means allow; for if on top of poverty comes dishonour, one's poverty becomes a heavier burden and one's good name a byword.

at. See here, girl, you are impertinent.

aulg. No, I'm not, sir, and I don't hold it impertinent to give my father good advice, young though I am. I know this—enemies don't carry about a scandalous tale in its original form.

at. Let 'em carry it and go plump to the devil! I no more care for all the enmity there is than for an empty table, if one was set before me this moment.

aulg. Father, dishonour is deathless; it goes on living even when you think it's dead.

at. See here! Are you really afraid of my selling you?

aulg. No, father. But I don't wish you to pretend.

at. Well, your not wishing it is no use. I'm going to do this in my own way, not yours. What do you mean by acting so?

aulg. Just consider this, father: suppose a master dum tunicas ponit, quanta adeficitur miseria!

egno nunc quod non futurumst formido tamen.

Sat. Dicat quod quisque volt; ego de hae sententia

Vir. At, meo si liceat modo,

Sat. Lubet.

Vir. Lubere per me tibi licere intellego;

III. 3.

Tox. Curate isti intus, iam ego domum me recipiam.

Dor. Oh,

Tox. Toxile, quid agitur?

Dor. Oh, lutum lenonium, commixtum caeno sterculinum publicum, impure, inhoneste, iniure, inlex, labes popli, pecuniae accipiter avide atque invide, procax, rapax, trahax — trecentis versibus tuas impuritias traloqui nemo potest — accipin argentum? accipe sis argentum, impudens, tene sis argentum, etiam tu argentum tenes?

possim te facere ut argentum accipias, lutum?

non mihi censebas copiam argenti fore, qui nisi iurato mihi nil ausu’s credere?

Dor. Sine respirare me, ut tibi respondeam.

vir summe populi, stabulum servitutium, scortorum liberator, suduculum flagri, compedium tritor, pistrinorum civitas, perenniserve, lurco, edax, furax, fugax, cedo sis mi argentum, da mihi argentum, imppudens,

possim a te exigere argentum? argentum, inquam,

cedo,

quin tu mi argentum reddis? nilne te pudet?

leno te argentum poscit, solida servitus, pro liberanda amica, ut omnes audiant.

Tox. Tace, obsceco hercle. ne tua vox valide valet.

Dor. Referundae ego habeo linguam natam gratiae.

eodem mihi pretio sal praebetur quo tibi.

Scene 3.

Enter Toxilus.

Tox. (to slaves within) See to things inside there; I shall be back shortly.

Dor. Ah there, Toxilus, how goes it?

Tox. (turning on him savagely and shaking the wallet in his face) Ah, there, you putrefied pimp, you mixture of mire and public dung-pit, you indecent, infamous, iniquitous lump of illegality, you blot on the community, you hungry, hateful money-hawk, you nasty, greedy, grabby miscreant—no one can phrasify your filthiness in three hundred lines!—will you accept your money? Come, kindly accept your money, brassface, kindly take your money! Here, take your money, will you? Can I make you accept your money, muckheap? Didn’t suppose I’d be supplied with money, did you, when you wouldn’t trust me at all except under oath?

Dor. (gathering himself together) Let me recover my breath for a reply. (bellowing) See here, you idol of the public, you haunt of hangdog menials, you liberator of harlots, you whiplasher, shackle-waster, miller’s metropolis, liferslave, you swilling, stuffing, stealing runaway, you kindly hand over my money! Give me my money, brassface! Can I make you relinquish my money? Hand over my money, I tell you! Why don’t you pay me my money? Shameless entirely, are you? It’s a pimp dunning you for money for setting your mistress free, you embodiment of bondage, and dunning you for all to hear!

Tox. (looking about nervously) Shut up, for God’s sake! Lord, man, you’ve got grand good lungs!

Dor. My tongue was made to return a compliment. Salt is sold me at the same price as to you. And nisi me haec defendet, numquam delinget salem.

Tox. Iam omittre iratus esse. id tibi susceensui, quia te negabas credere argentum mihi.

Dor. Mirum quin tibi ego crederem, ut idem mihi faceres quod partim faciunt argentarii:
ubi quid credideris, citius extemplo a foro fugiunt quam ex porta ludis eum emissust lepus.

Tox. Cape hoc sis.

Dor. Quin das?

Tox. Nummi sescenti hic erunt, probi, numerati. fac sit mulier libera, atque hue continuo adduce.

Dor. Iam faxo hic erit.

Tox. Fortasse metuis in manum concredere?

Dor. Iam hic faxo aderit.

Tox. Supplicatum cras eat.

never a lick of it shall my tongue have, unless she looks after me.

Tox. (soothingly) Do stop being angry now. I was offended at you for refusing to trust me with the money.

Dor. (still irate) A wonder I wouldn't trust you, to have you play the same trick on me that some of the bankers play! Once you trust anything to them, they scurry away from the forum faster than a hare from its cage door at the games.

Tox. (holding out Sagaristio's wallet) You kindly take this.

Dor. (as Toxilus withdraws it) Why don't you give it to me?

Tox. (glancing at the contents) You will find here sixty pounds, good honest cash. (passing it over) Set the girl free and bring her here immediately.

Dor. (carelessly, opening the wallet) I'll soon have her here. (half to himself, examining one of the coins) Jove! I don't know whom I can get to test this for me.

Tox. You dread entrusting it to anyone, I daresay?

Dor. It's a wonder 1 . . .

Tox. Go that way, (pointing) by the back alleys, to the forum; let the girl come to my house the same way, through the garden.

Dor. (still examining the money) I'll soon get her here.

Tox. (urgently) But don't make it too public.

Dor. (looking up with a sneer) There's certainly tact in that!

Tox. She can go and thank the gods to-morrow.

Dor. Yes, of course! Lord, yes! [exit.

Tox. (calling after him) You should have got back in the time you've been standing here.

ACT IV

Toxilus on stage after exit of Dordalus.

Tox. (contentedly) If you give a matter serious or proper attention, it generally makes good progress under your management. Yes, by Jove, a man's affairs proceed and prove successful pretty nearly according to the attention he gives 'em, and in the end, if he's a poor sort, some useless stick, his undertakings turn out poorly; but if he's the proper sort, they come out properly. Now I've got this affair of mine under way in clever, canny style, so I'm confident of a happy outcome. I'll proceed to get the pimp so tied up to-day that he won't know how to extricate himself. (calling at his door) Hey! Sagaristio! Come out and bring along the young lady and that letter I wrote and sealed for you, which ( chuckling) you brought me from my master all the way from Persia.

Scene 2. Enter Sagaristio and Saturio's daughter in Persian costume.

Ag. (pirouetting) Anything slow about me? (hands Toxilus the letter)

Tox. (surveying him) Good! Good! A royal get-up! That turban sets off your outfit in lovely fashion! (inspecting the girl) Yes, and those little sandals—they suit the stranger maiden to a T! But have you got your parts well in mind?

Ag. (with conviction) Never did tragedian or comedian have 'em better.
TITUS MACCIUS PLAUTUS

Tox. Hunc hominem ego Hodie in trasennam doctis deducam dolis, itaque huic insidiae paratae sunt probe. adgregiar virum. quid agis?

Dor. Credo.

Tox. Vnde agis te, Dordale?

Dor. Credo tibi.

Tox. di dent, quae velis.

Eho, an iam manu emisisti mulierem?

or. By Jove, this is glorious assistance! (looking down the street) It's about time for him to appear. Come now, you two, be off!

[Exeunt Sagaristio and the girl.]

cene 3.

Enter Dordalus.

(or. (serenely, not seeing Toxilus) When the gods feel kindly toward a man they put something lucrative in his way. Here's my case—I've just now saved two loaves a day. For that maidservant I owned to-day now owns herself: (glancing at Toxilus's house) he bought his victory. And now she'll dine off someone else to-day and not eat a bite of mine. (grimly) Oh, but ain't I a high-minded, superlative citizen to have made our great and glorious Attic commonwealth greater still to-day by giving it another citizeness? (dreaming) But what a kindly soul I've been to-day! How many men I did trust, without taking security from one! The way I kept trusting everyone entirely! And never a fear of anyone I trusted to-day denying his debts to me in court! I want to be a good man now, from this day on—(waking up) a wish that won't come true and never has!

(aside) Now to lead this chap into the net with my masterly manoeuvres, the trap being all finely fixed for him! I'll up to the worthy. (advances) How goes it?

(or. (as in a reveriy) Trustfully.

(or. Where are you coming from, Dordalus?

(or. I trust you. God grant your desires!

(or. Oho! Have you actually freed the girl already?

I trust, yes, by heaven, I say, I do trust you.

So you're a freedwoman the richer, eh?

(roused into peevishness) Oh, you plague! See here! I tell you I trust you.

Tell me, honestly—is she free now?

Long ago. Go on, go to the forum to the praetor, inquire, in case you're unwilling to trust me. She's free, I tell you. Can't you hear?

(fervently) Well, well! May all the powers of heaven bless you! From this day forth I'll wish for you or yours nothing but what you wish!

Go along with you, don't take oath to it! I trust you all right.

Where is your freedwoman now?

At your house.

Really? At my house?

Yes, really, I say, at your house, I say.

(in a transport of gratitude) So help me heaven, but that's going to bring you a big harvest from me!

(lowering his voice) You see, there is a certain matter I was keeping to myself; but now I'm going to tell you about it and it'll be monstrously lucrative for you. I'll make you remember me your whole life long.

(sceptical) My ears await some benefits in support of your benedictions.

(zealously) You deserve to have me give you your deserts. And just to let you know I will, take this letter, (holding it out) read it through.

(declining it, offishly) How does it concern me?

Ah, but it does concern you and you'll find it of interest. It was brought me from Persia, from my master, you see.

When?

Not long ago.

or. All right, give it here. (takes it)
ox. But read it out loud.
or. Keep still and I'll do so.
or. I won't say a word.
(or. (reading) "Best wishes from Timarchides to Toxilus and the whole household! If you are well, I am content. I am perfectly well myself, busy, and lucratively so, and cannot return for the next eight months, there being a matter here which detains me.

"The Persians have captured the city of Chrysopolis in Arabia, an ancient town and rolling in riches. This booty is being collected for a public auction—which fact accounts for my absenting myself from home.

"I wish the service and hospitality of our household to be extended to the bearer of this letter. Give his wishes your careful attention, for he has treated me with the greatest consideration in his own home." (looking up disgustedly)

What does it matter to me or my welfare what the Persians are doing, or your master, either?
'ox. (eagerly) Do keep still, you blitherer! You don't know what a harvest is coming to you, or what a sweet little torch lucreful Luck's ready to light for you!

or. What's that lucreful Luck of yours?
'ox. Ask the party that knows. (indicating letter) All I know is what you do, except that I read it through first. But learn about it from the letter, as you began.
or. A good suggestion. Keep still.

Now you'll come to what is to your interest.

(reading) "The bearer of this letter has brought with him a girl, remarkably beautiful and ladylike, who was stolen, abducted, from the inmost recesses of Arabia; I want you to see to it she is sold there. The buyer is to buy her at his own risk, mind. No warrant will be promised or given. See that my guest receives good honest money, cash down." Look after this, and look out that he is looked after. Farewell."

Well now? Having read what was trusted to the wax there, do you trust me?

(guardedly) Where is that stranger at present who brought the letter here?

He'll soon be here, I trust; he went to fetch the girl from the ship.

(shaking his head) I've got no use at all for lawsuits or quirks. Why should I pay over my money to outsiders? Unless I receive a warrant, what use have I for such wares?

Will you shut up, or won't you? I never supposed you were such a pothead! What are you afraid of?

Gad, but I am afraid, for a fact. I've had a good many lessons already, and it won't be any new experience to get stuck in a mudhole like that.

(with guileless ambiguity) There doesn't seem to be any danger, to me.

(dryly) I know that, but it's myself I fear for.

(with a shrug) Oh well, it's of no consequence to me. I'm doing it merely out of consideration for you, so as to give you first chance to pick her up at a bargain.

Much obliged. But it's pleasanter to profit by a horrible example than to be one.

w. (after reflection) Well, but I must see the goods.

x. Right you are! (looking down the street) But here's luck! Look! There comes that stranger himself that brought the letter!

w. He's the man, eh?

x. He's the one.

w. (looking intently) And is she that stolen girl?

x. I know just as much as you about that—(eyeing her most appreciatively) except that she certainly has a ladylike look, by gad, whoever she is.

w. (hiding his delight) Oh yes, she's a rather neat contrivance.

x. (aside) Such a condescending scoundrel! (aloud, drawing him back) Let's keep quiet and consider her appearance.

How about what you have observed? The wall—what do you think of that as a fortification for the town?

If the citizens are of sound character, I consider the town splendidly fortified. If perfidy and peculation and greed are banished from this city, yes, and envy, for a fourth, and fifth, place-hunting, sixth, vilification, seventh, perjury—- (aside to Dordalus, with a dig in the ribs) Hear! Hear!

—and eighth, indifference, ninth, injustice, and tenth and worst in its assaults, crime—the city from which these vices are absent will be walled well enough with a single wall. But where they are present, a hundred-fold wall is not enough to preserve the property within it.

(aside to Dordalus) I say, you!

What d'ye want?

You belong to that fraternity of ten: it would become you to banish yourself.

How's that?

For being a perjurer.

Her remarks weren't entirely pointless, for a fact.

You can use her to advantage, I tell you. Buy her.

Upon my soul, the more I consider her, the more she pleases me.

If you do buy her, ye immortal gods! There'll be no wealthier pimp alive. You'll turn men out of their estates and households at your discretion; you'll do business with the leading citizens, have 'em currying favour with you. They'll be coming to your house for their revels!

Why, but they'll serenade your portals by night, burn down your doors! Forestall 'em: order your house to be shut up with doors of iron; change it to a house of iron; put in iron thresholds, an iron bar, an iron ring. Please, please don't spare the iron—order some for (grinning) yourself, a good solid set of shackles, riveted on.

(genially) Please, please, go to hell!

I only wish I knew what he asks for her.

Want me to call him over here?

I'll step over there. (they advance) to Sagaristio) What of you, sir stranger?

(brusquely) I am here, and bringing this girl to you as I recently said I would. My ship, as you know, arrived in port last night. I want this girl sold if possible; if not, I want to be gone as soon as possible.

Good day to you, sir.

Yes, good, if I sell her at her real value.

But if you can't sell her on fine terms to (winking surreptitiously at Dordalus) this buyer, sir, I swear you can't to anyone.

(interested) Are you a friend of his?

As true as all the gods in heaven.

(aside to him) Then you are a confirmed enemy of mine. For never was there any god obliging enough to give us pimps a helping hand.

To business! You have occasion to buy this girl?

(cautious) If you have occasion to sell her, why, yes, I have occasion to buy her; if it's no emergency with you, it's no more so with me.

Tox. (to Sagaristio, confidentially) That's a fair request of his.

Sag. D'ye want to buy her at a good figure?

Dor. And you—want to sell her at a fine figure?

Tox. Gad! You both want that, I know.

Dor. Come on, put a price on her, like a man.

Sag. I tell you this first: nobody will give you a warrant with her. You understand now?

Dor. (eagerly) I understand. State the lowest figure you'll let her go for.

Tox. (pulling Dordalus aside) Hush, man, hush! Good Lord, what a childish simpleton you are, really!

Dor. Eh? How's that?

Tox. Why, because I want you to put some pertinent questions to the girl first.

Dor. And not a bad suggestion, either, by Jove! Will you just look at this—here am I, that wily pimp, almost falling into a pit, if you hadn't been here! Ah, it's a great thing to have a friend by, when you have business.

Tox. I want you to question her about her family, or country, or parents, so that you won't be saying you bought her rashly at my urgency and instigation.

Dor. Yes, indeed! I call that good advice.

Tox. (stepping up to Sagaristio) If it will not trouble you, sir, he wishes to question this lady a bit.

Sag. By all means, at his own discretion.

Tox. (disgustedly, on rejoining Dordalus) What are you standing there for? Kindly step up and ask him yourself, as well, for permission to question her as you like. He told me he'd permit it, to be sure; but I prefer you to approach yourself, though, so that he won't take you for a nonentity. (rejoins Sagaristio, beckoning Dordalus to follow)

That's rather sound advice. (going part way, then calling to Sagaristio, importantly) Stranger, I want to question this girl.

Anything you like, from earth to heaven.

Just bid her step over here to me.

(to girl) Go, by all means, and humour him. (to Dordalus) Question her, make any inquiries you see fit.

(aside to her) At him now, at him! See you enter the fray under happy auspices!

(aside to him) The auspices are bright, hush! I'll look out that you return to camp well laden with loot.

(aside to Dordalus) Step back there, (pointing) I'll bring her to you.

(aside to Toxilus) Go on, do as you think best for us. (steps back)

Hey, there, young lady, come here, will you! (aside to her) Do please mind what you are about now!

(aside to him) Keep still, I'll see to it as you wish.

(aloud) Follow me. (they go to Dordalus) Here she is, if you wish to ask her any questions. (withdraws)

(calling) But I want you with me.

I must observe the wishes of our guest here, as master ordered. What if he objects to my being with you? (looks questioningly at Sagaristio)

Oh no, join him, by all means.

(returning to Dordalus) I am at your service.

(gratefully) And you do yourself a service, as well, in assisting a friend.

Make your inquiries. (to girl, with a sly wink) I say, you, look alive!

Daugh. (on the verge of tears) You have said enough. Slave though I am, I have a sense of . . . duty and shall tell the truth, as I have . . . heard it, in answer to what is asked me.

Tor. Young lady, this (indicating Dordalus) is a man of honour.

Daugh. So I . . . trust.

Tor. You won't be his slave for long.

Daugh. Indeed I hope not, if my . . . (choking) parents do their duty.

Tor. Don't be surprised if we question you about your country or your parents.

Daugh. Ah, why should I be, my dear sir? My . . . servitude has forbidden my . . . being surprised at any . . . misfortune that befalls me.

Tor. (putting her shoulder) Don't cry!

Tor. (aside, elated) Oh, but she's a sly, shrewd piece, blast her! She's keen-witted all right, she knows how to say the proper thing!

Tor. What is your name?

Tor. (aside) Now I'm afraid she'll make a slip.

Daugh. In my own . . . country my name was . . . Lucris.

Tor. There now! That's a name and omen worth any price! Why don't you buy her? (aside) I was awfully scared she'd make a slip! She got out of it.

Tor. If I buy you, I count on your being Lucris for me, too.

Tor. If you do buy her, by Jove, I warrant she'll never stay your slave for one revolving moon.

Tor. Gad! Precisely what I want!

Tor. "The work that we do makes our wishes come true." (aside) No slip yet, not one!

r. How did he stand amongst his own fellow countrymen?

r. A poor, poor man, indeed, to be so utterly lost himself, and to have lost those that loved him!

Do you want to belong to me?

x. (to Dordalus, jubilantly) See how she treasures the memory of her freedom? Oh, she’ll bring you tremendous hauls! Act, if you intend to act! I’ll rejoin (indicating Sagaristio) this gentleman. (to girl) Come along. (they all approach Sagaristio)

Here she is again, sir.

Sag. Three hundred and twenty.

Dor. Too much.

Sag. (firmly) Not one penny can be abated from the price I shall now set. (pauses)

Dor. (eagerly) What is it, then? Out with it, quick! State it!

Sag. You may have her, at your own risk, for two hundred and forty pounds.

Dor. (aside to Toxilus) Toxilus, what do you say?

Tox. (indignantly) I say all the powers above are after you in ire, you criminal, for not pushing this purchase through!

Dor. (to Sagaristio, hastily) Done!

Tox. (aside to Dordalus) Glorious! A perfect prize! Lord, man, she's cheap at twelve hundred pounds. This is a lucrative day for you!

Sag. I say, you! It'll be forty pounds for her clothes, in addition.

Dor. (wrathfully) In subtraction, you mean, not in addition!

Tox. (aside to Dordalus, motioning Sagaristio not to press the point) Oh, do shut up! Don't you see he's looking for a handle to undo what's done? Go along won't you, and get the money? . . . and (aside) goes to blazes as he deserves.

Dor. (to Toxilus excitedly) I say, keep watch of him, you!

Tox. And you—why don't you go in?

Dor. Yes, I'll be off and bring the money.

Sag. Less four shillings? How's that?

Dor. To pay for this purse, or ensure its coming home again.

Sag. (contemptuously) Must prove yourself a full-blown pimp, eh? Afraid you'll lose that beggarly purse, are you, you poor, dirty, rapacious rascal?

Tor. Oh well, let it pass. Seeing he is a pimp, it's nothing extraordinary.

'Dor. (grimly looking down the street after Sagaristio) That fellow certainly knows his business all right—sold me a stolen girl at my own risk, collared the cash, cleared out! Now how do I know whether she won't soon be claimed as free? Where shall I follow him? To Persia! Bosh!

'So. (wounded) I trusted you would be grateful for my kindness.

'Dor. (repentant) Yes, yes, of course I'm grateful, Toxilus. Oh yes, I observed your earnest endeavours to help me.

'So. (forgetting himself) I help you? (hastily) Yes, yes, earnest indeed!

ENTER Paegnium AND OTHER SLAVES.

Here, before our very door and entrance would I give handsome entertainment to my partisans. Here place the couches, here put whatever is our wont. First of all, I wish something set before me here which will enable me to enliven with gaiety, jollity, and joy the hearts of all those by whose efficiency the things I wanted to effect were easily effected. For 'tis a worthless man who knows how to receive a kindness, but knows not how to pay it back.

ENTER Lemniselenis INTO DOORWAY, FOLLOWED BY Sagaristio.

(l) Toxilus darling, why am I not with you, ah yes, and why are you not with me?

(r) Come, then, come to me, clasp me in your arms, do, do!

(e) Indeed I will!

Ah, nothing is sweeter than this! (an ecstatic interval) But come, my love, my treasure, why not commit us to the couches forthwith?

All your desires are mine, dear.

And mine are yours! (another interval) Here, Sagaristio, here then, take the head of the table.

Move your hands, Paegnium, look alive! You’re slow giving me mine! Here you are, give it to me! (lifts the filled goblet) To my health, to your health, and to the health of my mistress—the gods have given me this day of my heart’s desire, (embracing Lemniselenis) this day when I can clasp you to my breast, a free girl!

(snuggling closer) And it’s all your doing!

To the health of us all! (puts the goblet to his lips, then sentimentally to Lemniselenis) And now this goblet passes from my hand to yours, as befits two sweethearts!

Let me have it.

Take it! (Lemniselenis drinks) To the health of him who envies me, and of him who rejoices with me! (all drink liberally)

Such a rotten, disastrous day as dawned for me this day, with the way Toxilus circumvented me and made shreds of my capital! I’ve thrown away a cartload of money, poor fool, and not a thing to show for it! Upon my life, if I don’t land him in torture and shackles, only let his master once return, as I hope—(sees the party) but what’s this I see? Look at this! What sort of show is this? They’re drinking, upon my soul, and right here! I’ll up to them! (to Toxilus, approaching) Aha, my good sir, greetings! And to you, my good freedwoman!

(tipsily cheerful) Well, well, it’s . . . Dordalus!
(in a like state) All right, tell him to . . . join us.
(to Dordalus) Join us, if you . . . like.
(to the others) Come on, let’s . . . give him a . . . hand. (riotous applause from all)

Dordalus, you’re the . . . nicest man I know. How are you? Here’s your place, (points to a couch) stretch out . . . here. (to slaves) Some . . . water for his . . . feet! (to Paegnium) Hey you, boy, are you bringing it?

(as Paegnium comes toward him with a ladle) Mind you don’t lay a finger on me, or I’ll land you flat on the ground, you scoundrel!

Yes, and I’ll promptly poke your eye out with this ladle!

(to Toxilus) See here, you gallowstree, you whip-eradicator! How about the way you juggled me to-day, and got me into hot water, how about the way you worked that Persian game on me?

(drinking) Get out of this place with your . . . peevishness, if you’re . . . wise.

(turning on Lemnisclenis) But you, good freedwoman, you knew all this and kept it from me?

(sweetly) It’s silly to turn to brawling when you have a chance to enjoy yourself. Take up those matters later on, that’s nicer.

THE PERSIAN

(furious) Ugh! My heart's blazing.

(to a slave, interestedly) Give him the . . . tankard.
(to Dordalus) Put out the . . . fire, if your heart's blazing, so as to keep your . . . head from catching.

You're all making game of me, I understand that! Paegnium, d'ye want a present of a new . . . playmate? (indicating Dordalus) Go on and . . . amuse yourself as usual. Here's a . . . free field. (as Paegnium wants up to Dordalus) Um-m-m? La-de-da! That's a . . . royal little . . . movement, so . . . frisky!

And so I should be, and I just love to play with this pimp, seeing he deserves it.

Keep it up, keep it up!

(pretending to be about to caress Dordalus) Here's a present, pimp. (delivers a quick punch)

Ouch, blast it! He almost howled me over!

Look out! There you are again! (repeats the blow)

(shaking his fist) Have your sport, as you like, while your master's away!

(slipping in another punch) See how I obey your instructions? But why don't you reciprocate and follow my instructions, too, and do what I recommend?

And what is that?

Get yourself a fine thick rope and hang yourself.

(advances on him again)

You kindly keep your hands off of me, or I'll give you a good sound thrashing with this cane!

Go ahead, I give you leave. (darts in, delivers another blow and dodges back)

There, there now, Paegnium, call a . . . halt.

By heaven, I'll exterminate the lot of you!

But that’ll be your own end, at the hands of Him who dwells above us and hates you and will show his hate. It’s not these folks that say so; it’s I, I.

(to Paegniun) Come, pass around the wine and honey, keep us supplied with . . . drink, full tankards. It’s a . . . long time since we drank. We’ve been . . . dry an awful long while.

(glaring at them as they imbibe) I wish to heaven that what you drink would never pass through you!

(rising unsteadily) Pimp, I can’t refrain from . . . dancing for you that . . . lovely little dance that Hegea used to render. (prances about Dordalus, making occasional passes at him) Do see now, if it isn’t rather . . . winsome.

(rising) Yes, and I want to show you the dance Diodorus used to . . . render in Ionia (joins Sagaristio)

(backing away with upraised cane) I’ll brain both of you, unless you get out!

Still grumbling, brassface? If you . . . irritate me, I’ll soon be bringing on that . . . Persian again.

(scanning him sharply) Aha! You’re that Persian who shore me right down to the quick!

Shut up . . . idiot! He’s his . . . twin brother.

He is, eh?

And such a . . . twinny twin!

May all the powers above consume and rot you and your twin brother, both!

Rot the man that . . . ruined you. I haven’t done anything, of . . . course.

Well, but I want you paid out for what he did!

(drawmg the guests and slaves aside) Come along, please do let’s have some . . . fun with him.

THE PERSIAN

(shaking her head) There's no use in it, unless he deserves it. And it's not right for me.

(ironically) The reason being, I suppose, that he didn't stand in the way of my . . . buying you!

But still it's not—still—

(growing angry) Just you look out for . . . trouble, then, and follow me. The proper thing for you is to listen to what I . . . say, for by gad, if it hadn't been for me and my . . . protection, he'd pretty soon have made a common prostitute of you. (increasingly bitter) But this is the way with a lot of . . . freed folk: if they don't . . . cross their patron, they don't think they're free enough or . . . good enough or respectable enough, unless they've done this, unless they've been . . . impertinent to him, unless they've proved ungrateful to their . . . benefactor!

(remorseful) Oh dear! Your kindesses do urge me to do anything you wish.

I'm your . . . patron, myself, that's plain; I'm the man that paid him the money for you. I want some . . . fun with him, some . . . tiptop fun.

Well, I'll help it along the best I can.

(keeping an eye on them) That gang's clearly planning to do something or other to me.

(as they all advance on Dordalus) I say, you folks. What d'ye say?

Is this Dordalus, the . . . pimp, who trades here in . . . freeborn maidens? Is this the chap that used to be so . . . dauntless?

What do you mean by this? (as Sagaristio cuffs him) Oh, ouch! What a wallop! (raising his cane) I'll fix you people!

But we . . . have fixed you, and we'll fix you some . . . more! (they all fall on him zestfully)

Pueg. That's all right. It was often plucked long before this.

Oor. (wringing) Still chattering, are you, you fragment of a boy?

Lemm. (impishly) Patron dear, do go in to dinner, there's a darling.

Oor. So you're deriding me now, my lazybones?

Lemm. (plaintively) Just because I invite you to enjoy yourself?

Oor. (struggling) I don't want to enjoy myself!

Lemm. (cordially) Then don't.

Tox. (cuffing him contentedly) Well, what do you think? You see what . . . sixty pounds do, what . . . messes they make?

Oor. (aside) Oh dear, oh dear! I'm murdered! They do know awfully well how to return an enemy's favours!

Tox. (with a final cuff) We'll call this . . . plenty of punishment now.

Oor. (pathetically) I admit it! I hold up my hands! (they let go of him, with parting salutes).

Tox. And later you'll . . . hold 'em up on a . . . crossbar.

Sag. (hospitably, with a wink at Lemniscelenis) Do go along in for—(giving him a farewell kick)—crucifixion!
