PREFATORY NOTE

It is a matter of great regret to me that illness, pressure of other duties and the excessive size of this volume have caused me to abandon the plan of discussing in Appendices E to M some of the historical problems connected with Ant. XII-XIV, as has been done in Appendices B, C and D. In place of detailed discussions I have given selected bibliographies. I hope to deal with these problems in a work on the history of the Jews during the period of the Second Commonwealth, which should appear some time after the completion of the last volume of this translation of Josephus.

<sup>d</sup> According to Pausanias, i. 8. 6, it was the Rhodians who gave Ptolemy this surname. Bevan, p. 51, says he assumed the title "saviour and lord " between 308 and 306 B.c.

city on the Sabbath as if to sacrifice, and, as the Jews Ptolemy did not oppose him-for they did not suspect any Jerusalem, hostile act-and, because of their lack of suspicion and the nature of the day, were enjoying idleness and ease, he became master of the city without difficulty and ruled it harshly. This account is attested by Agatharchides of Cnidus, the historian of the Diadochi, who reproaches us for our superstition,<sup>a</sup> on account of which we lost our liberty, in these words.<sup>b</sup> " There is a nation called Jews, who have a strong and great city called Jerusalem, which they allowed to fall into the hands of Ptolemy by refusing to take up arms and, instead, through their untimely superstition submitted to having a hard master." This, then, was the opinion which Agatharchides expressed about our Cf. Aristean nation. Now Ptolemy, after taking many captives § 13. both from the hill country of Judaea and the district round Jerusalem and from Samaria and those on Garizein,<sup>c</sup> brought them all to Egypt and settled them there.<sup>d</sup> And, as he recognized that the people of Jerusalem were most constant in keeping their oaths and pledges, as shown by the reply which they gave to Alexander when he sent an embassy to them after defeating Darius in battle, he assigned many of them to his garrisons, and at Alexandria gave them equal <sup>d</sup> This information is taken in part from the Letter of Aristeas, on which see § 11 note b, but the following sentence on the reply made by the Jews to the envoys of Alexander and on the alleged civic rights of the Jews is not found in Arist. The date of the settlement of Ptolemy's captives in Egypt is not known; perhaps it was after the battle of Gaza between Ptolemy and Demetrius Poliorectes in 312 B.C.

Thackeray in the Jewish Quarterly Review, xv., 1903, pp. 337-391, also in a separate volume, revised, 1928; M. Andrews in CAP ii. 83-122; H. Meecham, The Oldest Version of the Bible, 1932. Phalerum,<sup>d</sup> who was in charge of the king's library, was anxious to collect, if he could, all the books in the inhabited world, and, if he heard of, or saw, any book worthy of study, he would buy it; and so he endeavoured to meet the wishes of the king, for he was very much devoted to the art of book-collecting. Now, when Ptolemy once asked him how many tens of thousands of books he had already gathered together, he replied that the present number was about two hundred thousand but that within a short time be would assemble some five hundred thousand. He added that he had been informed that among the Jews also there were many works on their law, which were worthy of study and of a place in the king's library, but, being written in the script and language of this people, they would be no small trouble to have translated into the Greek tongue. For, he said, though their script seemed to be similar to the peculiar Syrian (Aramaic) writing, and their language to sound like the other, it was, as it happened, of a Josephus reproduces about one-third of his original, the chief omissions being Arist. §§ 82-171 and §§ 187-292.

Arist,'s account of him is therefore fictitious.

There was, however, nothing, he said, to prevent them from having these books translated and having the writings of this people also in their library, for he a had abundant resources from which to meet the expense. And so the king, deciding that Demetrius had given him excellent advice as to how to realize his ambition of obtaining  $^{b}$  a large number of books, wrote to the high priest of the Jews that this might be done.

for, since we have decided not only to transcribe <sup>a</sup> the laws of the Jews but also to translate them for your pleasure, by what right should we do this while so many Jews are slaves in your kingdom ? In accordance, therefore, with your magnanimity and goodness set them free from their misery, since the God who gave them their laws is the same who presides over your kingdom, as I have succeeded in learning after much study. For both they and we worship the God who created the universe, whom we call by the appropriate term Zena, b giving Him that name from the fact that He breathes life  $(z\bar{e}n)$  into all creatures.<sup>c</sup> Do you, then, for the honour of God restore (their freedom) to those who worship Him with peculiar devotion but have been deprived of their native land and the manner of life which they led there.<sup>d</sup> You should, however, know, O King, that it is not because I am related to them by race or am their countryman that I ask these things on their behalf, but I urge you to do this because all men are the handiwork of God,

F. Wutz, Die Transkriptionen von der Septuaginta bis zu Hieronymus, Pt. I, 1925, to mean "transliterate," that is, to transcribe the Hebrew text in Greek characters (as in Origen's Hexaplar). Proceeding on this assumption, Wutz attempts to prove that the Septuagint is a translation made not from a Hebrew text in Hebrew characters, but from a Hebrew text in Greek characters. This theory (first proposed by Tychsen in the 18th century) is generally rejected by scholars, rightly so in the opinion of the present writer.

Accus, ease of "Zeus,"

 Such etymologizing of divine names to show the universal and natural attributes of the Greek gods was common in the Stoic writings of the late Hellenistic period ; a similar etymology of "Zeus" appears in the fragments of the Hellenistic Jewish philosopher Aristobulus (ap. Eusebius, Praeparatio Evangelica xiii, 12. 7), τον δια των ποιημάτων Δία και Ζήνα.

And when of Jewish Andreas, who was standing beside him, replied that slaves. Aristeas there would be a little more than a hundred and ten § 19. thousand,<sup>b</sup> the king said, "It is indeed but a small gift that you are asking, Aristaeus." But Sosibius and the others present said that he ought to make a thank-offering worthy of his own magnanimity to God who had bestowed the kingdom on him, and so, being gently persuaded by them, he gave orders that, when they paid the soldiers their wages, they should also pay them a hundred and twenty drachmas <sup>c</sup> for every captive they had. And, as for what they d requested, he promised to publish a decree conceived in liberal terms and giving effect to the proposal of Aristaeus and, what was more, the will of God, in accordance with which he said that he would set free not only those brought by his father and his army, but also those who had previously been found in the kingdom and any who were subsequently brought in. And although they said that the cost of redeeming them would be more than four hundred talents,<sup>e</sup> he

- <sup>d</sup> Variant "he" (Aristeas).

· So Arist. here, but cf. § 33 note e. The silver talent was equal to 6000 drachmas; the reckoning in Arist. of a little more than 100,000 slaves at 20 drachmas each would give somewhat less than 400 talents, whereas Josephus' reckoning of 110,000 slaves at 120 drachmas each would give 2200 talents. Thus he is inconsistent in here reproducing Arist.'s total of 400 talents (unless, indeed, 120 drachmas is a scribal error for 20).

When this edict was read over to the king, it contained all the other provisionbut omitted the directions concerning the Jews whe had previously or subsequently been brought into the country, and so he himself magnanimously added his humane instructions concerning them as well; and as the money for expenses <sup>b</sup> was to be paid out as a lump sum, he ordered it to be apportioned between the officials of the government c and the royal bankers.<sup>d</sup> When this was done, the decree of the king was quickly earried out in just seven days, and the redemption-money came to more than four hundred and sixty e talents, for the slave-holders collected the hundred and twenty f drachmas even for infants, as if the king had commanded that payment should be made for these too, when he announced that they should receive the forementioned sum for each slave.<sup>g</sup>

(4) When this had been done on a lavish scale in pemetrius accordance with the king's wish, he ordered Demetrius of Phalerum to present a memorial of the decree concerning the memorial eopying of the Jewish books, for nothing used to be proposed directed by the kings in a haphazard manner, but translation.

Aristeas § 28.

<sup>a</sup> Meaning slightly uncertain, possibly " so that the great skilfulness of the craftsman was quite clear to any who saw (the offerings)."

<sup>b</sup> νομοθεσία is a word frequently used by Hellenistie Jewish writers to denote the Pentateuch. 20 everything was done with great care. Therefore a copy of the memorial and of the letters has been set down here, as well as the number of the dedicatory offerings sent (to Jerusalem) and the workmanship of each, so that the great skilfulness of the craftsman may be quite clear to any who sees this account a and that the artificer of each may become known for the outstanding quality of his work. Now, as for the copy of the memorial, it read as follows : "To the great king from Demetrius. You have commanded, O King, that the writings which are still wanting to complete the library shall be collected and that those which are imperfect shall be given the necessary care, wherefore I have taken pains in this matter, and I wish to inform you that we still lack, among others, the books of the Jewish legislation.<sup>b</sup> For being written in Hebrew characters and in the language of that nation they are unintelligible to us. And it so happens that they have been copied <sup>c</sup> with less care than they needed, d because they have not yet been made an object of royal concern. But it is necessary that these too should be found among your books in an emended form, for their legislation is very wise and pure as a result of coming from God. For this reason,

<sup>e</sup> The exact meaning of  $\sigma\epsilon\sigma \eta \mu a \nu \tau a \iota$  in Arist., which Josephus has taken over in the infin.  $\sigma\epsilon\sigma\eta\mu a\nu\theta a$ , is a matter of dispute. Some scholars take it to mean "interpreted" and think it refers to previous Greek translations of the Pentateuch, cf. Z. Frankel, Vorstudien zu der Septuaginta, 1841, p. 61, note k. It seems clear from the context, however, that it refers to Hebrew MSS. of the Pentateuch which have been carelessly copied from an original scroll (presumably kept in the Temple at Jerusalem).

Hecataeus of Abdera<sup>a</sup> tells us, the poets and historians have made no mention of it or of the men whose lives have been governed by it, on the ground that it was sacred and not to be revealed by profane mouths. If, then, O King, it be your pleasure, write to the high priest of the Jews to send six elders from each tribe who are most versed in their laws, in order that when we have learned from them the elear and consistent meaning of these and obtained an accurate translation, we may have a collection of these books which shall be worthy of their contents and of your design."

But as he, when he died, left an infant son named Onias, his brother Eleazar, of whom we are now writing, took over the high priesthood, and it was to him that Ptolemy wrote in the following manner. <sup>d</sup> This use of  $\pi \circ \lambda i \tau a \iota$ , both in Arist. and Josephus, to denote the co-religionists in Egypt of the Jews of Palestine is one of several instances which show how far it was from the Hellenistic mind, whether pagan or Jewish, to distinguish between race and nationality or between nationality and religion, as is assumed by S. Zeitlin in Jewish Quarterly Review, N.S. xxvi., 1936, pp. 313-348.

"Eleazar the high priest Prolemy, to King Ptolemy greeting. If you and Queen  $\frac{3}{841}$ . Arsinge a and your children b are in good health, all is well with us. On receiving your letter we were greatly pleased with your proposal, and gathering together the people, we read it to them and made plain to them the piety which you show toward God. We also showed them the twenty shallow bowls of gold, the thirty of silver and the five mixing-bowls and the table for offerings <sup>c</sup> and the hundred talents for sacrifices and for the other things which the temple may need, which gifts were brought by Andreas and Aristaeus, your most honoured friends, who are good men, eminent in learning and worthy of your own excellent qualities. Be assured that we shall submit to anything that is of benefit to you, even though it exceed our nature,<sup>d</sup> for we ought to make a return for the kindness which you have shown our fellow-eitizens in various ways. We therefore promptly offered sacrifices on behalf of you and your sister and children and friends,<sup>e</sup> and the people offered up prayers that your plans may be realized and that your kingdom may be preserved in peace and that

<sup>c</sup> The table of shew-bread is meant (cf. §§ 60 ff.), which in LXX Chron. is called "the table of setting forth" ( $\pi \rho o \theta \epsilon \sigma \epsilon \omega s$ ), with which  $dv d\theta \epsilon \sigma \iota s$  here is probably synonymous.

(7) This, then, was the high priest's reply. But I Magnifihave not thought it necessary to report the names of Ptolemy's the seventy b elders who were sent by Eleazar and gifts to the brought the Law, their names being set down at the high priset. end of the letter.<sup>c</sup> However, as for the magnificence § 51. and workmanship of the dedicatory offerings which the king sent to the temple of God, I have thought it not inappropriate to describe them, in order that the king's eagerness to honour God may be apparent to all. For the king gave unlimited sums to be spent for these gifts and was constantly with the craftsmen, and looking over their work, did not allow any of the objects to be carelessly or indifferently made. How magnificent each of these was I shall describe, although perhaps my History does not call for such an account, because I believe that in this way I shall bring home to my readers the king's love of art and his magnanimity.

(8) First of all I shall give a description of the Ptolemy table. Now the king had in mind to make this object designs a table for of unusually large dimensions, and he gave orders to the temple.

<sup>b</sup> Arist. 72. Josephus carelessly forgets that there were 6 from each of the 12 tribes (§ 56). Possibly from this state ment in Josephus comes the familiar designation of the Alexandrian version of Scripture as of ¿βδομήκοντα or o' (although oβ' also occurs in the Mss.), in Latin Septuaginta.

<sup>b</sup> In the following sections on the table of shew-bread Arist. (followed by Josephus) greatly amplifies the brief description given in the LXX, EX, XXV, 23 ff., XXXVII. 10 ff., although the LXX was supposedly not yet in existence. Beside committing an anachronism the author of this pseudepigraph has freely used his imagination in describing the table, and his 32 temple) at Jerusalem, to see how large it was and whether it was possible for a larger one than this to be constructed. And when he learned what the size of the existing table was and that there was nothing to prevent a larger one being made, he said that he would like to construct one as much as five times as large as the one there, but was afraid that it might be of no use in the temple ministrations because of its excessive size, for it was his wish to make dedicatoryofferings not merely for show but also to be of use in the temple ministrations; it was for that reason, he reflected, that the former table had been constructed of moderate proportions, and not through lack of gold; and so he decided not to go beyond the existing table in size, but to construct one more remarkable for the variety and beauty of its materials. And, as he was elever in understanding the nature of all sorts of things and devising new and wonderful objects, he himself, where there were no written directions,ª furnished a design of his own invention and, after explaining it to the craftsmen, ordered them to make these objects, and, where there were written directions, he ordered the men to follow these exactly and complete their work similarly.

(9)<sup>b</sup> Having, therefore, undertaken to make a table Description after this model,<sup>c</sup> they constructed one two and a of the description remains obscure in many places. The notes following are meant chiefly to clarify the relation of Josephus' text to that of Arist. ; for fuller explanations of the architectural or decorative details the reader should consult the commentaries on Arist.

Moreover they wrought a rim of a handbreadth and twisted wave-mouldings carved in low relief of a rope-design, of which the modelling was a marvellously faithful imitation, on all three surfaces. For these (rims) were triangular, and each angle had the same pattern worked in it, so that, when they were turned, the same form without any difference appeared on every surface. Now, on the rim, the side sloping down toward ° the table had lovely modelling, but the side turned outwards was adorned with even greater beauty of workmanship, since it came under the eye of the spectator. For that reason the upper edge, where the two surfaces met, was an acute angle, and no one angle, of which there were three, as we have said before, appeared less than the others when the table was carried round. And in the coils of the relief-work were set precious stones, one beside another, and they were secured with gold pins by which they were pierced. The side of the rim which slanted upward to meet the eye was ornamented with an egg-pattern made of most beautiful stone resembling in its carving the continuous flutings which ran all round the table. And below the eggmodelling the craftsmen set round a wreath on which were carved in relief the likenesses of all kinds of fruit, so that elusters of grapes hung down and ears the dimension of width is omitted in the MSS. of Arist. itself, probably through an oversight.

The nature of the rim is puzzling; Dr. Thackeray, in his translation of Arist., helpfully suggests that it was a "triangular rotatory bar crowning the border and turning on pivots at the corner."

of grain stood up and pomegranates were inclosed.<sup>a</sup> And they fashioned stones for every species of the above-mentioned fruits, so that each was represented in its own colour, and they fastened them to the gold <sup>b</sup> round the whole table. Similarly, below the wreath another egg-pattern was made, and flutings were carved in low relief, the table being constructed with the same appearance of variety of workmanship and elegance on both ends,<sup>c</sup> so that, even when the table was turned the other way there was no difference in the two wave-mouldings and rims, but the same form of decoration extended right down to the feet. For they made a plate of gold four fingers wide along the whole width of the table, into which they set the feet and then fastened them to the table near the rim by pins and clamps, in order that, on whichever side the table was placed, they might present the same appearance of original workmanship and costliness. On the Top of the table itself d they carved a meander, in the midst of table. which they set valuable stones of various forms like $ 66. stars,<sup>e</sup> such as the ruby and emerald, each of which sparkled most delightfully to the eye, and other kinds of stones which are most sought after and desired for their precious quality. central panel shaped like a lozenge, into which were pressed stones of crystal and amber, and these by their appearance of regular alternation <sup>a</sup> afforded a wonderfully attractive sight to behold. As for the feet, they had capitals made to imitate unfolding lilies, with their petals bent back under the table, while within they held their stamens erect to be seen. And they had a base made of ruby a handbreadth high, which presented the appearance of a pedestal<sup>b</sup>; it was eight fingers wide, and on it the whole shaft ° of the foot rested. They also carved each of the feet in relief with most delicate and painstaking modelling, creating ivy and vine-branches and clusters of grapes, so that one would suppose they were not other than real. For, as they moved in the wind because of their lightness and fine-edged tenuousness, they gave the appearance of natural things rather than of artificial imitations. The workmen also showed originality in constructing the whole table in the form d of a triptych, the parts being so smoothly held together that the places where they were joined could not be seen or even suspected. And the thickness of the table was no less than half a cubit. And so this dedicatory-offering was finished, such being the preciousness of its material and the variety of ornament and the imitative skill of the craftsmen in modelling, in accordance with the great munificence of the king, for he was eager to produce a table which, if it was not to be greater in size than were admirable in their craft, but much more through the zeal and munificence of the king, for not only did he furnish the craftsmen with a lavish and generous abundance of material, but he also gave up attending to public affairs and himself came to see the artisans and supervised the whole work. This was the reason for the craftsmen's diligence, for, taking an example from the king and the zeal shown by him, they applied themselves to their tasks with greater will to labour.

Now Eleazar, the high the Jewish elders at priest, after dedicating them to God and honouring Alexandria. the bearers, gave them gifts to take to the king, and Aristeas sent them back to the king. And when they came to Alexandria, and Ptolemy heard of their arrival and of the coming of the seventy <sup>b</sup> elders, he at once sent for Andreas and Aristaeus, his envoys. Accordingly, when they came, they delivered to him the letters which they had brought him from the high priest, and reported to him all that the high priest had suggested that they should convey by word of mouth." Thereupon, being eager to meet the elders who had come from Jerusalem to translate the laws, he gave orders to dismiss any others who might be present on official business, thereby doing something very unusual and contrary to custom. For those who were brought by such reasons used to come before him on the fifth day, while envoys were admitted after a month. On this occasion, however,

<sup>a</sup> I. Abrahams remarks, Jewish Quarterly Review, xiv., 1902, p. 340, "there is some rabbinic confirmation that the  $\chi\rho\nu\sigma\sigma\rho\rhoa\phi la$  ['writing in gold']... was associated with the scrolls of the law used in Alexandria. The statement in Aristeas confuses the whole use, with the divine name. The name of God (according to Tract. Sopherim, i. 10) was so written in an Alexandrian codex."

he dismissed these people and awaited those who had been sent by Eleazar. Now when the elders came with the gifts which the high priest had given them to take to the king and with the leather skins on which the laws were written in letters of gold,<sup>a</sup> he questioned them about these books. So they unrolled the wrappings and showed them to him, whereupon the king marvelled at the fineness of the membranes and the impossibility of telling where they were joined, so well were they fitted together ; and, having done so for a long while, he said that he was thankful to them for coming, and more so to him who had sent them, but most of all to God, whose laws these were. Then both the elders and the others present cried out with one voice to wish the king happiness, at which he burst into tears through excess of pleasure, since it is natural for great joy to be expressed by the same signs as grief.<sup>b</sup> He then ordered the books to be given to those in charge of the records,<sup>c</sup> and only then did he greet the men, saying that it was right for him first to speak of the things for which he had summoned them and then to address them. He promised, moreover, that he would make a special occasion of the day on which they had come to him and would celebrate it every year so long as he lived, for, he said, the day of their coming happened to be the same as that of the victory

<sup>e</sup> τὰ βιβλία δοῦναι τοῖς ἐπὶ τῆς τάξεως in Josephus corresponds to εἰς τάξιν ἀποδοῦναι τὰ τεύχη in Arist., which is generally translated " put the rolls back in their place" or " in order." &lt;sup>a</sup> If this is a reference to the battle of Cos c. 258 B.C. (for the date see the chronological note of W. Tarn in CAII vii. 862), it is an error or a deliberate correction of history, for Ptolemy Philadelphus was decisively defeated by Antigonus Gonatas in that battle. No other naval battle between these two rulers is known to us. Some years later there was a naval battle at Andros between a Ptolemy and an Antigonus, but it is not certain whether the Ptolemy was Philadelphus or his successor Euergetes, or whether the Antigonus was Gonatas or his successor Doson, or finally whether the battle was a victory or a defeat for the Egyptians. (12) Accordingly Nicanor, who was the officer in Ptolemy charge of the reception of guests, called Dorotheus, reception who took care of these matters, and told him to pre- for the pare whatever food was required by each. Now these elders. matters were arranged by the king in the following Aristeas way : for each city that had its own d habits of diet there was a person who looked after these and prepared all food for visitors in accordance with their customs, in order that they might have their usual kind of fare at the banquet-table, and so have the more pleasure and not take offence at anything to which they might be unaccustomed. And this is just what was done in their case, Dorotheus being put in charge of these matters because of his exactness in the details of living.<sup>e</sup> He therefore spread out f all the materials at his disposal for such receptions, and had the couches divided into two rows, Arsinoe II is assumed in Arist, to have been alive at the time of this victory, and neither battle was fought before 269 B.C., when she died; cf. Bevan, Ptol. p. 68, and Tramontano, p. 113 (with literature).

<sup>b</sup> The Jews of Alexandria lived near the royal palace or citadel (cf. Dr. Thackeray's note to Ap. ii. 33), in the northeastern part of the city by the sea. The Palestinian elders, therefore, were appropriately lodged there.

the king having so commanded; for he had ordered that half the guests should recline beside him and the others behind his own couch,<sup>a</sup> thus neglecting nothing in which he might show them honour. And when they had been seated in this manner, he told Dorotheus to serve them after the fashion to which all those who had come to him from Judaea were accustomed. He therefore dispensed with the sacred heralds and sacrificers and the others who used to offer prayers, but, instead, the king called upon one of the visitors, named Elissaeus,<sup>b</sup> who was a priest, to offer prayer. And so he stood in their midst and praved for the happiness of the king and his subjects. Thereupon applause and cries of joy arose from all sides, and, when they had done, they turned to feasting and enjoying the good things that had been prepared. But the king, after waiting for what seemed a sufficiently long time, began to philosophize and asked each one of them about problems of nature,<sup>c</sup> and when, after considering the questions, they gave precise explanations concerning every single problem suggested to them for discussion, he was delighted with them and made the banquet last for twelve ddays, so that anyone who wishes to find out the details mean "at his left," since it was the custom to recline on the left arm, and so those seated at the king's left would be somewhat behind him. Chamonard, however, renders the second phrase by "à une table placée derrière la sienne."

<sup>b</sup> Here Josephus reverts for a moment to the beginning of Arist.'s account of the symposium, §§ 201-202.

<sup>c</sup> This celebrated philosopher from Eretria was a contemporary of Ptolemy Philadelphus and a friend of Antigonus Gonatas. Most scholars doubt that he was ever in Alexandria, but Tramontano holds it possible, cf. his note ad loc. 50 of the questions discussed at the banquet can learn them by reading the book which Aristaeus composed on this account.<sup>a</sup>

And so he brought them there and requested them, since they had everything they might need for the translation of the law, to earry out their task without interruption. Thereupon they set to work as am-

<sup>b</sup> From this sentence (in the corresponding passage in Arist. §§ 304 ff.) it appears that the translators spent the late afternoon and evening at or near Ptolemy's palace, and after paying their respects at court every morning, left for the island of Pharos (for  $d\pi \eta \epsilon \sigma ar$ , "went back," Arist. has  $d\pi \epsilon \lambda \epsilon \sigma ar$ , "were dismissed"). For the bearing of this point on the date of the composition of Arist. see H. Willrich, Urkundenfülschung in der hellenistisch-jüdischen Literatur, 1924, p. 88, and Tramontano's note ad loc. And early each day they would go to the court, pay their respects to Ptolemv and then go back to the same place b and, after washing their hands in the sea and purifying themselves,<sup>c</sup> would betake themselves in this state to the translation of the laws. Now, when the Law had been transcribed and the work of translation brought to an end in seventy-two days, Demetrius assembled all the Jews at the same place where the laws had been rendered, and in the presence of the translators read them aloud. Thereupon the people expressed their approval of the elders who had interpreted the Law, and also praised Demetrius for conceiving the idea through which he had become the originator of great benefits to them, and they urged him as well

Greece, 1934, pp. 49 f., writes : "Although official Judaism has preserved no trace of a precept to that effect, there is abundant evidence that Jews in Hellenistic countries built their synagogues by preference in the proximity of water. Josephus, Ant. xiv. 10, 23, para. 255, tells of a decision of the people of Halicarnassus to suffer the Jews to . . . build synagogues, as was their custom, by the sea. At Philippi the apostle Paul and his companions went forth on a Sabbath outside the town gate near the river where they supposed there was a synagogue (Acts xvi. 13).

"As we have seen, the synagogues of Delos, Aegina and Miletus in fact lie close to the edge of the shore." He adds in a note, "It seems plausible to seek the motive for this Jewish custom of the Diaspora in . . . the ritual uncleanness of the land of the Gentiles," and cites an illustrative passage from Mekhilta, the rabbinic commentary on Exodus (xii. 1). 53

Demetrius also informed him that it was reported <sup>d</sup> of Theodectes, the tragic poet,<sup>e</sup> that, when he wished to mention in one of his dramas the matters written in the sacred book,<sup>f</sup> his eyes were afflicted with cataracts, and, when he recognized the cause, he rid himself of this disease by propitiating God.

(15) The king, then, having received these books Ptolemy's from the hands of Demetrius, did obeisance to them g gifts to the gewish and ordered that great care should be taken of the elders and books in order that they might remain intact; he high priest. also invited the translators to come to him frequently $ 317. from Judaea, for this would be profitable for them

Nic. vii. 7. 6, 1150 b). He is said to have been defeated by Theopompus in a rhetorical contest arranged by Artemisia at Halicarnassus. There seems to be no evidence that he visited Egypt.

A fragment of a Hellenistic drama on a biblical theme (the Exodus) survives in the excerpts from the Exagoge of the Jewish poet Ezekiel in Eusebius, Praep. Evang. ix. 28 ff., separately edited by J. Wieneke, Ezechielis Iudaei poetae Alexandrini . . . Exagoge, 1931.

<sup>9</sup> Or, less probably, " having received these (explanations) from Demetrius, did obeisance to them (the Jews)"; the corresponding passage in Arist. apparently refers to the books (so Tramontano); moreover it is inherently more likely that the king did obeisance to the sacred books than to the Jews.

At this time, he said, it was only right to send them home, but, if they came to him of their own will, they would obtain all that their wisdom deserved to obtain and his own generosity was able to provide. For the time being, therefore, he sent them home, giving each of them three very fine garments, two talents of gold, a small wine-cup worth a talent,<sup>b</sup> and the covering for a banquet-table.<sup>c</sup> Now these gifts he gave them to keep for themselves, but to the high priest Eleazar he sent by them ten couches with feet of silver and the furnishings belonging to them and a small wine $eup^{d}$  worth thirty talents and, in addition to these, ten garments, a purple robe, a very handsome crown and a hundred pieces of fine-linen weave, as well as shallow bowls and cups and libation-bowls e and two golden mixing-bowls to be dedicated to God. He also requested of him by letter that, if any of these men wished to come to him, he should permit them to do so, for he highly valued the society of those possessed of learning, and took pleasure in using his wealth for the benefit of such persons. These, then, were the things done by Ptolemy Philadelphus in appreciation and honour of the Jews.<sup>f</sup> example, Seleucus Nicator a granted them citizenship in the cities which he founded in Asia and Lower Syria and in his capital, Antioch, itself, and declared them to have equal privileges with the Macedonians and Greeks who were settled in these cities, so that this citizenship of theirs remains to this very day; and the proof of this is the fact that he gave orders that those Jews who were unwilling to use foreign oil should receive a fixed sum of money from the gymnasiarchs to pay for their own kind of oil b; and, when the people of Antioch proposed to revoke this privilege, Mucianus, who was then governor of Syria, maintained it; and afterwards, when Vespasian Vespasian and his son Titus became masters of the habitable maintain world, and the Alexandrians and Antiochians asked Jewish that the Jews should no longer continue to have the Cf B.J. via rights of citizenship, they did not obtain their request. <sup>110 f.</sup> From this one may get some notion of the fairness and generosity of the Romans, especially of Vespasian and Titus, for in spite of having suffered great hardships in the war with the Jews and feeling bitter toward them because they had not laid down their arms and persisted in fighting to the very last, they still did not deprive them of their existing rights of citizenship, mentioned above ; indeed c they overcame their former anger as well as the demands of the Alexandrians and Antiochians, who were powerful to learn the details, let him read the hundred and twenty-third and hundred and twenty-fourth books of Nicolas' History. In 217 B.C. Philopator decisively defeated Antiochus at the battle of Raphia near the sea-coast of Palestine, a few miles S.W. of Gaza; as a result of this defeat Antiochus had to "evacuate the whole country up to the Lebanon" (Bevan, Ptol. p. 229). Philopator died in 203 B.C., and two years later his successor Ptolemy Epiphanes had to give up Palestine to Antiochus' victorious forces, cf. note a, p. 66.

<sup>a</sup> From the following sentence it seems that by "Ptolemy" here Josephus means Ptolemy Philopator. After Philopator's death (203 в.c.) and Ptolemy Epiphanes' accession Antiochus defeated the latter's general, the Aetolian Scopas, in two campaigns between 201 and 198 в.c., and finally ended Ptolemaic rule in Palestine. Thus Josephus is inaccurate in saying that Antiochus defeated Ptolemy if, as is generally assumed, he means Ptolemy Philopator, cf. Bevan, II. Sel. ii. 37, note 6, "Coele-Syria had thus to be conquered twice by Antiochus subsequently to Raphia. This is the real fact at the basis of Josephus' statement that Antiochus conquered it before the death of Ptolemy Philopator. Josephus makes a hasty inference from his knowledge that Scopas had found the country in Seleucid occupation." I venture to suggest, however, that Josephus' inaccuracy is more apparent than 66 feated Ptolemy, he annexed Judaea.<sup>a</sup> And on the death of Philopator his son sent out a great force with Scopas as general against the people of Coele-Syria, and he took many of their cities and also our nation, which went over to him after being attacked.<sup>b</sup> But not long afterwards Antiochus defeated Scopas in a battle near the sources of the Jordan,<sup>c</sup> and destroyed a great part of his army. And later, when Antiochus took possession of the cities in Coele-Syria<sup>d</sup> which Scopas had held, and Samaria, the Jews of their own will went over to him and admitted him to their city and made abundant provision for his entire army and his elephants; and they readily joined his forces in besieging the garrison which had been left by Scopas in the citadel of Jerusalem.<sup>e</sup> Accordingly Antiochus, considering it just to requite the zeal and exertions of the Jews on his behalf, wrote to his governors f real. Above, in § 130, he speaks of Antiochus' victories and defeats in wars with Philopator and Epiphanes. In the present passage it is quite possible that by "Ptolemy " he means not Philopator but Epiphanes, and that we should render the  $\delta \hat{\epsilon}$  in the following sentence by "for" and not by "and " or "but," thus making the sentence explanatory of the preceding one : i.e. the passage would read, "When, however, Antiochus had defeated Ptolemy (Epiphanes), he annexed Judaea. For on the death of Philopator his son (Epiphanes), etc."

<sup>d</sup> Possibly "Coele-Syria" here means the Decapolis, cf. below. § 136 and Ant. xi. 25 note; it may, however, be merely a repetition of Coele-Syria in § 131, which means Palestine and Syria south of the Lebanon.

<sup>a</sup> "Friends" here probably has its technical meaning; in the Macedonian kingdoms there were two orders of the military aristocracy (as earlier in Persia), that of Kinsmen (of the king) and that of Friends, cf. <sup>b</sup> The following excerpts from Polybius (not elsewhere preserved) hardly "attest" Josephus' statements about Antiochus' appreciation of the help given him by the Jews, as is pointed out by Reinach, who suspects Josephus of "throwing dust in his reader's eyes." In the first place we have decided, on account of their piety, to furnish them for their sacrifices an allowance of sacrificial animals, wine, oil and frankincense to the of Coele-Syria and Phoenicia under Antiochus the Great, cf. Michel, Recueil d'inscriptions grecques, 1900, No. 1229 (p. 858); Bevan, H. Sel. ii. 297, writes, "In objecting that Ptolemy was made governor in 218, Juden u. Griechen, p. 40, Willrich is thinking of the date in which he was in the Egyptian service, Polyb. v. 65. 3. That he deserted to the Seleucid in 218 with Ceraeas and Hippolochus, Polyb. v. 70. 10, is conjecture only. When he was made governor of Coele-Syria there is absolutely nothing to show." (Of this reply to his objection Willrich takes no notice in his later work, Urkundenfälschung in der hellenistisch-jüdischen Literatur, 1924.)

<sup>c</sup> The yepovoia, lit. " council of elders," would be the chief Jewish legislative and judicial body under the presidency of the high priest, corresponding to the later Sanhedrin. In the books of Maccabees the members of this council are usually called "elders ( $\pi\rho\epsilon\sigma\beta\dot{\upsilon}\tau\epsilon\rho\sigma\iota$ ) of the people." (For the Jewish yepovoia in the cities of the Diaspora, see the useful work by J. B. Frey, Corpus Inscriptionum Iudaicarum, I, 1936, pp. lxxxv ff.) See further Appendix D.

<sup>b</sup> Text uncertain; among other things we expect the number of artabae to be given. The artaba was an Egyptian (originally Persian) measure of varying capacity, normally about 40 litres, according to A. S. Hunt and C. C. Edgar, Select Papyri (Loeb Classical Library), i. 447. According to F. Heichelheim, Wirtschaftliche Schwankungen der Zeit von Alexander bis Augustus, 1930, pp. 118 ff., the cost of an artaba of wheat in Egypt during the 3rd century varied from 2 to 5 drachmas (in exceptional years less than 2 or more than 5).

72

value of twenty thousand pieces of silver, and sacred artabae of fine flour <sup>b</sup> in accordance with their native law,<sup>c</sup> and one thousand four hundred and sixty medimni<sup>d</sup> of wheat and three hundred and seventyfive medimmi of salt.<sup>e</sup> And it is my will that these things be made over to them as I have ordered, and that the work on the temple be completed, including the porticoes and any other part that it may be necessary to build. The timber, moreover, shall be brought from Judaea itself and from other nations <sup>f</sup> and Lebanon without the imposition of a toll-charge. The like shall be done with the other materials needed for making the restoration of the temple more splendid. And all the members of the nation shall have a form of government in accordance with the laws of their country, and the senate, the priests, the scribes of the temple g and the temple-singers

<sup>c</sup> Probably the temple measure is meant. We need not suppose that the mention of artabae indicates "an Egyptian redactor" of the letter, as Büchler and Reinach suppose. Ptolemaic measures continued to be used in Palestine even after the Seleucid conquest; moreover  $d\rho r \alpha \beta \eta$  was a "Hebrew measure" (cf. Heb. 'ardāb) according to Epiphanius (cited by S. Krauss, Talmudische Archäologie ii. 395). Krauss equates the Ptolemaic artaba with the Heb. homer.

<sup>'d</sup> The (Attic and Sicilian) medimnus = c.50 litres. Whether the number 1460 has any significance (=365 × 4) and presupposes an Egyptian "solar year," as Büchler suggests, seems to me very doubtful.

<sup>e</sup> This royal grant of provisions for the temple reminds us of those said to have been made by Cyrus, Ant. xi. 16 ff. (1 Esd. vi. 29; Ezra vi. 9 ff.), who gave 20,500 artabae of wheat (!); by Darius, Ant. xi. 62, 102 (1 Esd. iv. 52 ff.); and by Xerxes (bibl. Artaxerxes), Ant. xi. 127 (1 Esd. viii. 19 ff.).

<sup>a</sup> H. Willrich, Urkundenfälschung, p. 73, objects that the Jews did not pay a poll-tax, or other taxes, directly to the Seleucid king, but we know too little of the Seleucid system of taxation to judge. It may be, moreover, that in Seleucid times the poll-tax, like the later Roman tributum capitis in the provinces, included a variety of personal and business taxes, cf. Arnold and Bouchier, The Roman System of Provincial Administration, 1914, pp. 199 ff. On the poll-tax in the Seleucid kingdom see Schürer i. 229 note 14, Bikerman, Inst. Sci. p. 111, Rostovtzeff, HHW, pp. 469, 471.

And, in order that the city may the more quickly be inhabited, I grant both to the present inhabitants and to those who may return before the month of Hyperberetaios <sup>c</sup> exemption from taxes for three years.<sup>d</sup> We shall also relieve them in future from the third part of their tribute, so that their losses may be made good. And as for those who were carried off from the city and are slaves, we herewith set them free, both them and the children born to them, and order their property to be restored to them."

(4) Now these were the contents of the letter. Decree of And out of reverence for the temple he also published III cona proclamation throughout the entire kingdom,<sup>e</sup> of <sup>cerning</sup> the which the contents were as follows. "It is unlawful Jerusalem. for any foreigner to enter the enclosure of the temple which is forbidden to the Jews, except to those of them who are accustomed to enter after purifying themselves in accordance with the law of the country." Nor shall anyone bring into the city the flesh of horses or of mules or of wild or tame asses, or of leopards, first month of the year, according to the older Hebrew calendar.

<sup>d</sup> For other instances of tax-exemptions allegedly granted the Jews by foreign rulers, cf. Ant. xi. 61 (1 Esd. iv. 49-Darius), xii. 151 (Antiochus III), xiii. 52 (1 Macc. x. 29--Demetrius); Herod the Great also did so on at least two occasions, cf. Ant. xv. 303, xvii. 25. For an actual instance of such an exemption by Antiochus III to a Hellenistic city cf. Rostovtzeff. CAII vii. 179.

 Even those scholars who consider this decree genuine admit that this phrase, "throughout the entire kingdom," is a later addition, or at least an exaggeration on Josephus' part.

' On this prohibition cf. B.J. v. 194 note c, 227; for similar rabbinic restrictions cf. Mishnah, Kelim i. 8.

<sup>a</sup> Jews were forbidden to eat the flesh of the animals here mentioned, but there is no evidence that they were forbidden to use them (at least the tame ones) for any purpose, or bring their skins into Jerusalem. In this curious prohibition Büchler sees another indication that Antiochus' decree originally applied to the Samaritan temple on Mount Gerizim ; cf. Appendix D.

<sup>b</sup> There are extant a number of ancient Jewish Greek inscriptions which mention fines to be paid the Jewish community or synagogue treasury for violation of Jewish re-76 foxes or hares or, in general, of any animals forbidden to the Jews. Nor is it lawful to bring in their skins or even to breed any of these animals in the city.<sup>a</sup> But only the sacrificial animals known to their ancestors and necessary for the propitiation of God shall they be permitted to use. And the person who violates any of these statutes shall pay to the priests a fine of three thousand drachmas of silver.b

He also testified in writing to our piety and loyalty Letter of when, on the occasion of his being in the upper Antiochus satrapies, he learned of revolts in Phrygia and Lydia, Zeuxis, and ordered Zeuxis, his governor, and one of his governor of Lydia, close friends, to send some of our people from ordering the Babylonia to Phrygia. He then wrote as follows. tion of "King Antiochus to Zeuxis, his father,<sup>d</sup> greeting. If Babylonian you are in good health, it is well. I also am in sound Phrygia. health. Learning that the people in Lydia and Phrygia are revolting, I have come to consider this as requiring very serious attention on my part, and, on taking counsel with my friends as to what should be done, I determined to transport two thousand Jewish families with their effects from Mesopotamia and Babylonia to the fortresses and most important ligious statutes, e.g. from Smyrna, Tlos, Hierapolis in Phrygia (1000 denarii), and Stobi in Macedonia (250,000 denarii !!).

<sup>c</sup> It is generally assumed that this was the Zeuxis who was satrap (or governor, στρατηγός) of Babylonia c. 220 B.C. (Polyb. v. 45 ff.) and that he, in turn, was the Zeuxis who was satrap of Lydia c. 201 B.C. (Polyb. xvi. 1. 8). Assuming the identity of these three, we must further suppose that Zeuxis was transferred from Babylonia to Lydia sometime after 213 B.C. when Antiochus III conquered the provinces in Asia Minor held by Achaeus.

<sup>d</sup> Another instance of the title "father" given by a Seleucid king to his officer occurs in Ant. xiii. 127 († Mace. xi. 32-Demetrius to Lasthenes); cf. also Ant. xi. 218 (Apocr. Esther xiii. 6-Artaxerxes to Haman).

<sup>a</sup> The long section which follows, §§ 154-236, on the Tobiads, Joseph and Hyrcanus, has been the subject of much scholarly discussion because it is obviously derived from several sources, some trustworthy, others fictitious. The various problems, chronological and otherwise, are treated in the works cited in Appendix E.

<sup>1</sup> This gift is mentioned in several ancient sources : Polyb. xxviii. 20. 9, "... the agreement which those in Alexandria asserted had recently been made between Ptolemy and his (Antiochus Epiphanes') father, to the effect that Ptolemy should receive Coele-Syria as a dowry when he married Cleopatra, the mother of the present (Egyptian) ruler"; Appian, Syr. 5, "Being about to make war on the Romans, he (Antiochus III) attempted to win over the neighbouring kings by alliances of marriage, and sent his daughter 80

(iv. 1)<sup>a</sup> After this Antiochus made a treaty of Ptolemy friendship with Ptolemy,<sup>b</sup> and gave him his daughter Epiphanes and the Cleopatra in marriage, c making over to him as her high priest dowry Coele-Syria, d Samaria, Judaea e and Phoenicia. f Onias. And when the tribute was divided between the two sovereigns,<sup>g</sup> the prominent men purchased the right to farm the taxes in their several provinces h and, collecting the sum fixed, paid it to the royal pair.

At this time the Samaritans, $^{i}$  who were flourishing, did much mischief to the Jews by laying waste their land and carrying off slaves j; and this happened in Cleopatra, surnamed the Syrian, to Egypt to Ptolemy, giving him as a marriage-present Coele-Syria, which he had himself taken from Ptolemy "; so also Porphyry, ap. Eusebius, Chronicon, mentioning Syria, Samaria and Judaea, and Jerome on Daniel xi. 17, who specifies " all of Cocle-Syria." In view of the fact that the Seleucids ruled all of Palestine and Syria after the victories of Antiochus the Great over the army of Ptolemy Epiphanes, 200-198 B.C. (cf. § 131 notes), many scholars believe that the assignment of the revenues of Coele-Syria to Ptolemy Epiphanes was never carried out, but if by "Ptolemy" in § 158 (cf. note ad loc.) Epiphanes is meant, it follows that Josephus (or his source), at any rate, believed that Ptolenty actually had complete or partial control of Palestine and Transjordan, in spite of the earlier Seleucid conquest of the country; see the article of Cuq, cited in Appendix E.

· i.e. Ptolemy Epiphanes; after "Ptolemy" the variant adds, "Euergetes, who was the father of Philopator." This point is discussed in Appendix E; here it may suffice to remark that while the variant is not necessarily an "absurd gloss," as Reinach too decidedly calls it, it is probably an addition to Josephus' text made to remove the difficulty caused by representing Coele-Syria as subject to Ptolemy Epiphanes after the definitive conquest of the country by the Seleucids in 198 B.C. Since Josephus has already got beyond the reign of Euergetes (246-221 B.C.) and has already mentioned Epiphanes and his contemporary Antiochus III 82 the high-priesthood of Onias. For, when Eleazar died, his uncle Manasses took over the high priesthood, and, after he departed this life, the office came to Onias, who was a son of Simon, called the Just.ª And Simon was a brother of Eleazar, as I have said before.<sup>b</sup> This Onias was small-minded and passionately fond of money and since for this reason he did not render on behalf of the people the tribute of twenty talents of silver which his fathers had paid to the kings out of their own revenues, he roused the anger of King Ptolemy.<sup>c</sup> And the king sent an envoy to Jerusalem to denounce Onias for not rendering the tribute, and threatened that, if he did not receive it, he would parcel out their land and send his soldiers to settle on it. Accordingly, when the Jews heard the king's message, they were dismayed, but Onias was not put out of countenance by any of these threats, so great was his avarice.

(2) Now there was a certain Joseph, who was still Joseph, the Tobiad, and a young man but because of his dignity and foresight his uncle.

(§ 131 ff.), and since Joseph the Tobiad is obviously dealing with Epiphanes (cf. above, note f, p. 80) and not Euergetes, it is reasonable to suppose that the mention of Euergetes in the variant is an interpolation. On the other hand, in § 223 Josephus (or at least one of his sources) states that Joseph died about the time of Seleucus IV's accession, which was in 187 B.c., after being tax-collector for 22 years, so that he must have begun his work in 209 B.C. at the latest, that is, several years before the accession of Ptolenty Epiphanes, which was in 204/3 B.C. Moreover, it is probable that he retired from office some years before his death in 187 B.C., probably at the time of the Seleucid conquest of Coele-Syria in 198 B.c., which would move back the beginning of his term of office to 221 B.c. at the end of the reign of Euergetes; so that the interpolation here appears to have been the work of someone who was aware of the inconsistency of the sources used by Josephus in his narrative of the Tobiads.

<sup>a</sup> Variant (after "but") "because of his dignity (or seriousness) and care for justice had a (good) reputation."

<sup>b</sup> Or perhaps "a Tobiad," i.e. a descendant of the Tobiah who was a contemporary of Nehemiah.

<sup>c</sup> Variant Phicola (Gr. Phikola); the site has not been identified, but presumably was in Transjordan, since the Tobiads were originally Ammonites; cf. § 230 note c.

<sup>d</sup> Whether προστασίαν here is merely a synonym of  $\tau \eta s$   $a \rho \iota \epsilon \rho a \tau \iota \kappa \eta s$  or has a distinct, technical meaning, indicating a eivil office (cf. Preisigke, Fachwörter, p. 152) is still a matter of dispute. For a discussion on this see works cited in Appendix E. Here it may be noted that the passages following and outside texts favour the former alternative, cf. 84 had a reputation for uprightness a among the inhabitants of Jerusalem, his father being Tobias,<sup>b</sup> and his mother a sister of the high priest Onias; and, when his mother informed him of the envoy's arrival -for he himself happened to be away in the village of Phichola,<sup>c</sup> from which he had originally come-, he went to the city (of Jerusalem) and upbraided Onias for not regarding the safety of his fellow-citizens and for being willing, instead, to place the nation in danger by withholding the money on account of which, Joseph said, he had received the chief magistracy d and had obtained the high-priestly office. But, if he was so passionately fond of money that for its sake he could endure to see his country endangered and his fellow-citizens suffer all sorts of things, he advised him to go to the king and request him to remit to him either the whole of the money or a part of it. As Onias, however, answered that he did not desire to hold office and said that he was ready to Hecataeus ap. Diodor. Sic. xl. 4, τούς . . . μάλιστα δυνησομένους τοῦ σύμπαντος ἔθνους προΐστασθαι, τούτους ἱερεῖς  $\dot{a}\pi\dot{\epsilon}\delta\epsilon_{\ell}\xi\epsilon$ , and Sirach xlv. 24, of Phineas, the priest,  $\pi\rho\sigma\sigma\tau a\tau\epsilon\hat{\iota}\nu$ άγίων και λαοῦ αὐτοῦ; we must remember also that in the early Hellenistic period the high priest was regarded as the chief magistrate of the Jews. Below, in § 285, Josephus says that after Mattathias' death, his son Judas succeeded to the  $\pi \rho o \sigma \tau a \sigma (a \nu \tau \hat{\omega} \nu \pi \rho a \gamma \mu \dot{a} \tau \omega \nu)$ , which clearly means the assumption of chief authority or leadership of the rebels, and is therefore not a technical term of civil office (under the Seleucids). Nor does there appear to be sufficient ground for believing that Joseph later (cf. § 167) assumed the  $\pi \rho o \sigma \tau a \sigma (a \nu)$  and thus deprived Onias of part of his official rank, as maintained by Büchler and, more recently, by Momigliano and Fruin. The same problem arises in connexion with the quarrel about the agoranomia between the prostates Simon and the high priest Onias, 2 Macc. iii. 4, on which see the works cited in Appendix G.

give up the high-priesthood if that were possible,<sup>a</sup> and would not go b to the king, for he was in no way concerned about these matters, Joseph asked him whether he would give him leave to go as an envoy o to Ptolemy d on behalf of the nation. And, when Onias gave his permission, Joseph went up to the temple and, calling the people together in assembly, exhorted them not to be disturbed or frightened because of his uncle Onias' neglect of them, and begged them rather to keep their minds free of fear and dark forebodings; for he promised that he himself would go as an envoy to the king and persuade him that they were not doing any wrong. And so, when the people heard this, they thanked Joseph, while he himself went down from the temple and hospitably received the envoy sent by Ptolemy; and after presenting him with valuable gifts and entertaining him lavishly for many days, he sent him on ahead to the king, telling him that he himself would follow. For he had, indeed, become even more eager to meet the king, when the envoy encouraged him and urged that he go to Egypt, and promised to see that he should obtain from Ptolemy whatever he desired; for the envoy greatly admired his liberality e and the dignity of his character.

(3) And so the envoy went to Egypt and reported Joseph to the king the arrogant behaviour of Onias, and prepares informed him of the excellence of Joseph and that Alexandria.

<sup>b</sup> Lit. "go up," i.e. to a higher authority. The Jewish sources almost always speak of "going down" to Egypt from Palestine.

<sup>c</sup> This expression seems to be another indication that our text does not imply a separation between the offices of high priest and civil ruler (under Ptolemaic suzerainty).

<sup>a</sup> That is, merely their spokesman or envoy (cf, § 161 note d), as the context indicates. If he had been formally elected by the people to the highest civil office, Josephus' source would have said so; at any rate the king himself would have had to recognize him as such.

<sup>b</sup> Those scholars who believe (not without reason) that these events should be placed in the reign of Ptolemy Philopator, whose queen's name was Arsinoe, may assume that Josephus' authority, living in the 2nd or 1st century B.c., was more familiar with the name Cleopatra, borne by several Ptolemaic queens after Epiphanes' wife, and thus made a natural slip in calling Arsinoe Cleopatra (unless, of course, 88

he intended to come to him to ask that the sins of his people be excused, for he was their protector.<sup>a</sup> Indeed, he continued to use such@extravagance*of speech in praising the young man that he disposed both the king and his wife Cleopatra<sup>b</sup> to feel friendly toward Joseph even before his arrival. Now Joseph, after sending to his various friends in Samaria <sup>c</sup> and borrowing money, made ready the things needed for his journey, such as clothes, drinking-vessels, and pack-animals, which equipment he procured for about twenty thousand <sup>d</sup> drachmas, and came to Alexandria. But it so happened that at that time all the chief men and magistrates of the cities of Syria and Phoenicia were coming there to bid for the tax-farming rights which the king used to sell every year to the wealthy men in each city.<sup>e</sup> When these men, therefore, saw Joseph on the road, they made fun of his poverty and bareness. But when he arrived at Alexandria, he heard that Ptolemy was in Memphis, and so he Cleopatra is substituted for Arsinoe by Josephus himself, cf. Appendix E). Livy makes a similar slip, xxvii. 4, 10.

<sup>c</sup> The friendship of the (Ammonite) Tobiads with the Samaritans goes back to the time of Nehemiah, cf. Ant. xi. 174 (Neh. iv. 3).

<sup>a</sup> This and similar large sums freely mentioned in the Joseph-Hyreanus story (cf. $ 180 ff.) are in keeping with the fictitious nature of the details of the narrative, though the general contents and background may be quite historical.

<sup>e</sup> Cf. Rostovtzeff in CAH vii. 129 f., "The tax-farmers were local people, but the taxes were put up to auction not locally but at Alexandria. This is proved by various documents in the Zeno letters (esp. P. Cairo Zen. 59037) which show that the picture of an auction of provincial taxes drawn by Josephus in his wonderful story of the farmer of tribute from Coele-Syria.. is on the whole accurate." The revenue system of Ptolemaic Egypt is admirably described by C. Préaux, L'Économie royale des Lagides, 1939, pp. 61-435.

" That is, before he was greeted by Joseph; cf. Ant. xi. 331 for a similar courtesy shown by Alexander the Great to the Jewish high priest Jaddua.

met him there and presented himself to him.<sup>a</sup> Now the king was sitting in a chariot with his wife and with his friend Athenion-this was the man who had been an envoy to Jerusalem and had been entertained by Joseph-, and as soon as Athenion caught sight of him, he introduced him to the king, saying that this was the person whom he had described to him, when he returned from Jerusalem, as an excellent and liberal b young man. Ptolemy, therefore, first greeted him c and even invited him to come up into his chariot, and when he was seated, began to complain about the actions of Onias. Then Joseph said, " Pardon him because of his age d; for surely you are not unaware that old people and infants are likely to have the same level of intelligence. But from us who are young you will obtain everything so as to find no fault." Thereupon Ptolemy, being pleased with the charm and ready wit of the young man, began to be still fonder of him as though he were an old and tried friend, so much so that he told him to take up his residence in the palace and had him as a guest at his own table every day. Accordingly, when the king came to Alexandria, and the chief men of Syria saw Joseph seated at his side, they were disagreeably affected.

<sup>4</sup> According to §§ 44, 157, Onias was a son of Simon the Just whom Josephus makes a contemporary of Ptolemy Philadelphus, and was a child when his uncle Eleazar succeeded Simon, some time in Philadelphus' reign. Thus Onias must have been at least 70 years old at this time, which is supposedly after 193/2 B.c., the date of Ptolemy Epiphanes' marriage to Cleopatra (cf. § 154). Although Josephus is mistaken in placing Simon the Just so early in the 3rd century B.c. (cf. Appendix B), he is at least consistent in making Onias an old man at this time.

<sup>e</sup> This is obviously too large a sum in the light of other estimates of revenues which have come down to us (cf. Bouché-Leclercq, iii. 401): Jerome gives the revenue from 92

(4) Now when the day came round on which the rights to farm taxes in the cities were to be sold, bids were made by those eminent in rank in the various provinces.<sup>a</sup> When the sum of taxes from Coele-Syria<sup>b</sup> and from Phoenicia and Judaea with Samaria added up to eight thousand talents, Joseph-came forward and accused the bidders of having made an agreement to offer the king a low price for the taxes, whereas he for his part promised to give double that amount and send over to the king the property of those who had been remiss toward his house; for this right was sold d along with that of farming the taxes. Thereupon the king, who heard him gladly, said that he would confirm the sale of the tax-farming rights to him, as he was likely to increase his revenue, but asked whether he also had some persons to give surety for him; he then answered very cleverly, "Yes, I will offer persons of the very best character, whom you will not distrust." And when the king asked him to tell who they were, he replied, "I offer you, O King, you yourself and your wife as the persons who will give surety for me, each to guarantee the other's share." e At this Ptolemy laughed and granted him the tax-farming rights without guarantors. This act gave great pain to those who had come to Egypt from the cities, for they considered them-Egypt itself (de Aegypto) in the time of Ptolemy Philadelphus as 14,800 talents; Herodotus, iii. 91, gives 350 talents as the

as 14,500 talents; Herodotus, ii. 91, gives 350 talents as the tribute taken by Darius from Phoenicia, Palestine and Cyprus: Cicero estimates the total revenue of Ptoleny Auletes as 12,500 talents. Cf. also 2 Macc. iv. 8 ff.

from farming the taxes, he used his wealth to make permanent the power which he now had, thinking it prudent to preserve the source and foundation of his present good fortune by means of the wealth which he had himself acquired; and so he surreptitiously sent many gifts to the king and to Cleopatra and to their friends and to all those who were powerful at court, purchasing their goodwill through these gifts.

He once came to Alexandria, with his brother as he was taking there his daughter, who was of marriageable age, in order that he might marry her to one of the Jews of high rank; and when Joseph was dining with the king, a beautiful dancing-girl came into the banquet-room, and Joseph, having fallen in love with her, told his brother of this and begged him, since the yews were prevented by law from having intercourse with a foreign woman, to aid in concealing his sin and do him a good service by making it possible for him to satisfy his desire. Thereupon his brother gladly undertaking to be of service, beautified his own daughter and brought her to him by night to sleep with him. But Joseph in his drunken state did not know how matters really were, and so he-had intercourse with his brother's daughter, and when this had happened several times, he fell still more violently in love with her. <sup>b</sup> Willrich, JG pp. 93 ff., sees in this portrait of the young Hyrcanus an example of the Jews' admiration for "a bold and precocious intelligence," and compares him with the young Samuel, the young David, the young Daniel and the 98 was risking his life for a dancer whom the king would perhaps not allow him to have. But his brother urged him not to be anxious, telling him to enjoy without fear the woman whom he loved, and to make her his wife; and he revealed the truth to him, how he had chosen to dishonour his own daughter rather than see him fall into disgrace, and so Joseph, commending him for his brotherly love, married his daughter and by her begot a son named Hyrcanus, as we said before.<sup>a</sup> Now this child while still a young ad of The remark. thirteen years showed such natural courage and able charintelligence that he became an object of violent the young jealousy to his brothers because of his great superiority and enviable qualities.<sup>b</sup> But when Joseph, wishing to learn which of his sons was naturally well disposed to virtue, sent them one after another to those who were then famed as teachers, the other sons because of their laziness and disinclination for work returned to him foolish and ignorant; and after that he sent out his youngest son Hyrcanus a two days' journey into the wilderness to sow the ground, giving him three hundred yoke of oxen, but hiding the yokestraps. He, however, on coming to the place without having the straps, disregarded the counsel of the ox-historian Josephus himself (cf. Vita 7 ff.); in the further details of the narrative he detects traces of older biblical motifs, such as the deception practised by Laban on Jacob, the envy of Joseph's brothers, the favour shown to Joseph by Pharaoh. At the same time he traces a parallelism between the Tobiad story and the narrative concerning the high priests Jason and Menelaus in 2 Macc., concluding (p. 102) that " Joseph of the Tobiad story is really the Menelaus of 2 Macc., while Hyrcanus is a free remodelling (Umgestaltung) of Jason." There is, of course, no doubt that a large part of the Tobiad story is fiction, but historical elements also are to be found.

drivers, who advised him to send some men to his father to bring back the straps, for he thought that he ought not to lose time in waiting for those who might be sent, and instead conceived an ingenious plan worthy of an older man. Accordingly, he slaughtered ten voke of oxen and after distributing their meat among the workmen, he cut up their hides and made straps with which he fastened the vokes; and when he had in this way sown the ground which his father had ordered him to sow, he returned to him. And when he came, his father was more than delighted with his good sense, and commending the quickness of his intelligence and the boldness combined with this, he loved him still more as if he were his only genuine son, and this vexed his brothers.

(7) About this time he was told by someone that a Hyrcanus son had been born to King Ptolemy, a and all the lead-sets out for ing men of Syria and the territory subject to him were to celebrate setting out with a great array for Alexandria to the birth of Ptolemy's Seelebrate the birthday of the child ; he himself was son. kept from going by his age, but he tried his sons to y see whether any of them was willing to go abroad to the king.<sup>b</sup> The elder sons, however, begged to be excused, saying they were too rough <sup>c</sup> for such company, but they advised him to send their brother

c. 193 B.C. It is therefore unlikely that at the birth of Ptolemy's son (whether elder or younger), he "was kept from going by his age" or had sons old enough to go abroad. This is one of several difficulties caused by Josephus' statements that Joseph's activity began in the reign of Ptolemy Epiphanes.

<sup>c</sup> In this connexion we may mention the correspondence of an earlier Tobiad with Ptolemy Philadelphus preserved in the papyri (cf. works cited in Appendix E), which shows how "rough" an Ammonite chief could be, even when addressing a king.

Hyrcanus; gladly listening to them, therefore, he called Hyrcanus and asked him whether he was able and willing to travel to the king. And when he undertook to go, saying he would not need much money for the journey-for, he added, he would live reasonably, so that ten thousand drachmas would suffice him-Joseph was pleased with his son's moderation. But a little while afterward the son advised his father not to send the king gifts from where he was,<sup>a</sup> but to give him a letter to his steward in Alexandria in order that he might provide him with money to buy the most beautiful and precious things which he could find. Joseph, therefore, thinking that the cost of the presents for the king would be ten stalents, commended his son for his excellent suggestion, and wrotesto his steward Arion, who managed all the wealth which he had in Alexandria, amounting to not less than three thousand talents.<sup>b</sup> For Joseph used 5 to send to Alexandria the money collected from ? Syria, and when the appointed day came on which he was required to pay over the tribute to the king, he would write to Arion to do this. And so, having asked his father for a letter to this man, and having received it, Hyrcanus set out for Alexandria. But when he had gone, his brothers wrote to all the

<sup>b</sup> Cf. § 176, where Joseph offers to pay Ptolemy double the sum of 8000 talents for the right to farm the taxes of Coele-Syria. Here the 3000 talents apparently represent his profits for several years. But these figures should not be taken too seriously, since, as we have seen, this part of the Tobiad story is largely fictitious.

(8) When he came to Alexandria, he delivered the Hyrcanus letter to Arion, who asked him how many talents he punishes his father's wished to have-he hoped that he would ask for ten steward at or a little more-, but when he said he needed a Alexandria. "thousand, Arion became angry and rebuked him for having chosen a dissolute way of life, and explained to him how his father had amassed his wealth by working hard and restraining his desires, and he advised him to imitate the example of his sire. He added that he would give him no more than ten talents, and these for presents to the king. At this the youth was provoked and threw Arion into chains. But Arion's wife informed Cleopatra of this and begged her to rebuke the youth-for Arion was held by her in great esteem-, whereupon Cleopatra made the matter known to the king. So Ptolemy sent to Hyreanus, saying he was surprised that having been sent to him by his father, he had not appeared before him and had, moreover, imprisoned the steward. He ordered him, therefore, to come and explain to him the reason for his conduct. But Hyreanus is said to have replied to the man sent by the king that he should tell him that there was a law in his country which prevented the celebrant of a birthday from partaking of a sacrifice before he had gone into the temple and sacrificed to God a; it was in accordance with this same principle that he himself had not come to the king, but was waiting to bring the gifts to him <sup>3</sup>who had been his father's benefactor. As for the slave, he had punished him for disobeying the orders which he had been given ; for it made no difference, he added, whether one were a small master or a great one. "For if we do not punish such fellows, even you may expect to be held in contempt by your subjects." When Ptolemy heard this, he fell to laughing, and admired the high spirit of the youth.

<sup>a</sup> It seems necessary to adopt Herwerden's emendation  $\gamma eved\lambda d\zeta ov \tau a$ , "celebrant of a birthday," for  $\gamma even \vartheta \delta i \tau a$ , "one begotten" or "male child"; but we can hardly accept his second suggestion, which is to read "before his (the child's) father had gone into the temple," since Hyrcanus could hardly expect Ptolemy to believe that a Jewish law obliged a Jew to wait for a pagan father to sacrifice in a pagan temple. On the other hand, if we assume that Hyrcanus' excuse was that he had gone to a temple to sacrifice, the question remains what Jewish temple in Egypt he could have gone to (there is 106)

(9) But Arion, on learning that this was the way Hyrcanus the king felt and that there was no help for him, is mocked gave the thousand talents to the youth, and was rivals. released from chains. And after letting three days go by, Hyrcanus paid his respects to the royal pair, who were glad to see him and entertained him in friendly fashion in honour of his father. Then he secretly went to the slave-dealers and bought from them a hundred boys who were well educated and in the prime of youth, at a talent apicce, and a hundred virgins at the same price. Now once when he was no indication in this story that Hyrcanus had renounced Judaism); the temple of Onias was founded considerably later, cf. §§ 387 ff. Furthermore, according to Josephus himself, Ap. ii. 205, Jewish law "does not allow the birth of our children to be made an occasion for festivity "-how much less the birth of pagan children; so also in the Talmud birthday anniversaries are mentioned as a pagan custom, cf. S. Krauss, Talmudische Archäologie ii. 8. Thus there could hardly be a law " in his (Hyrcanus') country " applying to this celebration (if by  $\theta v \sigma i a$  such a celebration is meant—the use of this word here is a further difficulty). Perhaps, the whole problem hardly merits serious consideration in view of Hyrcanus' obvious invention of a custom, and the fictitious nature of the narrative.

invited together with the leading men of the country to feast with the king, he was placed at the foot of the table, being slighted as still a youth by those who assigned the places according to rank. And all those who reclined at table with Hyrcanus piled up before him the bones of their portions-from which they themselves had removed the meat-, so as to cover the part of the table where he reelined, whereupon Tryphon, who was the king's jester and was appointed to make jokes and raise laughter when there was drinking, with the encouragement of those who reclined at the table, stood up before the king and said, " My lord, do you see the bones lying before Hyrcanus ? From this you may guess that his father has stripped all Syria in the same way as Hyrcanus has left these bones bare of meat." The king then laughed at Tryphon's words, and asked Hyreanus why there were so many bones lying before him, and he replied, " It Hyrcanus by is natural, my lord; for dogs eat the bones together his with and with the meat, as these men do "--and he looked wins the toward those who reelined there, indicating that there favour of Ptolemy and was nothing lying before them -, " but men eat the Cleopatra. meat and throw the bones away, which is just what I, being a man, have now done." <sup>a</sup> A. Tscherikower, Jews and Greeks (in Hebrew), 1930, pp. 175 f., plausibly suggests that the real reason for Joseph's later hostility toward llyrcanus and for the envy of Hyrcanus' brothers was the young man's success in taking from his father the position and perquisites he had obtained from Ptolemy.

<sup>c</sup> brothers heard that he had obtained these favours The struggle from the king and was returning with great honour, <sup>between</sup> Hyrcanus they went out to meet him and do away with him, and his even though their father knew of it; for being brothers. angry with him because of the money which had been spent for the presents, he felt no concern for his safety; his anger at his son had, however, been concealed by Joseph, who feared the king.<sup>a</sup> And when Hyrcanus' brothers encountered him in battle, he *killed many of the men with them and also two of the brothers themselves, while the rest escaped to their father in Jerusalem. Hyrcanus therefore went to that city, but as no one admitted him, he withdrew in fear to the country across the river Jordan, and there made his home, devying tribute on the barbarians.b

(10) <sup>c</sup> At that time there had begun to reign <sup>d</sup> Death of over Asia Seleucus, surnamed Soter, <sup>e</sup> who was the the taxson of Antiochus the Great. And then also died collector Joseph. <sup>c</sup> It is generally assumed, with reason, that the following section, §§ 223-236 (with the exception, of course, of the Spartan letter, §§ 225-227), comes from another and more historical source than the preceding section of the Tobiad story.

d έβασίλευσε is probably an inceptive aorist; it may, however, be the "complexive" or "concentrative" aorist, meaning simply "reigned," as in § 234 ( $\eta \rho \xi \epsilon$ ).

<sup>e</sup> The surnaine of Seleucus IV (187-175 B.C.) was Philopator; Soter was the surname of his uncle Seleucus III (226-223 в.с.).

<sup>b</sup> At least two problems are here involved, (1) the identity of the "high priest Simon," whether Simon II whose death has been mentioned above, § 225, or Simon the  $\pi\rho\sigma\sigma\tau a\tau\eta\gamma\tau\sigma\vartheta$  $i\epsilon\rho\sigma\vartheta$ , whose quarrel with the high priest Onias is described in 2 Mace. iii. 4 ff.; (2) if, as is probable, the Simon here meant is Simon II, of the Oniad family, why does Josephus say that he favoured Hyreanus' brothers "because of kinship with them"? All the sons of Joseph were related to the high priest Onias II through their father, cf. § 160; the statement of the "Tobiad romance," §§ 187 ff., that Hyreahus was the son of Joseph by a different mother would only make his relation to the high priestly family closer, since his mother was also related to the high priest. It is just possible, how-116

of Joseph there arose factional strife among the people fortress in on account of his sons.<sup>a</sup> For the elder brothers made jordan. war on Hyrcanus, who was the youngest of Joseph's children, and the population was divided into two camps. And the majority fought on the side of the elder brothers, as did the high priest Simon because of kinship with them.<sup>b</sup> "Hyrcanus, therefore, gave up his intention of returning to Jerusalem, and settled in the country across the Jordan, where he continually warred on the Arabs until he killed many of them and took many captive. And he built a strong fortress,<sup>c</sup> which was constructed entirely of white marble up to the very roof,<sup>d</sup> and had beasts of gigantic size carved on it,<sup>e</sup> and he enclosed it with a wide and "deep moat. He also cut through the projecting rock opposite the mountain, and made caves many stades in length; then he made chambers in it, some for banqueting and others for sleeping and living, and ever, that by συγγένειαν Josephus means something like " common interests."

<sup>c</sup> The ruins of what was probably Hyreanus' fortress have been discovered at ' $Ar dk \ el-'Em r$  in Transjordan, c. 10 miles N.W. of Heshbon and c. 12 miles E. of the Jordan ; they are fully described in *Publications of the Princeton Archaeologi*cal Expedition to Syria in 1904/5. Momigliano points ont, I Tobiadi, pp. 170 ff., that Josephus is mistaken in saying that Hyreanus built the fortress, since, as the Zenon papyri show, there was a fortress (Gr.  $\beta \tilde{a} \mu s$ , Aram.  $bir d\bar{a}$ ) there as early as the time of Ptolemy Philadelphus. The name  $T \delta b \bar{u} g \bar{u}$ (Tobiah) inscribed on the reck in one of the caves nearby probably refers to an early Tobiad, perhaps to the Tobiah who was a contemporary of Nchemiah.

<sup>d</sup> Josephus' language is careless here; Seleucus IV ruled from 187 to 175 B.c. = 13 years. Possibly, as Otto suggests, PW ix. 530, he means that the 7 years of Hyrcanus' rule over Transjordan all came within the limits of Seleucus' reign.

<sup>a</sup> Cf. 2 Macc. iii. 11 ff. where we are told that the fortune of "Hyrcanus the Tobiad" ('Υρκανοῦ τοῦ Τωβίον, cf. E. Meyer, Ursprung ii. 132 note 2, " nicht 'Sohn des Tobias,' sondern 'aus dem Geschlecht Tobias'') was seized from the treasury of the temple in Jerusalem by Heliodorus, the minister of Seleucus IV. b Onias III, cf. § 224.

<sup>9</sup> According to 2 Macc. iv. 23 Menelaus was a brother, not of Onias III, but of Simon, the  $\pi\rho\sigma\sigma\dot{a}\tau\eta\gamma$   $\tau\sigma\hat{v}$  ( $\epsilon\rho\sigma\hat{v}$ ; Simon, in turn, was, according to 2 Macc. iii. 4,  $\epsilon\kappa \tau\eta\gamma$  Benauly  $\rho\nu\eta\gamma$ -either of the tribe of Benjamin or of the priestly family 120 Arabs, he ended his life by his own hand. And all his property was seized by Antiochus.<sup>a</sup>

(v. 1) About this same time the high priest Onias <sup>b</sup> Contention also 'died, and Antiochus gave the high priest onling among the >to his brother c ; for the son whom Onias had left was under Antiochus still an infant. But we shall relate all the facts con-Epiphanes. cerning this son d in the proper place.e Jesus, however,-this was the brother of Onias-was deprived of the high-priesthood when the king became angry with him and gave it to his youngest brother, named 'Onias; for Simon had three sons, and the high-priesthood came to all three of them, as we have shown.<sup>f</sup> Now Jesus*changed his name to Jason, while Onias was called Menelaus.<sup>9</sup> And when the former high priest Jesus rose against Menelaus, who was appointed after him, the populace was divided between the two, the Tobiads being on the side of Menelaus, while the majority of the people supported Jason h; and being of Benjamin (= Miniamin? cf. 2 Chron. xxxi. 15). Moreover, in contrast to what Josephus writes below about Jason expelling the Tobiads from Jerusalem, he says in B.J. i, 31 that it was Onias "one of the chief priests" who did so. Another difficulty is that Josephus's language in the following sentence, "and when the former high priest Jesus rose against Menelaus, who was appointed after him," seems to indicate that Menelaus was not a brother of Jason. On the relation of this confused passage (which several scholars, including E. Meyer, think worthless) to other passages in Josephus and 2 Macc. see the works cited in Appendix G.

<sup>a</sup> At this point begins Josephus's paraphrase of 1 Maccabees (i. 14-xiii, 42), which continues to Ant, xiii, 214 (cf. note ad loc. on his omission of the last three chapters of 1 Macc.). The English reader will find a convenient translation with commentary by W. Oesterley in CAP i. 1-66; the older commentary by C. Grimm in O. Fritzsche, Kurzgefasstes exegetisches Handbuch zu den Apokryphen, 1853, is still valuable ; also useful is a recent German translation with commentary by H. Bévenot, Die beiden Makkabäerbücher (in Feldmann und Herkenne, Die heilige Schrift), 1931; the topography of the Maccabcan campaigns is discussed by Père F. Abel in RB xxii-xxv, 1923-1926. And when he had granted this, they also concealed the circumcision of their private parts in order to be Greeks even when unclothed, and giving up whatever other national customs they had, they imitated the practices of foreign nations.b

chronology and the date of the beginning of the Seleucid era used in 1 Macc. see Appendix J. I follow Bickermann in taking Oct. 312 B.c. as the beginning of the era for events of Seleucid history, and Nisan (roughly April) 311 B.c. for events of internal Jewish history.

<sup>b</sup> 1 Macc. i. 11 ff. places these attempts at hellenization in " those days," i.e. after the accession of Antiochus Epiphanes, while 2 Macc. iv. 10 ff. ascribes them to the high priest Jason, earlier, in the reign of Seleucus IV. Tscherikower, p. 205, makes the interesting suggestion that Jason and the hellenizers really wanted to establish a Greek polis in Jerusalem in order to secure the economic privileges enjoyed by Hellenistic citics.

<sup>b</sup> On the ultimatum delivered to Antiochus by Gains Popilius Laenas, the head of the Roman embassy, see Polyb. xxix. 27. This, however, was in 168 B.c., cf. note d below.

<sup>c</sup> Josephus is apparently referring to the very brief statement in B.J. i. 31 that "when Antiochus Epiphanes was disputing with Ptolemy VI the suzerainty of Syria, dissension arose among the Jewish nobles," although nothing is said there about the intervention of the Romans. Some scholars, therefore, consider this one of the non-verifiable cross-124 hood of Memphis and taken possession of this city, he set out for Alexandria with the intention of reducing it by siege and getting into his power the Ptolemy a who was reigning there. He was, however, repelled not only from Alexandria, but also from the whole of Egypt, for the Romans instructed him to keep away from the country,<sup>b</sup> as we have already related somewhere in an earlier passage.<sup>c</sup> But I shall give a detailed account of this king, how he became master of Judaea and the temple ; for since in my first work I mentioned these things only in summary fashion, I have thought it necessary now to go back and give a more exact account of them.

(3) King Antiochus, then, returning from Egypt Antiochus through fear of the Romans, marched against the Epiphanes city of Jerusalem, and entering it in the hundred and the Jewish forty-third year of the Seleucid reign,<sup>d</sup> took the city opposition Jeruwithout a battle, for the gates were opened to him salem. by those who were of his party. And having become master of Jerusalem in this way, he killed many of those who were in opposition,<sup>e</sup> and taking large sums of money as spoil,<sup>f</sup> he returned to Antioch.

references (on which see the Appendix in the last volume of this translation). Even if Josephus is referring to a passage which is either non-existent or non-extant, it may be that in doing so he was under the impression that he had written about the Romans and Antiochus in B.J., but did not take the trouble to look up the earlier passage. I hardly think that Reinach, following Destinon, is justified in labelling the present crossreference an "étourderie," and holding that the formula " as we have already related, etc." is mechanically copied from his source, since he is here apparently paraphrasing the source, not copying it verbatim.

<sup>d</sup> In the autumn of 169 B.c. after his first campaign in Egypt but before the Romans intervened.

<sup>a</sup> 168 B.C. The 145th yr. Scl. extended from Oct. 168 to Oct. 167 B.C.; the second invasion, therefore, was only a little more than a year after the first, according to our reckoning, not "two years later," as the first invasion fell in the second half of the 143rd yr. Sel. and the second invasion in the first half of the 145th yr. Sel., but the interval was counted as 2 yrs. See further Bickermann, GM, pp. 160-168.

<sup>b</sup> The Mss. of 1 Macc. i. 54 have "15th day," but this is an error for "25th day," as is shown by other passages in 1 Mace, and by Jewish tradition.

(4) Two years later, as it happened, in the hundred Desecration and forty-fifth year, a on the twenty-fifth b day of the and spoiling month which by us is called Chasleu,<sup>c</sup> and by the temple by Macedonians Apellaios,<sup>d</sup> in the hundred and fifty- Epiphanes. third Olympiad, the king went up to Jerusalem, and 1 Macc. i. by pretending to offer peace, overcame the city by treachery. But on this occasion he did not spare even those who admitted him, because of the wealth of the temple.<sup>f</sup> but through greed—for he saw much gold in the temple and an array of very costly dedicatoryofferings of other kinds-, and for the sake of taking this as spoil, he went so far as to violate the treaty which he had made with them. And so he stripped the temple, carrying off the vessels of God, the golden lampstands and the golden altar and table and the other altars, and not even forbearing to take the curtains, which were made of fine linen and scarlet,<sup>g</sup> and he also emptied the temple of its hidden treasures, from July 168 to July 164 B.C. The events of the 25th of Kislew, however, were concerned with the desecration of the temple according to 1 Macc., not with Antiochus' plundering of the temple treasury and carrying off the temple vessels, which occurred in his first invasion of Jerusalem in 169 B.C. Moreover the desecration and massacre in 168 B.C. were not directed by Antiochus personally, but by his " chief tribute-collector " (apxovta popoloyías) according to 1 Macc. i. 29. This official is to be identified with Apollonius the Mysarch (commander of the Mysian guard, cf. Polyb. xxx. 25. 3) mentioned in 2 Macc. v. 24 (the reading apxovra φορολογίας in 1 Mace. was plausibly explained many years ago by Hitzig as arising from Heb. sar ham-missim, " chief of taxes," for sar ham-musim, " chief of the Mysians ").

<sup>1</sup> i.e. on the first occasion Antiochus had spared some of the inhabitants because he hoped through them to get the wealth of the temple. The Gr. may, however, mean that on this occasion his greed caused him to kill even his Jewish partisans.

Moreover he forbade them to offer the daily sacrifices which they used to offer to God in accordance with their law, and after plundering the entire city, he killed some of the people, and some he took captive together with their wives and children, so that the number of those taken alive came to some ten thousand.<sup>b</sup> And he burnt the finest parts <sup>c</sup> of the city, and pulling down the walls, built the Akra (citadel) in the Lower City<sup>d</sup>; for it was high enough to overlook the temple, and it was for this reason that he fortified it with high walls and towers, and stationed a Macedonian garrison therein. Nonetheless there remained in the Akra those of the people who were impious and of bad character, and at their hands the citizens were destined to suffer many terrible things.<sup>e</sup> The king also built a pagan altar upon the temple-altar, and distinguishing it from the earlier, Persian and pre-Hasmonacan citadel north of the temple (cf. Neh. ii. 8 ff., Aristeas §§ 100 ff., Ant, xii. 133 ff., 2 Macc. iv. 12 ff.) which was rebuilt by the later Hasmonaeans (cf. Ant, xv. 403) and again by Herod, who named it Antonia (cf. Ant, xviii, 91, B,J, v. 238 ff.; its site and structure have recently been disenssed by Père H. Vincent in RB xlii., 1933, pp. 83-113). The Scleucid citadel is located on the southern spur of the eastern hill also by E. Meyer, Ursprung ii. 158, Dalman, Sacred Sites, p. 273; cf. also Tramontano, pp. 86 ff., who agrees substantially with Schürer.

<sup>4</sup> I Mace. i. 34 says that the eitadel was occupied by an  $\tilde{\epsilon}\theta ros \dot{a}\mu a\rho\tau \omega \lambda \delta v$ ,  $\tilde{a}\nu \delta \rho as \pi a\rho ar \lambda \rho \mu ovs$  "a sinful nation, lawless men," probably intending the latter phrase to be in apposition with the "sinful nation" and meaning the Syrians. Josephus, however, assumes that two different groups are meant, the Syrian soldiers and the renegade Jews; the latter are mentioned separately in vs. 52 as the cause of much evil to the land. See further Bickermann, GM, pp. 71-73.

<sup>a</sup> Probably to be identified with Apollonius the Mysarch sent to Jerusalem by Antiochus in 168 n.c., cf. § 248 note e. Willrich, Urkundenfälschung, p. 15, believes that Josephus here designates Apollonius governor (meridarch) of Samaria on the basis of 1 Macc. iii. 10, which says that Apollonius set out from Samaria with an army to attack Judaea.

<sup>b</sup> Grimm identifies Nicanor with the Nicanor, son of Patroclus, mentioned in 2 Macc. viii. 9 ff. (cf. § 298 note b) as one of the king's ministers who hoped to raise money for the payment of the Selencid indemnity to Rome by selling Jewish captives as slaves.

<sup>e</sup> Zeus Xenios (" protector of strangers ") according to 2 Mace. vi. 2. The latter reading is preferred by Cook, Rel., p. 188, who writes, " the hospitable Zeus would reflect oriental ideas illustrated both in the old 'covenant god ' of Shechem and in Allah as the protector of guest-clients "; so, earlier, 134 petition you as our benefactor and saviour to command Apollonius, the governor of the district,<sup>a</sup> and Nicanor, the royal agent,<sup>b</sup> not to molest us in any way by attaching to us the charges of which the Jews are guilty, since we are distinct from them both in race and in customs, and we ask that the temple without a name be known as that of Zeus Hellenios.<sup>c</sup> For if this be done, we shall cease to be molested, and by applying ourselves to our work in security, we shall make your revenues greater." To this petition of the Samarians the king wrote the following reply. "King Antiochus to Nicanor. The Sidonians in Shechem have submitted a memorial which has been filed.<sup>d</sup> Now since the men sent by them have represented to us sitting in council with our friends that they are in no way concerned in the complaints brought against the Jews, but choose to live in Freudenthal, Hell. Stud., p. 77 note, on the ground that the Samaritans would have worshipped the Phoenician Baal-Moloch (cf. Ant. viii. 145 note d) in the form of Zeus Xenios. Montgomery, Sam., p. 77 note, makes the interesting conjecture that the epithet Xenios " may have been suggested by the first syllable of Gerizim, ger, i.e. 'stranger', (in this connexion we may note that a Samaritan writer, " Pseudo-Eupolemus," ap. Eusebius, Praep. Evang. ix. 17, interprets the name Mount Gerizim—'Αργαριζίν as ὄρος ψψίστου " Mount of the Most High "; this, of course, does not decide the question which epithet is correct). The epithet Hellenios would be the probable choice only if the Samaritans were stressing their Greek sympathies (cf. § 263 and Ant. xi. 344) while Xenios would be suitable whether they thought primarily of their Greek sympathies or their Phoenician (or Shechemite) origin. On the whole, Xenios is more likely to have been correct.

<sup>e</sup> The Attic (and Delian) month Hekatombaion corresponded to July-August (cf. Ant. iv. 84). What "Hyrkanios" means is an unsolved puzzle. Another instance of an unknown name given to a Greek (Macedonian) month occurs in 2 Mace. xi. 21, namely Διοσκοριθίου (v.l. Διοσκορίδου) but this has been plausibly emended to Διός Κροιδου on the basis of Plutarch, Thes. 12, Κροιίου μηνός δυνῦν Έκατομβαιῶνα καλοῦσιν (cf. Büchler, Tob. p. 154 note). Is there any connexion between these two passages, and is 136 accordance with Greek customs, we acquit them of these eharges, and permit their temple to be known as that of Zeus Hellenios, as they have petitioned." In this fashion he also wrote to Apollonius, the districtgovernor, in the hundred <sup>a</sup> and forty-sixth year,<sup>b</sup> on the eighteenth of the month Hekatombaion Hyrkanios.<sup>e</sup>

"Hyrkanios" a corruption of "Kronios"? It seems strange, to be sure, that an Attic rather than a Macedonian month should be named in either passage, but Niese, Kritik, p. 107, argues that Antiochus "who introduced the Attic documentary style into Antioch" might well have adopted Attic month-names as well.

Winer (ap. Grimm) long ago suggested a derivation from Aram. t'sas "boil, ferment," hence "the zealot," and so, more recently, Bévenot, but this etymology seems to me very farfetched. δ καλούμενος Μακκαβαίος¹ καὶ Ἐλεάζαρος ὅ κληθεὶς Λὐρὰν καὶ Ἰωνάθης ὅ κληθεὶς ᾿Αφφοῦς.<sup>2</sup>

Many different etymologies have been proposed for this name, the most widely accepted being from  $maqq\bar{a}b\bar{a}h$ , "hammer," hence "the Hammerer," but in view of our uncertainty whether the Heb. <sup>a</sup> This rule was followed in the rabbinic period, although making war on the Sabbath is expressly forbidden in the book of Jubilees, l. 12 (cf. L. Finkelstein, Some Examples of the Maccabaean Halakah, JBL xlix. 1930, pp. 20-42) and the Jews refrained from attacking the Romans on the Sabbath when Pompey besieged Jerusalem (Ant. xiv. 63); in the great war with Rome, however, the Jews were compelled to violate the Sabbath by fighting (B.J. ii, 517). Reinach in his note on the text above observes that Josephus dwells on this episode and amplifies the text of 1 Macc., where, he says, the 142 did not even stop up the entrances to the eaves. And they forbore to resist because of the day, being unwilling to violate the dignity of the Sabbath even when in difficulties, for the law requires us to rest on that day. And so about a thousand with their wives and children died by suffocation in the caves ; but many escaped and joined Mattathias, whom they appointed their leader. And he instructed them to fight even Mattathias on the Sabbath, saying that if for the sake of observ- resolves to fight on the ing the law they failed to do so, they would be their Sabbath own enemies, for their foes would attack them on that when necessary. day, and unless they resisted, nothing would prevent <sup>1</sup> Macc. <sup>11,40</sup> them from all perishing without striking a blow. These words persuaded them, and to this day we continue the practice of fighting even on the Sabbath whenever it becomes necessary.<sup>a</sup> So Mattathias gathered a large force round him,<sup>b</sup> and pulled down the pagan altars, and killed as many of those who had sinned as he could lay his hands on-for many of them in fear of him had scattered among the neighbouring nations; and as for the boys who had not been circumcised, he ordered them to be circumcised, and drove out the officers who had been appointed to prevent this.

(3) But after being in command for a year, he fell initiative in this action is not attributed to Mattathias, and suggests that Josephus has here the intention of justifying his co-religionists for having fought on the Sabbath in the war with Rome. But 1 Macc. does attribute the initiative to Mattathias and his friends, and just about as much stress is laid on this episode in 1 Macc, as in Josephus' text. I doubt, therefore, whether Reinach's point is well taken.

<sup>b</sup> Josephus omits any reference (cf. 1 Macc. ii. 42) to the συναγωγή 'Λσιδαίων, "company of pious men (Heb. hasidîm)," who joined Mattathias at this time; cf. also § 396 note d.

Melamed, MGWJ lxxii., 1928. pp. 202-204, to κal ἀνέβη μετ' αὐτοῦ παρεμβολή on the theory that the original Heb. had wayye'esöph "he gathered together," but the Gr. translator read wayyösɛph "he continued." That Josephus has συναγαγών is not in itself clear evidence that he used a Heb. text of 1 Mace. (on which cf. F. Perles in REJ lxxxi., 1921, p. 179), since he may easily have gnessed the Heb. lying behind the 148 using, kept it for himself a; he also left more of them wounded, and after taking much booty from the camp of the enemy, he withdrew. But when Seron, who was governor of Coele-Syria, b heard that many had joined themselves to Judas, and that he had already surrounded himself with a force to be reckoned with in a contest of war, he decided to march against him, considering it his duty to try to punish those who had violated the king's commands. He therefore gathered together whatever force he had, and having also enrolled the fugitives and irreligious men among the Jews, he came against Judas; and having advanced c as far as the village of Baithoron d in Judaea, he encamped there. But Judas, meeting him there and intending to engage him, saw that his soldiers were shrinking from the battle because of their small number and lack of food-for they had fasted, e-and so he began to encourage them, saving that victory and mastery

Gr. reading, or have supplied the inevitable συναγαγών. In this connexion, however, it may be worth while to mention Michaelis' suggestion (ap. Grimm) that Josephus' Σήρων δ'  $\delta \tau \eta \varsigma$  κοίλης Συρίας στρατηγός above is based on Heb. s'ar hél 'Arām "commander of the army of Syria," which Josephus, taking hél to mean "valley," translated "governor of Coele-Syria": unfortunately, as Grimm remarks, hél (construct of hayl) does not mean "valley " in Hebrew (though we have hayla "valley" in Aramaic); this too may be an instance of Josephus' guessing at the Heb. (or Aram.) original underlying his Gr. text of 1 Macc. There can be no question of his use of a Gr. text; whether he also had a Semitic text is doubtful.

<sup>a</sup> According to 1 Macc. iii. 32 Lysias was "of the family of the kingdom," and tou yévous this Baoidelas: cf. 2 Mace. xi. 1, συγγενής " kinsman (of the king) "; this is not to be taken literally, but in the sense of a noble of high rank, cf. Bevan, H. Sel. ii. 281. He had lately been governor of Coele-Syria and Phoenicia, according to 2 Mace. x. 11, and if that is true, Josephus is mistaken in calling Seron governor of Coele-Syria at this time, cf. § 288 notes b and c.

* Niese conjectures from the Lat. that after "held in honour by him" the words " and gave him " have fallen out. But if we accept Hudson's emendation (see next note), the text may be allowed to stand.

and so he decided first to go to Persia and collect the tribute of that country. He therefore left in charge of the government a certain Lysias,<sup> $\alpha$ </sup> who was held in honour by him b and ruled over the country from cthe Euphrates river as far as the borders of Egypt and Lower Asia,<sup>d</sup> and he also left behind a part of his force and his elephants; and he charged Lysias to bring up his son Antiochus<sup>e</sup> with the greatest care until he returned, and when he had subdued Judaea and reduced its inhabitants to slavery, to make an end of Jerusalem and destroy the Jewish race. Having given these instructions to Lysias, King Antiochus marched away to Persia in the hundred and forty-seventh year,<sup>f</sup> and after he had crossed the Euphrates, went on into the Upper Satrapies.<sup>g</sup>

<sup>c</sup> If for διέποντα "ruled over," conjectured by Hudson from the Lat., we retain the Mss. reading διήκοντα " extending," we shall have to accept Niese's further conjecture that the Gr. has lost two words after " held in honour by him," and read " and gave him the country extending from," etc. " Lower Asia " is not mentioned in t Macc.; what Josephus means by the term is not clear.

 Antiochus V Eupator, who was only 9 years old, according to Appian, Syr. 45.

<sup>7</sup> The 147th year Sel. extended from Oct. 166 to Oct. 165 n.c. Although 1 Maec. speaks of Persia, it probably refers to Antiochus' first eastern campaign, against Artaxias, king of Armenia, cf. Appian, Syr. 45, Diod. Sic. xxxi. 17. The passage in Tacitus, Hist. v. 8 probably refers to Antiochus Sidetes' expedition against the Parthians (cf. Ant. xiii. 253), not to Antiochus Epiphanes, cf. W. Otto, Zur Geschichte der Zeit des 6. Ptolemäers (Abhandlungen der bayerischen Akademie der Wissenschaften. Phil.-hist. Abteilung, N.F. Heft 11), München, 1934, p. 85 note 3.

Since, therefore, at the present moment it lies in your power either to recover this liberty and regain a happy and blessed life "-by this he meant a life in accordance with the laws and customs of their fathers-" or to suffer the most shameful fate and to leave your race without any seed by being cowardly in battle, exert yourselves accordingly, bearing in mind that death is the portion even of those who do not fight, and holding firmly to the belief that if you die for such precious causes as liberty, country, laws and religion, you will gain eternal glory. But the enemy sent Gorgias spoke to substance with five thousand foot-soldiers and a thousand Emmaus, horsemen to fall upon Judas by night, for which iv. 1. purpose he took some of the Jewish refugees as guides a; and when the son of Mattathias became aware of this, he decided to fall upon the enemy's eamp himself, and to do this when their force was divided. Having, therefore, supped in good time and left many fires in his eamp,<sup>b</sup> he marched all night toward those of the enemy who were in Emmaus. And when Gorgias found that his foes were not in their camp, he suspected that they had withdrawn and hidden themselves in the mountains, and so he decided to go in search of them wherever they might be. But near dawn Judas appeared before the enemy at Emmaus with three thousand men poorly armed because of their poverty, and when he saw that his foes were excellently protected and had shown great skill in taking up their position, he urged his own men <sup>c</sup> on, saving that they must fight even if with unarmed bodies, and that the Deity had on other occasions in the past given the victory over more numerous and well-armed enemies to men in their condition because He admired their courage,<sup>d</sup> and he ordered the trumpeters to sound the signal. <sup>1</sup> This last detail is an expansion of 1 Macc. iv. 47, " and they took whole stones (λίθους όλοκλήρους), according to the Law, and built a new altar after the fashion of the former one"; here λίθους όλοκλήρους represents Heb. These things, as it chanced, took place on the same day on which, three years before, their holy service had been transformed into an impure and profane form of worship. For the temple, after being made desolate by Antiochus, had remained so for three years <sup>b</sup>; it was in the hundred and forty-fifth year that these things befell the temple, on the twenty-fifth of the month Apellaios, in the hundred and fifty-third Olympiad.<sup>c</sup> And the temple was renovated on the same day, the twentyfifth of the month Apellaios, in the hundred and forty-eighth year, in the hundred and fifty-fourth Olympiad.<sup>d</sup> Now the desolation of the temple came about in accordance with the prophecy of Daniel, which had been made four hundred and eight years before e; for he had revealed that the Macedonians would destroy it.

<sup>b</sup> Josephus explains the name "festival of Lights" as referring to the sudden deliverance which was like a light appearing in the darkness of despair (a somewhat similar explanation is given in the scholion to Megillath Ta'anith, "because they went out from oppression to deliverance" they made Hanukkah a permanent festival); it is puzzling, however, that he does not directly connect the name with the kindling of lights in the temple lampstand (cf. above, § 319). In connexion with the 8 days of the celebration, the scholion to Megillath Ta'anith briefly relates the finding of the single jar of oil which would have sufficed for only one day's illumination had not a miracle caused it to last 8 days; for other rabbinic passages cf. Schürer i. 209 note 61, or the more 168 playing of harps, at the same time delighted them.<sup>a</sup> So much pleasure did they find in the renewal of their customs and in unexpectedly obtaining the right to have their own service after so long a time, that they made a law that their descendants should celebrate the restoration of the temple service for eight days. And from that time to the present we observe this festival, which we call the festival of Lights, giving this name to it, I think, from the fact that the right to worship appeared to us at a time when we hardly dared hope for it.<sup>b</sup> Then Judas erected walls round the city,  $\hat{c}$  and having built high towers against the incursions of the enemy, he placed guards in them; and he also fortified the city of Bethsura in order that he might use it as a fortress in any emergency caused by the enemy.d

recent work of O. Rankin, The Origin of the Festival of Hanukkah, 1930. In 2 Macc. the festival is called "Tabernacles (ακηνοπηγία) of the month of Kislew"; the usual rabbinic name is Hanukkah "dedication," cf. eykaina in John x. 22, and the texts cited by Strack-Billerbeck, ad loc., ji, 539. Derenbourg, p. 62 note 2, suggests that the name " Lights," which is not found elsewhere, may go back to an abbreviation of Heb. yeme neroth sel Hanukkah " days of (the festival of) the lights of dedication." The practice of lighting candles on each of the eight days of the festival (one on the first day, two on the second, etc.) is still observed by the majority of Jews.

He also hemmed in the Baanites,<sup>d</sup> who were ambushing the Jews, and after besieging them closely, burned their towers and destroyed their men. <sup>t</sup> The reference here to wives and children, not mentioned in 1 Macc. in connexion with Jazer, may, as Reinach assumes, be due to Josephus' misunderstanding of the phrase  $\tau \dot{\eta} \nu$ 'la $\dot{\chi} \dot{\eta} \rho \kappa a i \tau \dot{a}_s \theta \nu \eta a \tau \dot{\rho} \rho s$ '' Jazer and its daughter (i.e. daughter-citics)'': it seems rather strange, however, that Josephus should have misunderstood so common a bibl. idiom, and the phrase may have been added to conform with the verse below (1 Macc. v. 13 = \$ 330) which mentions the wives and children of the Jews taken captive by Timotheus these not being referred to by Josephus.

money to join his campaign, he led his army across the stream opposite Romphon a-this was a city-and exhorted his soldiers, if they engaged the Jews in battle, to fight eagerly and prevent them from crossing the stream; for, he predicted, if the Jews crossed, they themselves would be defeated. But when Judas heard that Timotheus had made ready for battle, he took all his own force and hastened to meet the enemy; and after crossing the stream, he fell upon his foes, and slew some of them who opposed him, and struck fear into the others and forced them to throw away their arms and flee. And so some of them escaped, while others took refuge in the sacred precinct called Enkranai,<sup>b</sup> where they hoped to find safety. But Judas took this city, and killed the inhabitants, and also burned the sacred precinct; thus he accomplished the destruction of the enemy under various forms.<sup>c</sup>

The Emphraeans, however, would not consent to this, and so he urged on his men and surrounded the city and besieged it, and after investing it for a day and a night, he took the city, and killed all the males who were in it, and burned it all down,<sup>c</sup> and so made a way; but so great was the number of the slain that they had to walk over their dead bodies. And after crossing the Jordan, they came to the Great Plain, in front of which lies Bethsane,<sup>d</sup> by the Greeks called Scythopolis. And setting out from there, they came to Judaea, playing harps and singing songs of praise and observing such forms of merry-making as are customary at celebrations of a victory e; then they offered the sacrifices of thanksgiving for their successes and for the safety of their army, for not one of the Jews had met death in these wars.

This reverse befell them because they disobeved the instructions of Judas not to engage anyone in battle before his arrival; for in addition to the other instances of Judas' cleverness, one might well admire him also for having foreseen that such a reverse would come to the men under Joseph and Azarias if they departed in any respect from the instructions given them.e Meanwhile Judas and his brothers were Judas' warring on the Idumaeans f without ceasing, and victories in Idumaea. pressed them closely on all sides; and after taking the eity of Hebron, they destroyed all its fortifications and burned its towers "; and they ravaged the foreign territory, including the city of Marisa,<sup>h</sup> and coming to Azotus,<sup>i</sup> they took this city and sacked it.<sup>j</sup> Then they returned to Judaea, carrying much spoil and booty.

Elam, and corresponding to Susiana, the eighth in the list of provinces of Darius' empire, as given by Herodotus. According to 2 Mace. is. 2 it was Persepolis that Antiochus attempted to despoil.

&lt;sup>c</sup> So Polyb. xxxi. 9 (11). 1, cf. Jerome on Dan, xi., who gives the Latin form Diana, citing Polybins and Diodorus; Appian, Syria 66, gives the goddess's name as Aphrodite; 1 Mace, omits her name. Both names, Artemis and Aphro-184

(ix. 1) About the same time King Antiochus, as he Antiochus was entering the upper country, a heard of a city in Epiphanes Persia of surpassing wealth, named Elymais,<sup>b</sup> and in Persia. that there was in it a rich temple of Artemis,<sup>c</sup> which was full of all kinds of dedicatory offerings, as well as of arms and breastplates which he learned had been left behind by Alexander, the son of Philip, king of Macedon. And so, being excited by these reports, he set out for Elymais, and assaulted it and began a siege. As those within the city, however, were not dismayed either by his attack or by the siege, but stoutly held out against him, his hopes were dashed ; for they drove him off from the city, and went out against him in pursuit, so that he had to come to Babylon  $^{d}$  as a fugitive, and lost many of his army. And as he was grieving over this failure, some men brought him news also of the defeat of the generals whom he had left to make war on the Jews, and of the strength which the Jews now had. And so, with the Death of anxiety over these events added to his former anxiety, Antiochus he was overwhelmed, and in his despondency fell ill; 1 Macc. vi. 8 and as his illness lingered on, and his sufferings indite, are merely hellenizations of the Oriental Nanaia or Anaitis, cf. 2 Macc. i. 13 and Cook, RAP, pp. 218, 223.

<sup>d</sup> So 1 Macc.; Polybius gives the name of the city in which Antiochus died as Tabae in Persia. This is probably an error for Gabae, a city in Gabiane, a sub-province (eparchia) of Elymais, according to Strabo xv. 728 and xvi. 745. Ecbatana is given in 2 Mace. ix. 3 as the name of the city where Antiochus heard the news of the Jews' successes in the West ; this, in turn, is identified by Kugler, pp. 387 ff., with Aspadana (mod. Ispahan), once apparently called Gai or Gabae. Niese, GGMS iii. 218 note 3, corrects Polybius' Tabae to Gabae, but in Kritik, pp. 19 f., suggests that here 2 Macc. confuses Antiochus Epiphanes with Antiochus Sidetes. See now W. W. Tarn, The Greeks in Bactria, pp. 463-466.

Accordingly I am <sup>b</sup> surprised that Polybius of Megalopolis, who is an honest man, says that Antiochus died because he wished to despoil the temple of Artemis in Persia <sup>c</sup>; for merely to wish a thing without actually doing it is not deserving of punishment. But although Polybius may think that Antiochus lost his life on that account, it is much more probable that the king died because of sacrilegiously despoiling the temple in Jerusalem. Concerning this matter, however, I shall not dispute with those who believe that the cause given by the Megalopolitan is nearer the truth than that given by  $us.^d$

&lt;sup>a</sup> The 149th yr. Sel. extended from Oct. 164 to Oct. 163 в.с. Other ancient sources indicate that Antiochus died in the spring or summer of 163 в.с., so, e.g., Eusebius, Chronicon (ed. Aucher I. 348), who gives Olymp. 154.1 = July 164 to July 163 в.с.: this date is rather arbitrarily corrected by some scholars (cf. Niese, GCMS iii. 218 note 7) to Olymp. 153.4 =July 165 to July 164 в.с. Niese considers the date given by Josephus and 1 Macc. vi. 16 "a deliberate or careless alteration" of the real date, and prefers the account of 2 Macc. xi, 23 ff., which implies that Antiochus' death was known in Syria—or at least that his son Antiochus Eupator was recognized as king—as early as the 148th yr. (3) At this time the garrison in the Akra of Jeru-Judas besalem and the Jewish renegades <sup>b</sup> did much harm to signals the Jews; for when they went up to the temple with in the the intention of sacrificing, the garrison would sally Jerusalem. out and kill them-for the Akra commanded the 1 Macc. temple.<sup>c</sup> And so, as a result of these experiences, Judas determined to drive out the garrison, and gathering together all the people, he stoutly besieged those in the Akra. This was in the hundred and fiftieth year of the Seleucid reign.<sup>d</sup> Accordingly, he constructed siege-engines, and erected earthworks, and assiduously applied himself to the capture of the Akra. But many of the renegades within the Akra went out by night into the country, and having gathered together some of the irreligious men like themselves, came to King Antiochus e and said that they did not deserve to be left to suffer these hardships at the hands of their countrymen, especially as they were enduring them for the sake of his father, is, before Oct. 164 B.C. Kugler, pp. 390 ff., dates Antiochus' death in March or April, 164 B.C.

They are, indeed, mentioned further on, in vs. 21, και έκολλήθησαν αὐτοῖς (the Syrians) τινές τῶν ἀσεβῶν έξ 'Ισραήλ, but 1 Macc. does not say that they were in the Akra, as Josephus states in § 364 ; cf. §§ 252 note e, 305 note a.

for they had broken with their ancestral religion and had adopted that which he had commanded them to follow; and now, they continued, the citadel was in danger of being taken by Judas and his men, as well as the garrison stationed there by the king, unless some assistance were sent by him. When the young Antiochus heard this, he became angry, and sending for his officers and Friends, ordered them to collect mercenaries and those in his kingdom who were of military age. And so an army was collected, which consisted of about a hundred thousand foot-soldiers and twenty thousand horsemen a and thirty-two elephants.

(4) Thereupon he took this force and set out from Antio-Antioch with Lysias, who was in command of the chus V Eupator entire army, and after coming to Idumaea, he went invades up from there to Bethsura, b a very strong city and one 1 Mace. difficult to take, and he invested the city and besieged vi. 31. it. However, as the people of Bethsura strongly resisted and burned his supply of siege-engines-for they sallied out against him,-much time was consumed in the siege. And when Judas heard of the king's advance, he left off besieging the Akra, and went to meet the king, pitching his camp near the mountain passes, at a place called Bethzacharias,<sup>c</sup>

5000 horsemen and 80 elephants (2 Mace, has 110,000 foot-soldiers, 5300 horsemen and 22 elephants). On the number of elephants (32) given above, Abrahams, Campaigns, p. 30, remarks, "this agrees with Polybius who (in the procession at Antioch in 165 s.c.), in addition to a few chariot elephants, describes the presence of 'thirty-six elephants in single file, with all their furniture on.' The coincidence of numbers is almost exact."

<sup>a</sup> About 8 miles; this estimate (not given in 1 Mace.) is a little more than the actual distance between Bethzacharias and Bethsur, given in the preceding note. Père Abel locates the actual battlefield at Balluțat el-Yerza, c.  $\frac{1}{2}$  mile S. of Beit Skária.

<sup>b</sup> Josephus omits the detail in 1 Mace. that the Syrians "showed the blood of grapes (i.e. red wine) and mulberries" to the elephants to make them fierce. It has been conjectured by Wellhausen (cited by Bévenot) that the Heb. original had hirwáh "intoxicated" and that this was corrupted to, or mistaken for, her'áh "showed."

Thereupon the king set out from Bethsura and lcd his The battle army to the passes and Judas' camp; and at day- of Bethza-charias, break he drew up his army for battle.<sup>6</sup> And he made 1 Mace. his elephants follow one another, since they could not vi. 33. be placed side by side in an extended line because of the narrow space.<sup>c</sup> Round each elephant there advanced together a thousand foot soldiers and five hundred horsemen; and the elephants carried high dtowers and archers.<sup>e</sup> He also made the rest of his force ascend the mountains on either side, putting his lightarmed troops f in front of them. Then he ordered his army to raise the battle-cry, and set upon the enemy, uncovering his shields of gold g and bronze so that a brilliant light was given off by them, while the mountains re-echoed the shouts of his men. Judas saw this, and yet was not terrified, but valiantly met the enemy's charge, and slew some six hundred of their skirmishers. And his brother Eleazar, whom they

<sup>e</sup> 1 Macc. gives the number of men in the tower or howdah as 30 (v.l. 32), an impossible number, plausibly explained by Rahlfs, Z.4W, N.F. xi., 1934, pp. 78 ff., as a corruption of  $\Delta' = 4$  to  $\Lambda' = 30$ . Perhaps Josephus has omitted this detail because of its incredibility.

1 "Light-armed troops" (ψιλούς) is Naber's conjecture for MSS. "friends " ( $\phi(\lambda_{ovs})$ ; although the conjecture has no support in the text of 1 Macc., it is plausible in view of the parallel in § 426.

<sup>9</sup> The shields of gold (also mentioned in 1 Macc.) are a fictitious detail. Polybius tells us, xi. 9. 1, that Philopoemen had his soldiers keep their arms bright in order to inspire the enemy with fear.

&lt;sup>a</sup> Josephus here too amplifies somewhat. The date of this seventh (sabbatical) year is a matter of dispute. According to §§ 363 ff. Lysias' campaign against Bethsur began in the 150th yr. Sel., extending from Oct. 163 to Oct. 162 в.с.; as the sabbatical year was reckoned from Tishri (roughly October), we may assume that this one coincided with the 150th yr. Sel., and that it was toward the end of this year, about the summer of 162 n.c., that the besieged inhabitants of Jerusalem began to feet the lack of food. This reckoning is supported by the statement in Ant. xiii. 234 that a sabbatical year began after Simon's death; as this occurred about February 135 в.c., the sabbatical year then began in 196 had not been tilled that year, but had remained unsown because it was the seventh year,<sup>a</sup> during which our law obliges us to let it lie uncultivated.<sup>b</sup> Many of the besieged, therefore, ran away because of the lack of necessities, so that only a few were left in the temple.

(6) Such were the circumstances of those who were Antiochus besieged in the temple. But when Lysias, the com- Eupator, threatened mander, and the king were informed that Philip was by Philip's coming against them from Persia to secure the govern- makes terms ment for himself, they were ready to abandon the with the Jews in siege and set out against Philip ; they decided, how-Jerusalem. ever, not to reveal their plan to the soldiers and their <sup>1</sup> Mace. vi. 55. officers,<sup>c</sup> but, instead, the king ordered Lysias to address him  $^{d}$  and the officers publicly and say nothing of the trouble with Philip, but merely show that the siege would take a very long time, and the place was very strong, and explain that their supply of food had

Oct. 135 B.C., the sabbatical years being the following: Oct. 163 to Oct. 162 в.с.
 Oct. 156 to Oct. 155 в.с.
 Oct. 149 to Oct. 148 в.с.
 Oct. 142 to Oct. 141 в.с.
 Oct. 135 to Oct. 134 в.с. This reckoning seems however to be contradicted by the statement in Ant. xiv. 475 that Herod and Sossius captured Jerusalem during a sabbatical vear, since that event occurred in the summer of 37 B.C., and thus the sabbatical year began in Oct. 38 B.c., which does not fit in with the table given above. But Josephus may have been inexact in language there, cf. note ad loc.

<sup>c</sup> Our text of 1 Macc. vi. 57 states that Lysias addressed the king, the officers and the men at the same time,  $\epsilon l \pi \epsilon \nu$ πρός τον βασιλέα και τους ήγεμόνας της δυνάμεως και τους άνδρας, but it is quite possible that Josephus' text of 1 Macc. read differently (some Mss. and the Syriac version have " the nobles" for "the men"). It is likely, moreover, that Josephus infers secrecy on the king's part from the fact that Lysias does not mention Philip in his speech.

already begun to fail, and that it was necessary to put in order many of the affairs of the kingdom, and that it seemed much better to make a treaty with the besieged and seek the friendship of their whole nation by permitting them to observe their fathers' laws, the loss of which had caused them to begin the present war; and that then they should return home. Lysias spoke in this manner, and both the army and their officers <sup>a</sup> were pleased with his advice.

<sup>e</sup> Gr. Alkimos. According to l'Mace. vii. 5 ff. it was King Demetrius (cf. below) who appointed Alcinus high priest. 2 Mace. is inconsistent on this point; in xiv. 3 it states that Alcinus had been high priest before Demetrius became king, while in xiv. 13 it says that Demetrius ordered his general to "appoint" Alcinus high priest; possibly, however, the latter expression ( $\kappa a \tau a \sigma \tau \eta \sigma a$ ) may here mean "to reinstate." In any ease Alcinus probably succeeded Menelaus toward the end of 162 B.C.

by persuading the king's father to compel the Jews to abandon their fathers' religion. Accordingly, the king sent Menelaus to Beroea in Syria, and there had Execution him put to death a; he had served as high priest for of the high priest ten years,<sup>b</sup> and had been a wicked and impious man, Menelaus; who in order to have sole authority for himself had Alcimus. compelled his nation to violate their own laws. The high priest chosen after the death of Menelaus was Alcinus,<sup>c</sup> also called Jakeimos.<sup>d</sup> Now when King Antiochus found e that Philip had already seized control of the government, he made war on him, and after getting him into his power, killed him. Then Onias IV Onias,<sup>f</sup> the son of the high priest,<sup>g</sup> who, as we said flees to Egypt and before,<sup>h</sup> had been left a mere child when his father builds a died, seeing that the king had slain his uncle Mene-temple there. laus and had given the high priesthood to Aleimus, although he was not of the family of high priests, $^{i}$ because he had been persuaded by Lysias to transfer the office from this house to another, fled to Ptolemy, the king of Egypt. <sup>9</sup> Onias III. According to B.J. vii. 423 it was an Onias, son of Simon, who fled to Ptolemy-this would be Onias III and not Onias IV, as here and in Ant. xiii. 62 ff. The Onias who was slain at Daphne near Antioch by Andronicus, the minister of Antiochus Epiphanes, at the instigation of Menelaus, according to 2 Macc. iv. 32 ff., was Onias III, and not Onias IV: his martyrdom is probably alluded to in Dan. ix. 26, "the anointed one" (A.V. Thereupon Bacchides set out with his force him. from Antioch, and when he came to Judaea, sent to Judas and his brothers to discuss friendship and peace, for he planned to take him by deceit. But Judas did not trust him, for he saw that he had come with such an army as one has when going to war, but not when making peace. Some of the citizens,<sup>d</sup> however, giving car to the peace proposals made by Bacchides, and believing that they would suffer no harm at the hands of Aleimus, who was their countryman,<sup>e</sup> went over to them, and after receiving oaths from both men that neither they themselves nor those who were of their mind should suffer in any way, put themselves in their hands. <sup>a</sup> Variant Bethzetho; most Mss. of t Macc. have  $B\eta\zeta\dot{\epsilon}\theta$ , but Luc. Baild Japa. This Bezeth or Bethzetho is probably not the well-known Bezetha, the northern quarter of Jerusalem, since the text of 1 Macc. implies that Bacchides marched some distance from the city, but, as Père Abel suggests, mod. Beit Zeita, c. 3 miles N. of Bethsur. 1 Mace, speaks of Bacchides' victims being slaughtered near a great cistern, the 206 ruins of which Père Abel thinks may still be seen at Kûfin close by Beit Zeita. Meyer, on the other hand, Ursprung ii. 244 note 1, adheres to the older view that Bezetha (or Bethesda) is meant, and connects the cistern in 1 Macc. with the "pool of Bethesda" mentioned in John v. 2.

<sup>b</sup> 1 Macc. vii. 19 " those of the deserters who were with him," which may mean either the Jews who had deserted to the Syrians (cf. vs. 24 =§ 400) and whom he was now punishing for their earlier disobedience, or the Jews who had first sided with the Syrians, but later went over to Judas.

not able to withstand Judas, but was inferior to him in strength, he decided to turn for help to his ally King Demetrius. Accordingly, he went to Antioch and roused the king's anger against Judas, at whose hands he said in his accusation, he had suffered many injuries, which would become still greater unless Judas were first caught and brought to punishment by having a strong force sent against him.a

(4) Thereupon Demetrius, beginning to believe Demetrius that it would be hazardous to his own interests also to sends do nothing about Inderests also to sends do nothing about Judas' growing strength, sent out against Nicanor, the most devoted and faithful of his Friends  $^{b}$  Judas. -for it was he who had escaped with him from the vii. 26. city of Rome, c-and giving him as large a force as he thought would be sufficient for him to use against Judas, ordered him to deal unsparingly with the nation. But when Nicanor came to Jerusalem, he decided not to fight Judas immediately, but chose to get him into his power by deccit, and so he sent him offers of peace, saying that there was no necessity for their making war and facing danger, but he would give Judas his oath that he should suffer no harm; for, he said, he had come with some friends to make elear to them what the intentions of King Demetrius denonnee Judas as leader of the Asidaioi, really the peace-loving Jews, cf. § 396 note d. <sup>b</sup> 1 Mace. "one of his honoured officers  $(a\rho\chi \acute{o}\nu\tau\omega\nu)$ ," 2 Mace. xiv. 12 " the elephantarch."

<sup>c</sup> Neither 1 Macc. nor 2 Macc. mentions Nicanor's having been in Rome with Demetrius, which information Josephus must have got from Polybius, cf. Polyb. xxxi. 14 (22). 4. It is doubtful whether he is the same Nicanor whom Lysias sent against Judas in 165 B.C., cf. § 298 note b. Bevan, H. Sel. ii. 200 note 5, writes, "One suspects that Josephus had nothing to go upon, except that he knew from Polybius that a Nicanor had been on that occasion with Demetrius."

<sup>a</sup> 1 Mace. does not say that Nicanor spoke of Demetrius' attitude toward the Jews. Is there, perhaps, some connexion between this statement in Josephus and that of 2 Macc. xiv. 5, that Demetrius inquired of Alcimus how the Jews were disposed toward him ?

were, and how he felt toward their race.<sup>a</sup> This offer, Failure of which was made by the envoys of Nicanor, was be- Nicanor's plot. Cf. lieved by Judas and his brothers, and not suspecting 1 Macc. any treachery, they gave pledges to him, and received Nicanor with his force. But he, after greeting Judas, and while conversing with him, gave his men a certain signal by which they were to seize Judas. He, however, saw through the plot, and dashing out, escaped to his own men.<sup>b</sup> Accordingly, since his purpose and the trap had become known, Nicanor decided to make war on Judas; but the other, having organized his men and prepared for battle, engaged him at a certain village called Kapharsalama,<sup>c</sup> and defeated him and forced him to flee to the Akra in Jerusalem.<sup>d</sup>

(5) And again,<sup>e</sup> as Nicanor was coming down from Nicanor the Akra to the temple, he was met by some of the threatens priests and elders, who greeted him and showed him of Jeruthe sacrifices which they said they were offering to 1 Macc. God on behalf of the king. Thereupon he fell to vii. 33.

<sup>d</sup> The text of this paragraph has been emended in two places by Dindorf; according to the Ms. reading it was Nicanor who defeated Judas and forced him to flee to the Akra. It seems necessary to accept Dindorf's emendations for two reasons, first because 1 Macc. says plainly that Nicanor, having lost 500 men, fled to Jerusalem (" the city of David "), and second because the Akra was in the hands of the Syrians, and it must therefore have been Nicanor, and not Judas, who fled there. Schürer, however, i. 217 note 26, insists that Nicanor could not have suffered a " real defeat ' since, according to 1 Macc., he lost only 500 men (a v.l. gives 5000).

<sup>e</sup> έτι is preferable to the variant  $\epsilon \pi \epsilon i$  "when"; it introduces another instance of Nicanor's treachery.

cursing them, and threatened that, if the people did not give Judas up to him, he would pull down a the temple when he returned. After making these threats, he left Jerusalem, while the priests burst into tears in their distress over his words, and supplicated God to deliver them from their enemies. Now after Nicanor had left Jerusalem, he came to a certain village called Bethoron,<sup>b</sup> and there encamped, being joined by another force from Syria. And Judas encamped at Adasa,° another village thirty stades ° distant from Bethoron, with two thousand men in all.d These he exhorted not to be overawed by the numbers of their adversaries nor to reflect how many they were about to contend against, but to bear in mind who they were and for what prize they were facing danger, and bravely encounter the enemy; and then he led them out to battle. And engaging Nicanor, Judas' viehe defeated his adversaries after a severe fight, and tory over killed many of them; and finally  $^{e}$  Nicanor himself at Adasa. fell, fighting gloriously. When he fell, his army did  $\frac{1 \text{ Macc.}}{\text{vii}, 43}$ not stay, but having lost their commander, threw away all their armour, and turned to flight. But Judas site is really 60 stades (c. 7 miles) from Beit- Ur el-Fôqâ (Bethoron), and not merely 30 stades as Josephus states (no distance is given in 1 Mace.). Other scholars, including Schürer, identify Adasa with mod. 'Adaseh N.E. of Bethoron in the vicinity of Jifnå (Gophna), on the basis of B.J. i. 45 ff. where the account of Judas' retreat to Gophna after the battle of Bethzacharias (cf. §§ 369 ff.) is followed by that of his death (!) at Acedasa (=Adasa?), but the passage in B.J. is entirely unreliable. We must, it seems, suppose, with Père Abel, that Josephus errs here in giving the distance between Adasa and Bethoron as 30 stades.

<sup>a</sup> 1 Maec. "And they took the road to Galgala (v.l. "Galaad") and encamped against Maisaloth in Arbela." Josephus thus omits Maisaloth, and apparently equates Galilee with Judaea, probably using "Judaea" in the broader sense of "Jewish territory," as in B.J. i. 309. Pier Abel follows Josephus in reading Galilee for Galgala or Galaad, and with Robinson explains Maisaloth, not as a proper name, but as the transliteration of Heb.  $m^{csilloth}$ , here meaning "accent" (in the LXX of 2 Chron. ix. 11  $dva\beta doets$  renders  $m^{csilloth}$ ). This Arbela in Galilee would then be the same as that mentioned in Vita 188, 311 et al. as a region of caves, as Josephus describes it here, and is therefore to be identified with mod. Irbid, a few miles W. of the Sea of Galilee, a little S.W. of Magdala and N.W. of Tiberias. 220 Judaea and encamped at Arbela, a city in Galilee<sup>a</sup>; and after besieging those who were in the caves there b-for many had taken refuge in these,-he captured them, and departing from there, hastened toward Jerusalem.<sup>c</sup> But when he learned that Judas had encamped at a certain village by the name of Berzetho,<sup>d</sup> he pushed on to meet him with twenty thousand foot-soldiers and two thousand horsemen ; while Judas' whole force amounted to only a thousand." When these saw the great numbers of Bacchides' men, they became afraid,<sup>f</sup> and abandoning their lines, all but eight hundred fled. But Judas, Judas enalthough abandoned by his own soldiers, and with the courages his small enemy pressing him and allowing him no time to rally force. his force, was ready to engage Bacchides' men with <sup>1 Macc, ix, 7</sup>. his eight hundred; and so he exhorted these few g to Schürer i. 222 note 36) with Bir ez-Zeit c. 2 miles N.W. of Gophna (mod. Jifnâ) and c. 15 miles N. of Jerusalem. Père Abel, however, positing the reading Bereth in 1 Macc., conjectures that the Heb. original had Birath, which he identifies with mod. el-Bîreh c. 10 miles N. of Jerusalem, commanding the road between Jerusalem and Samaria. He holds that this conjecture is supported by the fact that Elasa, mentioned in 1 Macc. as the site of Judas' camp over against Berea, can plausibly be identified with mod. el- Assy less than a mile S.W. of el-Bireh.

(i. 1) In what manner the Jewish nation regained Bacchides its liberty after the Macedonians had subjugated it, oppresses and how many and how severe were the struggles after through which their commander Judas went before death. he died fighting on their behalf, we have related in  $\frac{1 \text{ Macc.}}{\text{ix. 23.}}$ the preceding book. Now after the death of Judas<sup>a</sup> all those who remained of the godless, and the transgressors against their country's manner of life once more rose up among the Jews, and flourishing on all sides, did them injury. And their wickedness was accompanied by a famine which seized upon the country, so that through the lack of necessities and their inability to hold out against the afflictions caused both by the famine and by their foes, many deserted to the Macedonians. Then Baechides gathered together those of the Jews who had given up the eustoms of their country and had chosen the kind of life common to other nations, and entrusted to them the government of the country; and these men seized the friends of Judas and those who sympathized with him, and delivered them to Bacehides, whereupon he first tortured and maltreated them at his pleasure, and then made an end of them in this way. After this calamity had befallen the Jews, which was greater than any they had experienced

But Bacchides saw the blow coming and evaded it, whereupon Jonathan leaped into the river with his companions and swam across, and in this manner they escaped to the other side of the Jordan, for the enemy no longer followed them across the river; and Bacchides straightway returned to the citadel in Jerusalem, having lost about two thousand b of his army. (4) About this time a someone came to Jonathan Jonathan and his brother Simon with the report that the sons of and Simon Amaraios were celebrating a wedding and bringing murder of the bride, who was the daughter of one of the distinguished men among the  $\text{Arabs},^b$  from the eity of  $\frac{1}{1}$  Mace. Thereupon Jonathan and Simon, thinking that a most favourable opportunity had arisen for avenging their brother, and believing that they could exact satisfaction from them with the greatest ease for the killing of John, set out for Medaba and lay in wait for their foes in the mountains. And when they saw them conducting the maid and her bridegroom and a great company of friends, as is usual at a wedding, they sprang out from their ambush and killed them all, and after taking as spoil the ornaments and the rest of the possessions that were then being taken along by these people, turned back. Such, then, was the punishment which they inflicted on the sons of Amaraios for killing their brother John, for these men themselves and the friends who accompanied them, and their wives and children, perished to the number of about four hundred.<sup>d</sup> returned to the king.<sup>a</sup> And thereafter the affairs of the Jews were peaceful for two years.<sup>b</sup> But the renegades <sup>c</sup> and godless men, seeing that Jonathan and his followers were living in the country in the greatest security because of the peace, sent to King Demetrius and urged him to send Bacehides to seize Jonathan, for this, they informed him, could be done without difficulty, and if his men fell upon them unexpectedly in one night they could kill them all. The king therefore sent Bacchides, and when he came to Judaea, he wrote to his friends, both Jews and allies, to seize Jonathan for him. And they all made an effort to do so, but were not able to get hold of Jonathan-for he had become aware of the plot and guarded himself elosely-d, whereupon Bacchides, being enraged at the renegades for having, as he thought, deceived him and the king, seized fifty of their leaders and killed them.<sup>e</sup> But Jonathan, in fear of Bacchides, withdrew with his brother and his companions to Bethalaga,<sup>f</sup> a village in the wilderness, and building towers and surrounding it with walls, kept himself safely protected. When Bacchides Bacchides heard of this, he led out the army that was with him, besieges Jonathan. and killed them." Most commentators take this to mean 1 Macc. that Jonathan killed fifty of the Jews who called Bacchides ix. 63, to Judaea. Perhaps Josephus takes Bacchides to be the subject here because of vs. 69 (see below, § 31), which says that Bacchides, angry at the siege he was forced to undergo by Jonathan and Simon, killed many of the Jews who had invited him to attack the Hasmonaean forces.

Oesterley, CAP, suggested a connexion with the Wady el-Bassah, E. of Tekoah, and recently Père Abel has identified it more exactly with Khirbet Beit-Bassa, c. 3 miles N. by E. of Tekoah. Klein, EY, p. 56, suggests that the original name was Beth Nibshan, found in Josh. xv. 62. But the form Bethalaga in Josephus still remains a puzzle.

and taking along his Jewish allies, came against Jonathan and assaulted his fortifications and besieged him for many days. Jonathan, however, did not vield before the severity of the siege, but after holding out stoutly, left his brother Simon in the city to carry on the fight with Bacchides, and himself secretly went out into the country; then having gathered together a large force from among those who sympathized with him," he fell upon Bacchides' eamp by night and slew a good many of them, thus making known to his brother Simon that he had fallen upon the foe. When Simon became aware that the enemy were being killed by him, he too sallied out against them and burned the engines which the Macedonians had used in the siege, and eaused the slaughter of a considerable number of their men. But Bacchides, seeing himself hemmed in by his foes, some of them pressing him in front and others from behind, fell into a despondent and disturbed state of mind, for he was confounded at the unexpected outcome of the siege. However he vented his anger at these reverses on the renegades who had sent for him to the king, for he believed they had deceived hini.<sup>b</sup> And he wished to end the siege and, if possible, return home without dishonour.<sup>c</sup>

Possibly Josephus read  $\frac{\partial}{\partial n} \epsilon r a \xi \epsilon \nu$  instead of  $\frac{\partial}{\partial n} a \tau a \xi \epsilon \nu$  "he smote," and took the verse to mean that Jonathan enlisted the help of these tribes, not that he attacked them.

and careless about public affairs, for which reason the hatred of his subjects was still more inflamed against him, as we have already related elsewhere.<sup>a</sup> But when Demetrius heard that Alexander had come to Ptolemais, he took his entire army and led it against him. He also sent envoys to Jonathan to propose a friendly alliance, for he had determined to anticipate Alexander lest he should be before him in treating with Jonathan and obtaining assistance from him. This he did from fear that Jonathan might bear him a grudge for his former enmity, and therefore join in the attack on him. Accordingly he instructed him to collect a force and provide arms, and to recover the Jewish hostages whom Bacchides had shut up in the citadel of Jerusalem. On receiving this message from Demetrius, Jonathan came to Jerusalem and read the king's letter in the hearing of the people and of those who guarded the citadel. And when these instructions were read, the godless men and the renegades of the citadel were in great fear, now that the king had permitted Jonathan to raise an army and recover the hostages. But he restored every one of them to his parents. So Jonathan took up his residence <sup>b</sup> in Jerusalem, making various repairs in the city and arranging everything according to his own liking. Thus he ordered the walls of the city <sup>c</sup> also to be built of square stones in order that they might be more secure against the Judaea was being ravaged by the Macedonians and their kings, and desiring to acquire for himself eternal fame and glory, he determined to send to King Ptolemy and Queen Cleopatra and request of them authority to build a temple in Egypt similar to that at Jerusalem, and to appoint Levites and priests of his own race. In this desire he was encouraged chiefly by the words of the prophet Isaiah, who had lived more than six hundred years before and had foretold that a temple to the Most High God was surely to be built in Egypt by a Jew. Being, there-

<sup>e</sup> Cf. Is. xix. 19, "In that day shall there be an altar to the Lord in the midst of the land of Egypt, and a pillar at the border thereof to the Lord." Many commentators suspect vss. 18-25 of this chapter of having been interpolated by a writer of the Hasmonaean period; in vs. 18 some scholars emend 'ir ha-heres " city of destruction " to 'ir ha-heres " city of the sun," supposing this to be an allusion to the name Heliopolis " city of the sun."

<sup>a</sup> Probably not the war between Antiochus Epiphanes and Ptolemy Philometor, but the war between Philometor and his rival Ptolemy VII Euergetes, in which case Onias is to be identified with the Jewish general Onias mentioned in Ap, ii. 49. Büchler conjectures (Tobiaden, pp. 246 ff.) that Onias' contemporary Dositheus, a Samaritan, sought to establish a rival temple in Egypt.

<sup>b</sup> Most scholars, following Naville and Flinders Petrie, locate the site at the mod. Tell el-Yehūdiyeh, c. 30 miles N.E. of Memphis. In B.J. vii. 426 Josephus locates it at a 258 fore, excited by these words, Onias wrote the following letter to Ptolemy and Cleopatra. "Many and great are the services which I have rendered you in the course of the war,<sup>a</sup> with the help of God, when I was in Coele-Svria and Phoenicia, and when I came with the Jews to Leontopolis in the nome of Heliopolis<sup>b</sup> and to other places where our nation is settled; and I found that most of them have temples, contrary to what is proper, and that for this reason they are ill-disposed toward one another, as is also the case with the Egyptians because of the multitude of their temples and their varying opinions about the forms of worship; and I have found a most suitable place in the fortress called after Bubastis-ofthe-Fields, which abounds in various kinds of trees and is full of sacred animals, wherefore I beg you to permit me to cleanse this temple, which belongs to no one and is in ruins, and to build a temple <sup>c</sup> to the Most High God in the likeness of that at Jerusalem and with the same dimensions,<sup>d</sup> on behalf of you and your wife and children, in order that the Jewish inhabitants of Egypt may be able to come together there in mutual harmony and serve your interests. For this indeed is what the prophet Isaiah foretold, 'There shall be an altar in Egypt to the distance of 180 stades (c. 20 miles) from Memphis. For the literature on the topography see Schürer iii. 97 n. 25 and Petrie, Hyksos and Israelite Cities, 1906. The temple was probably near the 'lovdalwu orpatónedou' 'Jews' camp,'' mentioned in Ant. xiv. 133.

<sup>c</sup> Tscherikower, pp. 286 ff., makes the interesting suggestion that the building of the temple was only incidental to the settling of a military colony of Jews by Onias.

<sup>d</sup> In B.J. vii. 427 Josephus states merely that the altar of the Onias temple resembled that at Jerusalem.

(2) This, then, is what Onias wrote to King Ptolemy Ptolemy. And one may get a notion of the king's Philometor allows Onias piety and that of his sister and wife Cleopatra from to build a the letter which they wrote in reply, for they placed Leontothe blame for the sin and transgression against the polis. Law on the head of Onias,<sup>a</sup> writing the following reply. "King Ptolemy and Queen Cleopatra to Onias, greeting. We have read your petition asking that it be permitted you to cleanse the ruined temple in Leontopolis in the nome of Heliopolis, called Bubastis-of-the-Fields. We wonder, therefore, whether it will be pleasing to God that a temple be built in a place so wild b and full of sacred c animals. But since you say that the prophet Isaiah foretold this long ago, we grant your request if this is to be in accordance with the Law, so that we may not seem to have sinned against God in any way."

(3) And so Onias took over the place and built a The temple temple and an altar to God similar to that at Jeru- of Onias. salem, but smaller and poorer. But it has not seemed to me necessary to write about its dimensions and its vessels now, for they have already been described in the seventh book of my Jewish War.<sup>a</sup> And Onias found some Jews of his own kind, and priests and Levites to minister <sup>b</sup> there. Concerning this temple, however, we have already said enough.

<sup>a</sup> From what follows it would seem that the only possible sin consisted in choosing a pagan site for the temple. The problem of the validity of a sacrificial site outside Jerusalem, which most scholars believe to have been implicitly forbidden by the legislation of Deuteronomy, is not raised here. The rabbis, however, seem to have accorded the Onias temple some degree of sanctity, cf. Mishnah, Menahoth, xiii. 10, and the works cited in Appendix K.

(4) Now there arose a quarrel between the Jews Ptolemy in Alexandria and the Samaritans who worshipped Philometor at the temple on Mount Gerizim, which had been Alexandrian built in the time of Alexander,<sup>c</sup> and they disputed <sub>their</sub> about their respective temples in the presence of dispute Ptolemy himself, the Jews asserting that it was the samaritans. temple at Jerusalem which had been built in accordance with the laws of Moses, and the Samaritans that it was the temple on Gerizim.<sup>d</sup> And they requested the king to sit in council with his Friends and hear their arguments on these matters, and to punish with death those who were defeated. Accordingly, Sabbaeus and Theodosius made speeches on behalf of the Samaritans, while Andronicus, the son of Messalamus, espoke for the inhabitants of Jerusalem and Judaea. And they swore by God and the king that they would give their proofs in accordance with the Law, and requested Ptolemy to put to death anyone whom he might find violating these oaths. And so the king brought many of his Friends into his council and sat to hear the speakers. And the Jews who were then in Alexandria were in great anxiety about the men whose task it was to express indignation on behalf<sup>a</sup> of the temple at Jerusalem, for they were resentful that any should seek to destroy this temple which was so ancient and the most celebrated of all those in the world. But as Sabbaeus and Theodosius permitted Andronicus to make the first speech, he began with proofs from the Law and the succession of the high priests, showing how each had become head of the temple by receiving that office from his father, and that all the kings of Asia had honoured the temple with dedicatory-offerings and most splendid gifts, while none had shown any respect or regard for that on Gerizim, as though it were not in existence. By these and many similar arguments Andronicus persuaded the king to deeide that the temple at Jerusalem had been built in accordance with the laws of Moses, and to put to death Sabbaeus and Theodosius and their party. These, then, were the things that befell the Jews in Alexandria in the reign of Ptolemy Philometor.

<sup>d</sup> For a similar, earlier controversy see Ant. xii. 10. Büchler (see note above) believes that the quarrel was not over the rival claims of the temples of Jerusalem and Gerizim but of the Jewish and Samaritan temples in Egypt. It may be noted here that it is extremely difficult to determine how much of this account is historical, and whether it is based on a Palestinian or Hellenistic Egyptian source.

<sup>b</sup> The 165th yr. Sel. extended from Oct. 148 to Oct. 147 u.c., or, by Jewish reekoning, from April 147 to April 146 u.c.

<sup>c</sup> Bevan, H. Sel. ii. 301, suggests emending "Cilicia" to "Scleucia" (in Pieria, not far from Antioch). 1 Mace. x. 67 has, " to the land of his fathers," presumably meaning Syria. According to Justinus xxxv. 2-1 Demetrius II had been living 268 in Jonathan shown by King Alexander that he even inscribed him as his First Friend.<sup>a</sup>

(3) But in the hundred and sixty-fifth year <sup>b</sup> De- Demetrius metrius, the son of Demetrius, embarked from Crete <sup>II opposes</sup> Alexander with many mercenaries, with whom Lasthenes the Balas. Cretan had furnished him, and sailed to Cilicia.<sup>c</sup> 1 Macc. When Alexander heard of this, he was thrown into a state of anxiety and confusion, and at once hastened from Phoenicia to Antioch in order to make his position there secure before Demetrius should arrive. He also left as governor of Coele-Syria Apollonius dTaos,<sup>e</sup> who came to Jamneia with a great force and sent to the high priest Jonathan, saving it was unjust that he alone should live in security and with freedom to do as he liked, not being subject to the king; it was, he said, bringing on him the reproach of all men that he did not make himself subject to the king." "Do not, therefore, deceive yourself," he added, "sitting in the mountains and thinking that you are strong; but if you have confidence in your force, come down to the plain and measure your force at Cnidus (in Caria), in relation to which Cilicia, on the border of Syria, might be considered part of the " land of his fathers," and so interpreted by Josephus, even if he had no Hellenistic source. Moreover Demetrius fell back on Cilicia later, as Josephus tells us in § 145; it may therefore be assumed that he had originally set out from there as from his base of operations.

<sup>d</sup> 1 Macc. correctly states that Apollonius was appointed by Demetrius, not by Alexander; it was on the latter's behalf that Jonathan fought against Apollonius.

" Variant " Daos "; 1 Macc. x. 69, " Apollonius, who was over (τόν ὄντα) Coele-Syria." Some scholars take Josephus' τάον to be a transposition of the two syllables ὄντα in 1 Macc., others take orta to be a corruption of taor. The point remains unsettled.

(4) Greatly angered by these words, Jonathan eol- Jonathan leeted ten thousand picked soldiers and set out from defeats Apollonius Jerusalem with his brother Simon, and coming to the general Joppa, encamped outside the city, for the inhabitants ander Balas, elosed their gates against him, having had a garrison 1 Macc. stationed within the city by Apollonius. But as x. 74. Jonathan was preparing to besiege them,<sup>a</sup> they were afraid that he might take their eity by storm, and so they opened the gates to him. And when Apollonius heard that Joppa had been occupied by Jonathan, he took three thousand horsemen and eight thousand foot-soldiers b and came to Azotus,c and departing from there, made an easy and slow march until he came to Joppa ; here he retired and drew Jonathan into the plain, for he had sublime confidence d in his horsemen, and placed his hopes of victory in them. Thereupon Jonathan advanced and pursued Apollonius to Azotus, and the latter, when onee the enemy was in the plain, turned back and engaged him in battle. Now Apollonius had placed a thousand horsemen in ambush in a valley a to surprise the enemy in the rear, but Jonathan became aware of this and was not dismayed; he drew up his army in a square <sup>b</sup> and prepared <sup>c</sup> to fight the enemy on either line by opposing them whether they attacked his front or his rear. And as the battle continued until the evening, he gave his brother Simon part of his force and commanded them to engage the main body of the foe, while he ordered his own men to make a fence of their shields, and so receive the javelins thrown by the horsemen. Accordingly, they did as they were commanded, while the enemy's horsemen hurled javelins at them until they had no more left, without injuring them at all, for the missiles did not reach their bodies, but glanced off the shields that were joined in a fence and compactly united, and so they were easily turned aside and fell back harmless.<sup>d</sup> And as the enemy were fatigued from throwing javelins at them from early morning until late evening, Simon, who perceived that they were weary, engaged their main body, and through the great ardour which his soldiers showed put the foe to flight. And when their horsemen saw the foot-soldiers fleeing, they no longer stayed, but being fatigued from fighting until evening, and having lost hope of aid from the foot-soldiers, they too fled in disorder and confusion, with the result that their lines were broken and they were scattered all over the plain. And Jonathan pursued them as far as Azotus, slaving many of them, and forced those who despaired of being saved to take refuge in the temple of Dagon <sup>a</sup> which was in Azotus. But Jonathan took the city by a sudden attack, and burnt it and the surrounding villages as well. Nor did he spare the temple of Dagon, but burnt this too and slew those who had taken refuge in it. And the total number of the enemy who fell in battle and were burnt to death in the temple was eight thousand. Then, having conquered so great a force, he marched off from Azotus and came to Ascalon: and as he was encamped outside the city, the inhabitants of Ascalon came out to meet him, bringing him presents to show he was welcome, and honouring him. He therefore expressed approval of their friendly intention,<sup>b</sup> and returned from there to Jerusalem, taking along much booty which he had seized in the victory over his enemies. Now when Alexander heard that his general Apollonius had been defeated, he pretended to be pleased, as if it had been against his will that Apollonius <sup>c</sup> fought with Jonathan who was his friend and ally, and he wrote to Jonathan, testifying to his worth by giving him rewards and honours, including a gold brooch,<sup>a</sup> such as are customarily given to kinsmen of kings,<sup>b</sup> and he turned over to him Akkaron<sup>c</sup> and its district as land for settlement.

<sup>c</sup> As was remarked above, § 88 note d, Apollonius was fighting for Demetrius II, not for Alexander Balas. The following section is therefore a distortion of 1 Mace, x. 88-89, which tells how Alexander honoured Jonathan for his victory over Apollonius. Josephus' phrase  $\pi po\sigma\epsilon \pi o \iota \epsilon \tau \sigma \chi a (\rho \epsilon v)$  "pretended to be pleased" is in direct contradiction to the phrase in 1 Mace.,  $\pi po\sigma \epsilon \theta \epsilon \tau \delta \epsilon \chi \delta \delta f a (v \tau \delta v)$  'Iwv  $d \eta v$ " the continued still further to honour Jonathan."

(5) It was also at about this time that King Ptolemy Ptolemy, surnamed Philometor, came to Syria with comes to a force of ships and foot-soldiers to fight as an ally the aid of of Alexander, who was his son-in-law.<sup>a</sup> And all the Balas. cities, at Alexander's command, gladly welcomed <sup>1 Macc.</sup> him, and escorted him as far as the city of Azotus, where all the inhabitants clamorously demanded satisfaction from him for the burning of their temple of Dagon, and accused Jonathan of destroying it and wasting their territory with fire and killing many of their men. And while Ptolemy heard these complaints in silence, Jonathan went to meet him at Joppa, and received from him splendid gifts and all kinds of honours; he then escorted him as far as the river called Eleutherus,<sup>e</sup> and again returned to Jerusalem.

(6) f But when he came to Ptolemais, Ptolemy, con-Ptolemy trary to all expectation, came near being slain when Philometor been, his friendly behaviour toward Jonathan, the ally of Balas' plot Alexander, seems to show that he did not at first manifest hostility toward Alexander, but did so only when he realized the weakness of Alexander's position or, as Diodorus says, καταγνούς δέ αὐτοῦ τῆς ψυχῆς παντελή ἀδυναμίαν.

<sup>a</sup> This incident appears to be referred to in 1 Macc. xi. 10, in which Ptolemy says, "I regret having given him (Alexander) my daughter, for he has sought to kill me." Ammonius is not mentioned in Diodorus xxxii. 9 c.

<sup>b</sup> There is no such passage in Josephus; he has taken over the formula from his source. The story of Ammonius being disguised as a woman has a curious parallel in Diodorus's account, xxxii. 10, of Herais, the daughter of Diophantus, who lived in Arabia, whither Alexander fled 278 a plot was formed against him by Alexander through Ammonius, who happened to be his friend. And when the plot was discovered, Ptolemy wrote to Alexander and demanded that Ammonius be given up to him for punishment, saying that a plot had been formed against him by Ammonius, for which he expected him to pay the penalty.<sup>a</sup> But when Alexander refused to give him up, he understood that it was Alexander who had plotted against him, and so he felt very bitter toward him. Now Alexander had earlier offended the Antiochians because of Ammonius, for they had suffered many evils at his hands. Nevertheless Ammonius met with punishment for his reckless crimes, being cut down shamefully as a woman, for he had made an effort to conceal himself in a woman's dress, as we have related elsewhere.b

(7) ° Ptolemy, however, who blamed himself for Ptolemy having given his daughter in marriage to Alexander, Philometor and for making an alliance with him against De-Alexander metrius, dissolved the connexion with him; and having taken his daughter from him, he promptly sent II. Cf. to Demetrius, proposing a friendly alliance, and xi. 10. promising to give him his daughter to wife, and to restore to him his father's throne. Thereupon De-

(see below § 117). Herais, having suffered a mysterious change of sex, adopted male attire, and as a mounted soldier. accompanied Alexander on his flight.

<sup>c</sup> The following section, to § 121, is based chiefly on a Hellenistic source, though there are some verbal parallels to 1 Macc. xi. 10-20. Here again Nicolas of Damascus appears to be the immediate source, partly because of such words and phrases as άγώνισμα in § 111 and ηδιστον άκουσμα και θέαμα in § 118 (cf. Ant. v. 125, going back to Xenophon, Mem. ii. 1.31).

metrius, being pleased with the offer made through his envoys, accepted the alliance and the marriage. But one difficult task still remained for Ptolemy, which was to persuade the Antiochians to accept Demetrius, toward whom they felt hostility because of the lawless acts committed against them by his father Demetrius. But he accomplished this also, for the Antiochians hated Alexander on account of Ammonius, as we have related,<sup>a</sup> and were ready to drive him out of Antioch. And so, being expelled from Antioch, he came to Cilicia. And Ptolemy, on coming to the Antiochians, was proclaimed king by them and their armies, and was compelled to put on two diadems, one being that of Asia, and the other that of Egypt. However, being a good and upright person by nature, and not being ambitious of dazzling fortune,<sup>b</sup> and, in addition, being skilled in reading the future, he determined to refrain from appearing to give the Romans any reason for disliking him; and bringing together the Antiochians in assembly, he sought to persuade them to accept Demetrius, saying that if Demetrius were well received by them, he would not bear them any grudge on account of his father, and he agreed to be a counseller of good and a guide to Demetrius, and promised that if Demetrius attempted any unworthy acts, he would not permit him to carry them out. For himself, he asserted, the throne of Egypt was enough. And with these words he persuaded the Antiochians to accept Demetrius.

Cilicia for Syria with a large army<sup>a</sup> and a great supply of arms, burned and plundered the territory of the Antiochians, whereupon Ptolemy marched against him with his son-in-law Demetrius-for he had already given him his daughter in marriage-and they defeated Alexander and put him to flight.<sup>b</sup> And so he fled to Arabia. Now it happened that in the battle Ptolemy's horse was alarmed on hearing the trumpeting of an elephant, and unseating Ptolemy, threw him to the ground ; and when the enemy saw this, they rushed upon him and inflicted many wounds on him about the head, so as to bring him to the point of death; and when his bodyguards snatched him from their hands, he was in so serious a condition that for four days he was unable either to understand anything or to utter a word. Meanwhile the Arab chieftain Zabeilus<sup>c</sup> cut off Alexander's head and sent it to Ptolemy, who recovered from his wounds on the fifth day and coming to his senses, at the same time heard the news of Alexander's death and saw his head-most pleasant things to hear and to see. Accordingly the soldiers fled from his attack e to Alexandria, but Demetrius secured possession of the elephants. Meanwhile<sup>f</sup> the high priest Jonathan gathered together an army from all Judaea, and assaulted and besieged the citadel in Jerusalem which held a Macedonian garrison and some of the godless Jews who had abandoned their native customs. These men at first made light of Jonathan's devices for capturing the citadel, for they had confidence in the strength of the place, but some of the worthless fellows in it went out by night and came to Demetrius to inform him of the siege of the citadel. Being, therefore, greatly angered by this report, he took his force and came against Jonathan from Antioch. And when he reached Ptolemais, he wrote

Thereupon Jonathan, although he did not stop the siege, took with him the elders of the people and the priests, and came to Demetrius, bringing gold and silver and garments and a multitude of presents; and when he presented him with these, he softened the anger of the king; and being honoured by him, he received confirmation of his tenure of the highpriesthood, just as he had obtained it from the kings before him. upon Demetrius promised not only to grant this request, but also to do more for him at the end of the war which he had on his hands; for, he said, all his time was just now taken up with this.ª And he asked Jonathan to send him assistance, informing him that his force had revolted. And so, becoming aware that assistance had come to Demetrius from Jonathan, and reflecting that unless they acted quickly to anticipate him, he would collect a great force, they hastily seized their arms, and surrounding his palace as if in a siege, blocked the exits and sought to get the king into their hands. But when he saw that the populace of Antioch was ready to make war on him and was under arms, he took his mereenaries and the Jews sent by Jonathan, and engaged the Antiochians; but he was overpowered by them—for many tens of thousands <sup>c</sup> were there—and was beaten. Now when the Jews saw the Antiochians getting the upper hand, they went up to the roofs of the palace buildings, and from there hurled missiles at the Antiochians d; and while they themselves, being high above their opponents, were too far away to be hurt by them, they could inflict much damage on them by fighting from above; and so they drove them out of the adjoining houses, which they quickly set on fire; and as the houses were close together and mostly built of wood, the flames spread over the whole city and entirely consumed it. Thereupon the Antiochians, being unable to give help or to control the fire, turned to flight. But the Jews, leaping from roof to roof, pursued them in this manner, and a very strange manner of pursuit it was. Now when the king saw that the Antiochians were striving to save their children and wives, and for that reason were no longer fighting, he set upon them from other narrow streets, and on encountering them, killed many of them, so that they were foreed to throw down their full armour and surrender to Demetrius. But he forgave them their acts of defiance, and so put an end to the uprising. He then presented the Jews with the spoils he had gained, and thanked them for having been chiefly responsible for his victory, after which he sent them back to Jerusalem to Jonathan with an acknowledgment of his assistance. <sup>d</sup> The clause "which had been added to the territory of the Jews" is not found in 1 Macc. Modern scholars who do not assume that Josephus added it erroneously are divided in opinion concerning the location of the fourth district; some think Ptolemais is meant, some Akkaron (Ekron), given to Jonathan earlier by Alexander Balas (1 Mace. x. 89); Abel, GP ii. 135, suggests Acrabattene. Others, rejecting Josephus' interpretation, assume that Judaca itself is meant. with the honours conferred upon him by Antiochus, sent envoys both to him and to Tryphon, professing to be his friend and ally, and agreeing to fight with him against Demetrius, for, he explained, Demetrius had shown him no gratitude for the many favours he had received from him in time of need, but had, on the contrary, done him further wrong in return for the kindnesses he had received.

though they had deserted Demetrius,<sup>a</sup> resolved not to go over to Antiochus. This provoked Jonathan to besiege them and to ravage their territory, and investing Gaza with a part of his army, he himself with the rest of it overran their land, destroying and burning it. When the people of Gaza saw in what a plight they were, and that no help was coming to them from Demetrius, but that, on the contrary, distress was already upon them, while the likelihood of assistance was still remote and it was uncertain whether it would come at all, they decided that it would be wise to give up waiting for assistance, and to remedy their distress.<sup>b</sup> Accordingly, they sent to Jonathan and proposed a friendly alliance. For before they experience misfortune, human beings do not understand what is good for them; only when they find themselves in some difficulty and after stubbornly resisting what they might better have done when they were quite unharmed, do they finally choose to do this when once they have been afflicted.<sup>c</sup> And so Jonathan made a friendly agreement with them and accepted their hostages, and sent these off to Jerusalem, while he himself marched through the whole country as far as Damascus.

And when Jonathan saw them ready for battle, he too prepared his own soldiers for the contest as well as he could. Thereupon the men placed in ambush by Demetrius' generals appeared on the rear of the Jews, and they, fearing that they would be caught between two fires and be lost, made haste to flee. And so they all abandoned Jonathan, except a few, some fifty in number,<sup>d</sup> who stood their ground, among them Matthias, the son of Absalom, and Judas, the son of Chapsaios,<sup>e</sup> who were the commanders of the entire force; and these with recklessness and despair pushed back the enemy, and dismaying them by their courage and strength, made them turn and flee.<sup>f</sup> And when those of Jonathan's soldiers who had retreated saw the enemy in rout, they rallied after their flight and hastened to pursue them, which they did as far as Kedasa,<sup>g</sup> where the enemy had their camp.

coming is a detail not found in t Macc., but possibly based on Josephus' mistaken reading of the clause in 1 Macc. xi. 67, " and they (Jonathan's men) got up early in the morning  $(\check{\omega}\rho\theta\rho\nu\sigma\alpha\nu\ \tau\dot{\sigma}\ \pi\rho\omega i)$  to go to the plain of Asor."

<sup>9</sup> The preceding (from "although we needed no such evidence") is an amplification, based on a misunderstanding or different reading of 1 Macc. xii. 9, "We, therefore, although we have no need of these things (i.e. the alliances with Sparta), since we find comfort in the holy writings which we possess."

There may also be a connexion with the usage of "eponymous" in archon eponymos, whose accession marked the new year in several Greek states. πολέμων περιστάντων διὰ τὴν τῶν γειτνιώντων πλεονεξίαν, οὕθ' ὑμῖν οὕτ' ἄλλω' τῶν προσηκόντων ἡμῖν<sup>2</sup> ἐνοχλεῖν ἐκρίναμεν. καταγωνισάμενοι δὲ τοὺς πολεμίους, πέμποντες πρὸς Ῥωμαίους Νουμήνιον τὸν Ἀντιόχου<sup>3</sup> καὶ Ἀντίπατρον τὸν Ἰάσονος τῶν ἀπὸ τῆς γερουσίας ὅντων παρ' ἡμῖν ἐν τιμῆ, ἐδώκαμεν αὐτοῖς καὶ πρὸς ὑμᾶς ἐπιστολάς, ὅπως ἀνανεώσωνται τὴν πρὸς ὑμᾶς <sup>4</sup> ἡμῖν συγγέ-

This clause is added by Josephus.

 $^{d}$  Variant " may renew the friendship that exists between us."

in many wars through the covetousness<sup>a</sup> of our neighbours, we resolved not to trouble you or any other people connected with us. But having overcome our enemies, we have sent to the Romans Numenius, the son of Antiochus,<sup>b</sup> and Antipater, the son of Jason, who belong to our senate and are held in honour by us,<sup>c</sup> and have given them a letter to you also, in order that they may renew our ties with you.d You will do well, therefore, also to write us and instruct us concerning anything you may need, being assured that we shall be eager to carry out your wishes in all respects." e And the Lacedaemonians received the envoys in a friendly manner, and after making a decree concerning a friendly alliance with the Jews, sent them on their way.

(9) f Now at this time there were three schools of The three thought among the Jews, which held different Jewish schools of opinions concerning human affairs; the first being thought. that of the Pharisees, the second that of the Sadducees, and the third that of the Essenes. As for the Pharisees, they say that certain events are the work of Fate,<sup>g</sup> but not all; as to other events, it depends upon ourselves whether they shall take place or not. The sect of Essenes, however, declares that

* The last sentence amplifies 1 Macc. xii. 18.

<sup>1</sup> The following passage on the Jewish sects will be discussed, together with related passages, in an appendix in the last volume of this translation. Here it may suffice to note that Josephus (or his source-probably Nicolas of Damaseus) presents the varying religions and social philosophies of the three groups in such a way that they will be more intelligible to Greek readers.

<sup>9</sup> Fate is here, of course, the Greek equivalent of what we should call Providence. Cf. further G. F. Moore, "Fate and Free Will in the Jewish Philosophies according to Josephus," HTR xxii. (1929), 371-389.

Fate is mistress of all things, and that nothing befalls men unless it be in accordance with her decree. But the Sadducees do away with Fate, holding that there is no such thing and that human actions are not achieved in accordance with her decree, but that all things lie within our own power, so that we ourselves are responsible for our well-being, while we suffer misfortune through our own thoughtlessness. Of these matters, however, I have given a more detailed account in the second book of the Jewish History.a

(10) Now Demetrius' generals, wishing to make Jonathan's good the defeat they had sustained, gathered together further victories a force larger than their former one, and came against over Jonathan. But he had learned of their advance, and II. 1 Mace, went quickly to meet them in the region of Hamath,<sup>b</sup> xii. 24. for he determined not to allow them time enough to invade Judaea. And he encamped at a distance of fifty stades <sup>c</sup> from the enemy, and sent men to spy on their eamp and see how it was laid out. When the seouts had reported all these things to him, and by night  $^{d}$  had captured some men, who revealed to him that the enemy were about to set upon him, he, being forewarned, took measures for his safety by placing outposts outside the camp and keeping his force under arms throughout the entire night; and he exhorted them to keep their spirits high and their senses alert enough to fight even at night if necessary, that their enemy's plan might not take them unaware. But when Demetrius' generals discovered that Jonathan knew their plan, they were no longer able to use sound judgment, and were disturbed at having been found out by their foes; nor could they expect to overcome them by any other means, now that their stratagem had failed, for they did not consider themselves a match for Jonathan's men, if they were to fight in the open. They therefore resolved on flight, and after lighting many fires in order that, when the enemy saw them, they might believe they were still there, they retreated.<sup>a</sup> And when Jonathan came close to their camp at dawn and found it deserted, he realized that they had fled, and went in pursuit of them, but was not quick enough to overtake them, for they had already crossed the Eleutherus river<sup>b</sup> and were on safe ground.<sup>c</sup> He therefore turned back from there to Arabia and made war on the Nabataeans, driving off many of their cattle and taking captives, and then went to Damaseus, where he sold them all.<sup>d</sup> About the same time his the Arabs called Zabadaeans, and defeated them and took their spoil. And removing thence he came to Damascus and marched through the whole country." Perhaps Josephus connects the Zabadaeans of 1 Macc. with the Nabataean Arabs, who then lived considerably further south, because he associates them with "Zabdiel the Arab," who cut off the head of Alexander Balas (§ 118 = 1 Macc. xi. 17). Some older commentators, however, (ap. Grimm) mention Zabdini, a district N.W. of Damascus, near the Eleutherus. Whence Josephus derived the detail of Jonathan's sale of the cattle in Damascus is more difficult to explain. Possibly for  $\delta u \delta \omega \delta e \omega$  "he marched through" Josephus read  $\delta u \delta \omega \kappa e$ "he distributed" or the like.

<sup>d</sup> Perhaps the word νυκτός "by night" should be placed after the relative pronoun of, to agree with 1 Macc. xii. 26, which says that the scouts reported that the enemy intended to attack by night.

brother Simon went through all Judaea and Palestine <sup>a</sup> as far as Ascalon, making their fortresses secure <sup>b</sup> and strengthening them with works and guards, <sup>c</sup> and then went to Joppa, occupied it and introduced a large garrison into it <sup>d</sup>; for he had heard that the inhabitants of Joppa were ready to deliver up their city to Demetrius' generals.

(11) And so, having regulated these matters, both Jonathan Simon and Jonathan came <sup>e</sup> to Jerusalem. Here fortifies Jonathan gathered all the people together in the 1 Mace. temple f and advised them to repair the walls of xii. 35. Jerusalem, and to set up again the part of the wall round the temple which had been thrown down, and to fortify the temple precincts by high towers, $^{g}$  and, in addition, to build still another wall in the midst of the city to keep the garrison in the citadel from reaching the city,  $\hat{h}$  and in this way cut off their large supply of provisions; he further advised them to make the fortresses throughout the country far stronger than they were in their present state of security. And so, when this plan was approved by the people, Jonathan himself began the building in the city, and sent out Simon to make the fortresses through the country as far as Ascalon and the neighbouring fortresses."

however, an obstacle to this plan, namely his fear of Jonathan, who was Antiochus' friend, and for that reason he determined first to get rid of Jonathan, and then make the attempt on Antiochus. And deciding to make an end of him by deceit and treachery, he went from Antioch to Bethsan,ª called Seythopolis by the Greeks, where Jonathan met him with an army of forty thousand picked men, for he suspected that Tryphon had come to attack him. Accordingly, when Tryphon discovered that Jonathan was ready for battle. he flattered him with presents and friendliness, and ordered his officers to obey Jonathan, for he hoped by these means to convince him of his goodwill and to remove all his suspicions, in order that Jonathan might make light of these and be taken off his guard, foreseeing nothing.<sup>b</sup> He also advised him to dismiss his army, for now, he said, there was no need to bring it with him, since there was no war, and peace reigned over all; he invited him, however, to keep a few men about him and go with him to Ptolemais, saving that he would deliver up that city to him and give into his power all the other strongholds that were in the country; it was for this reason, he said, that he had come there.

But the inhabitants of Ptolemais shut their gatesthis they had been ordered to do by Tryphon-,<sup>a</sup> and he b took Jonathan alive and killed all the men with him. He also sent troops against the two thousand men who had been left in Galilee,<sup>c</sup> in order to destroy them as well, but they, at the rumour of what had befallen Jonathan and his men, protected themselves with their arms and succeeded in getting out of the country before the arrival of the men dispatched by Tryphon; and when the troops sent against them by Tryphon saw that they were ready to fight for their lives, they returned to Tryphon without molesting them in any way.

And what they suspected did in fact befall them, for when the foreign nations heard of Jonathan's death, they began to make war on the Jews, thinking them to be without a leader. upon Simon, seeing that the people of Jerusalem were Simon endismayed at these happenings," and wishing by his courages words to make them more courageous and resolute 1 Macc. in opposing Tryphon who was advancing against them, called the people together in the temple b and there began to exhort them as follows. " It was for your liberty, my countrymen, that I and my brothers together with our father have gladly dared death, as you cannot fail to know by now. And having such good examples before me, and believing d that the men of my house were born to die on behalf of our laws and our religion, I know not any fear great enough to drive this thought from my " mind or to introduce in its place a love of life and contempt for glory. Wherefore, as you are not without a leader who is able to suffer and do the greatest things on your behalf, follow me eagerly against whomsoever I may lead you. For neither am I better than my brothers, that I should spare my own life, nor am I worse, that I should flee from or reject what seemed to them the noblest thing of all, that is, to die for the laws and the worship of your God. But in whatever way I must show myself to be a true brother of theirs, in that way I will show it. For I am confident that I shall take vengeance on the enemy, and that I shall deliver you all with your wives and children from their violence, and that with God's help I shall preserve the temple inviolate; for I see that the

(4) By making this speech Simon restored courage The Jews to the multitude, and from having been erushed in elect Simon spirit through timidity they were now raised to a 1 Mace, better spirit and good hope, so that all the people xiii. 7. cried out with one voice that Simon should be their leader and have authority over them, and so take the place of his brothers Judas and Jonathan, saying they would be obedient to whatever commands he would give them.<sup>b</sup> Thereupon he quickly collected all those of his own force who were able to fight, and made haste to rebuild the walls of the city; and when he had made it secure with very high and strong towers, he sent one of his friends, Jonathan, the son of Absalom,<sup>c</sup> with an army to Joppa, ordering him to drive out its inhabitants, for he was afraid that they might deliver up the city to Tryphon.<sup>d</sup> He himself remained to guard Jerusalem.e

(5) Meanwhile Tryphon set out from Ptolemais Tryphon's with a great army and came to Judaea, bringing further treachery also Jonathan as his prisoner. And Simon with his toward the force met him at the city of Addida,<sup>f</sup> which is situated <sup>Jews.</sup> 1 Mace. on a hill, with the plains of Judaea lying below it. xiii. 12. But Tryphon, on receiving them, did not keep his pledge nor release Jonathan, but, instead, took his army and marched all through the country; and deciding to go up to Jerusalem through Idumaea thereafter,<sup>a</sup> he finally came to Adora,<sup>b</sup> a city in Idumaea. Simon, however, with his army marched in the same direction, always encamping opposite him.

A heavy xiii. 21. snow, however, fell during the night, which covered the roads and lay so deep that it made the way impassable, especially for the feet of horses, and so prevented his coming to Jerusalem.<sup>d</sup> For this reason Tryphon set out from Adora, and reaching Coele-Syria,<sup>e</sup> hurriedly invaded Galaaditis, where he killed Jonathan<sup>f</sup> and ordered that he be buried, and then returned to Antioch. But Simon sent to the city of Basea  $^{g}$  and brought back the bones of his brother, which he buried in Modeei,<sup>h</sup> his birthplace, while all the people made great lamentation over him. And Simon also built for his father and brothers a very great monument of polished white marble, and raising it to a great and conspicuous height, made porticoes round it, and erected monolithic pillars, a wonderful thing to see.<sup>a</sup> In addition to these he built for his parents and his brothers seven pyramids, one for each, so made as to excite wonder by their size and beauty; and these have been preserved to this day. Such was the zeal which we know to have been shown by Simon in burying Jonathan and building monuments to his family. Now when Jonathan died as high priest, he had been ruler of the nation for four years.<sup>b</sup> These, then, were the circumstances of his death.

(7) And Simon, after being chosen high priest by simon the populace, in the first year of his high-priesthood heartes Judaea from liberated the people from servitude to the Mace-Seleucid donians, so that they no longer had to pay tribute "Mace." to them. This liberation and exemption from tribute xiii. 36. came to the Jews in the hundred and seventieth vear of the Syrian <sup>c</sup> kingdom, reckoned from the time when Seleucus, surnamed Nicator,<sup>d</sup> occupied Syria.<sup>e</sup> And so great was the respect of the people for Simon that in their contracts with one another, as well as died in 143/2 B.c. (cf. § 201 note b), and was officially recognized as high priest by Alexander Balas in 152 B.c. (cf. § 46 =1 Macc. x. 21), thus ruling 10 years. Either Josephus is careless here, as in Ant. xx., or there is a scribal error. Per. haps, as Reinach suggests, the  $\tau \dot{\epsilon} \sigma \sigma \sigma \rho \sigma s$  is an expansion of the numeral letter  $\delta'$ , which in turn was an abbreviation of an original  $\delta\epsilon\kappa a$  " ten."

<sup>a</sup> Conjectured for Ms. "in." <sup>b</sup> Cf. 1 Macc. xiii. 42, "Simon, the high priest and general (στρατηγού) and leader (ήγουμένου) of the Jews." Ethnarch" was the title given to later Hasmonaean rulers by the Romans, cf. Ant. xiv. 151, 191 et al. Variant "nations."

<sup>d</sup> Here, with 1 Macc. xiii. 42, ends Josephus' paraphrase (though not necessarily his use) of the apocryphal book, although it contains three and a half more chapters covering the rule of Simon. For this and the following periods Josephus relies on Hellenistic sources (chiefly Nicolas of Damascus), which he had earlier used for his account of the later Hasmonaean and Herodian periods in his Jewish 334

in public documents, they dated them "from a the first year of Simon, the benefactor and ethnarch of the Jews "b; for under his rule they prospered exceedingly and overcame the foes c that surrounded them.d For Simon subducd the city of Gazara e and Joppa and Jamneia, and also took the citadel at Jerusalem by siege, razing it to the ground that it might not serve his foes as a base to occupy and do mischief from it, as they were then doing.<sup>f</sup> Having done this, he thought it would be an excellent thing and to his advantage to level also the hill on which the citadel stood, in order that the temple might be higher than this. Accordingly, he called the people to an assembly and sought to persuade them to have this done, reminding them how they had suffered at the hands of the garrison and the Jewish renegades, and also warning them of what they would suffer if a foreign ruler should again occupy their realm, and a garrison should be placed therein. With these words he persuaded the people,

War (cf. § 225 note c). Various explanations have been given of Josephus' abandonment of 1 Macc. at this point; some scholars hold that the last three and a half chapters of 1 Macc. were a late addition, not known to Josephus (cf. the discussions in Thackeray, Josephus, p. 86 and Ricciotti, Introduzione, pp. 140-143). It is more likely that Josephus found it more convenient to use only his Hellenistic sources for Simon's period than to continue excerpting from them to fill ont the narrative of 1 Macc.

<sup>a</sup> Josephus' statements here and in B.J. i. 50 that Simon levelled the (S.E.) hill, on which the citadel (Akra) stood, are in contradiction to 1 Mace, xiv, 37, which says that Simon fortified the citadel. More correct is Josephus' statement in B.J. v. 139 that the Hasmonacans (i.e. one of Simon's successors—probably John Hyreanus) levelled the citadel hill, cf. Dr. Thackeray's note on the last passage. 336 since he was recommending what was to their advantage. And so they all set to and began to level the hill, and without stopping work night or day, after three whole years brought it down to the ground and the surface of the plain. And thereafter the temple stood high above everything else, once the eitadel and the hill on which it stood had been demolished. Such was the nature of the things accomplished in the time of Simon.<sup>a</sup>

Neither Eusebes nor Soter (the 338 nature; for while he was a private person he had courted the multitude and assumed a character of mildness, thus leading them on to do as he wished, but once he had obtained the royal power, he threw off all pretence and became the Tryphon he really was. Now by this course he strengthened his foes, for the army, which hated him, revolted and went over to Cleopatra,<sup>a</sup> the wife of Demetrius, who with her children was at that time shut up in Seleucia. And as Demetrius' brother Antiochus, surnamed Soter,<sup>b</sup> was wandering about, for at Tryphon's instance no city admitted him, Cleopatra sent to him, inviting him to come and marry her and take the throne.<sup>c</sup> The reason why she invited Antiochus on these terms was partly that her friends persuaded her to do so, and partly that she feared that some of the people of Seleucia might deliver up the city to Tryphon.

(2) Antiochus, therefore, came to Seleucia, and as Demetrius his strength increased daily, he set out to make war II's brother Antiochus on Tryphon; and having defeated him in battle, he sidetes drove him out of Upper Syria into Phoenicia, where alliance he pursued him, and when he took refuge in Dora, with Simon. a fortress difficult to take, besieged him there. soldiers who were besieging Dora with great sums of money and provisions, which he sent to Antiochus, so that for a short while he was considered one of his elosest friends.<sup>a</sup> As for Tryphon, he fled from Dora to Apamea, and on being besieged and eaptured there, was put to death, after reigning three years.<sup>b</sup>

(3) <sup>c</sup> Antiochus, however, through eovetousness and Antiochus dishonesty forgot the services which Simon had Sidetes rendered him in his necessity, and giving a force of against the soldiers to Cendebaeus, one of his Friends, sent him Jews. off to plunder Judaea and seize Simon. But Simon heard of Antiochus' lawless conduct, and though he was now an old man, nevertheless was aroused by the unjust treatment he had received from Antiochus, and being filled with a spirit stronger than his years, took command in the war like a young man.<sup>d</sup> And so he sent his sons e on ahead f with the soldiers who were the best fighters, while he himself advanced g

Ant. and B.J. Josephus in writing this portion of Ant. made use of the same sources (chiefly Nicolas of Damascus and Strabo) which he had before him earlier in writing B.J. i. and ii., but with variations in wording, some corrections and considerable additions. Moreover, as Dr. Thackeray has succinctly formulated the relation between the parallel accounts (in an unpublished note), " Aut. besides reverting to and making fuller use of the original sources, has had B.J. before him (sic) and aimed at avoiding repetition. The greater freedom with which B.J. had treated the source left Aut, at liberty to adhere more closely to its language," See further the Appendix on Josephus' sources, in the last volume of this translation.

<sup>d</sup> According to 1 Mace, xvi. 3 Simon took no part in the war and gave the command to his sons; but the wording of vss. 4-7 might easily lead one to suppose that the pronominal subject is Simon (Luc. supplies the name Joannes = John).

respects he was superior to him, in one thing he was at a disadvantage, that is, in feeling pity for his mother and brothers. For Ptolemy had brought them up on to the wall and maltreated them in the sight of all, threatening to hurl them down headlong if Hyrcanus did not give up the siege. And so, reflecting that the more he slackened his efforts to capture the place, the greater was the kindness he would show those dearest to him by sparing them suffering, Hyrcanus relaxed his eagerness. His mother, however, stretched out her hands, beseeching him not to weaken on her account, but to give way to his anger so much the more, and make every effort to take the place and get his foe into his power and avenge those dearest to him. For, she said, it would be pleasant for her to die in torment if the enemy,<sup>a</sup> who was doing these things to them, paid the penalty for his crimes against them. Now when his mother said these things. Hyrcanus was seized with a powerful desire to capture the fortress, but when he saw her being beaten and torn apart, he became unnerved and was overcome with compassion at the way in which his mother was being treated. But while the siege was being protracted in this manner, there came round the year in which the Jews are wont to remain inactive, for they observe this custom every seventh year, just as on the seventh day.<sup>b</sup> And Ptolemy, being relieved from the war for this reason, killed the brothers and mother of Hyrcanus, and

<sup>c</sup> The several dates here given do not synchronize. The fourth year of Antiochus' reign and the first of Hyreanus' was 135/4 B.c., while the 162nd Olympiad began in July 132 B.c. Although Porphyry (ap. Eusebius, Chron. ed. Schoene i. 255) also places Antiochus' siege of Jerusalem 346 after doing so, fled to Zenon, surnamed Cotylas, who was ruler a of the city of Philadelphia.b

(2) But Antiochus, being resentful of the injuries Antiochus he had received from Simon, invaded Judaea in the Sidetes invades fourth year of his reign and the first of Hyrcanus' Judaea. rule, in the hundred and sixty-second Olympiad.<sup>c</sup> And after rayaging the country, he shut Hyrcanus up in the city itself, which he surrounded with seven camps, but at first he accomplished nothing whatever because of the strength of the walls and the valour of the besieged, and also, indeed, because of the lack of water, although of this they were relieved by a great downpour of rain which came with the setting of the Pleiades. Thereupon on the north side of the wall, where the ground happened to be level, he erected a hundred towers, each three stories high, on which he mounted companies of soldiers. And every day he made an attack, and by cutting a deep double<sup>d</sup> ditch of great width, shut the inhabitants up within the walls. They, however, contrived to make frequent sallies against the enemy, and whenever they took them off their guard, inflieted much in the (third year of the) 162nd Olympiad, Schürer, i. 259 note 5, suspects the text of Eusebius; he partially reconciles the contradictions by suggesting that the war lasted from 134 to 132 B.C. That the siege lasted more than a year is indicated, as Schürer points ont, by the fact that near its beginning occurred the November rains (δυομένης πλειάδος, § 237) and that it was still going on the following October, when the festival of Tabernacles came round (§ 241). Moreover, if Josephus' source here used the so-called Macedonian Olympiad era which preceded the Attic by a year (according to Bickermann, cf. Aut. xii. 321 note d), the discrepancy becomes still less. No dates or details of the siege are given in the parallel, B.J. i. 61.

damage on them, and if the enemy perceived them, they easily retired. When, however, Hyrcanus observed that his great numbers were a disadvantage because of the rapid consumption of provisions by them, and that the work which was being accomplished in no way corresponded to the number of hands, he separated from the rest those who were useless, and drove them out, and retained only those who were in the prime of life and able to fight.<sup>a</sup> But Antiochus, on his side, prevented those who had been rejected from going out, and so, wandering about the walls between the lines, they were the first to be exhausted by their cruel sufferings and were on the point of perishing miserably. Just then, however, the festival of Tabernacles came round, and those within the city took pity on them and admitted them again. (3) Now Hyrcanus, being favourably impressed by Hyrcanus his affability, and learning of his reverence for the comes to terms with Deity, sent envoys to him with the request that he Antiochus restore to the Jews their native form of government. Sidetes. And Antiochus did not thrust his letter aside, nor did he take note of those who urged him to extirpate this nation because of the separateness of their way of life,<sup>c</sup> but, as he believed that in all things they had acted with piety, he replied to the envoys that the besieged should hand over their arms, pay tribute to him for Joppa and the other cities bordering on Judaea, and receive a garrison, and that on these terms they might be freed of the war. But the Jews, while they were ready to accept the other terms, would not agree to the garrison, since they did not come into contact with other peoples because of their separateness. In place of the garrison, however, έθνων ακοινωνήτους είναι της πρός άλλο έθνος έπιμιξίας καί πολεμίους υπολαμβάνειν πάντας, "they alone of all nations do not take part in social intercourse with other nations, and regard them all as enemies." The charge of duitia "separateness" appears elsewhere in pagan writers on Judaism, cf. the summary in Juster i. 46. Classic expression is given to this accusation by Haman (Est. iii. 8), cf. Ant. xi. 212, where Josephus supplies the adjective aµiktor " unfriendly " or " clannish." Incidentally, much is to be said for the view of Derenbourg, pp. 76-78, that dµifía is the translation (better, the equivalent) of Heb. perišuth, i.e. separatism from paganism, whence the name Pharisecs "separatists," applied to this group by their priestly and militarist opponents (the Sadducees); see further the Appendix on the Jewish sects in the last volume of this translation.

<sup>b</sup> Some historians take this to mean that only the battlements of the walls ( $\sigma\tau\epsilon\phi d\nu\eta\nu$ =" crown ") were destroyed. But, as Schürer points out, the other ancient sources speak of the destruction of the walls themselves (later rebuilt by Hyrcanus, cf. 1 Macc. xvi. 23); cf. Diodorus xxxiv. 1 and Porphyry (ap. Ensebius, Chron. ed. Schoene i. 255). 352

And when Antiochus undertook an expedi- II. tion against the Parthians, Hyrcanus set out with him.<sup>f</sup> On this we have the testimony of Nicolas of Damascus, who writes as follows. " After defeating Indates, the Parthian general, and setting up a trophy at the Lycus river,<sup>g</sup> Antiochus remained there two days at the request of the Jew Hyrcanus because of a festival of his nation on which it was not customary for the Jews to march out." <sup>d</sup> According to Ant. vii. 393 Hyrcanus gave part of this money to Antiochus to raise the siege. It was probably on this occasion that Hyrcanus appealed for help to Rome, cf. Ant. xiii. 260-265, xiv. 247-255.

<sup>a</sup> This passage, as Reinach notes, may have a bearing on the relations of Hyrcanus with the Pharisees and Sadducees (see below, §§ 288 ff.), if we assume that Pentecost fell on the first day of the week (Sunday) not by accident, as it might in the Pharisaic system of the calendar, but by intention, as in the Sadducaean system, based on a literal interpretation of Leviticus xxiii. 11 ff. 354

Later,<sup>c</sup> in a battle with Demetrius' son Antiochus, surnamed Grypus,<sup>d</sup> he was defeated and killed.

(x. 1) But when Antiochus took over the royal Antiochus power in Syria, he was wary of marching upon Judaea, Grypus for he heard that his brother on his mother's side— king, and is he too was called Antiochus <sup>e</sup>—was collecting a force Antiochus against him from Cyzicus.<sup>f</sup> And so he decided to Cyzicenus. remain in his own land and prepare himself to meet the incursion of his brother, who was surnamed Cyzicenus because he had been brought up in the city of Cyzicus, being the son of Antiochus, surnamed Soter,<sup>g</sup> who had met death among the Parthians ; this Antiochus (Soter) was a brother of Grypus' father Demetrius, for it so happened that Cleopatra had been married to the two brothers, as we have narrated elsewhere.<sup>h</sup> And Antiochus Cyzicenus came into Syria and waged continuous war upon his brother

Grypus ruled alone; from 113 to 111 B.c. he was kept out of Syria by Cyzicenus; in 111 B.c. he returned and took the greater part of the country from Cyzicenus, who had to be content with ruling Coele-Syria (Phoenicia and Palestine). <sup>a</sup> Marisa, an Idumaean city, had recently been captured by Hyrcanus, cf. § 257; but it is difficult, as Reinach remarks, to see how the Samaritans could have got to a city in Idumaea. I suggest, therefore, that "Marisa" is a textual error for "Samaria," meaning that part of Samaria the territory, not the city, presumably colonized by Hyrcanus after he took Shechem and other Samaritan cities, cf. § 255. 366 done to the people of Marisa, who were colonists and allies of the Jews.<sup>a</sup> Accordingly he made a trench round the city on all sides, and a double wall for a distance of some eighty stades,<sup>b</sup> and placed his sons Antigonus and Aristobulus in charge. And as they pressed the siege, the Samaritans were finally brought by famine to such a state of need <sup>c</sup> that they were forced to take for food even things that are not used for that purpose, and at the same time to call upon Antiochus Cyzicenus for help.d He readily came to their assistance, but he was defeated by Aristobulus and was pursued by the brothers as far as Scythopolis, where he made his escape. The brothers then returned to Samaria and once more shut up the Samaritans within the wall,<sup>e</sup> so that a second time they had to call upon this same Antiochus for aid; he thereupon applied to Ptolemy Lathyrus f for six thousand men, which the latter sent to him against the wish of his mother,<sup>g</sup> who all but drove him from the kingdom when she heard of it; and with these Egyptians Antiochus at first invaded and ravaged Hyrcanus' territory like a brigand, for he dared not meet him in battle face to face-his force was not adequate for that—, but supposed that by damaging

A similar confusion occurs in the MSS. of 1 Mace. v. 66, cf. Ant. xii. 353 note h.  $^{b}$  C. 9 miles.

<sup>d</sup> The parallel in B.J. i. 65 has "Antiochus Aspendius," meaning Antiochus VIII Grypus; if that is correct, the siege must have taken place before 113 n.c.,  $cf. \S 272$  note a. But, as Schürer remarks, i. 268 n. 22, the appeal of Antiochus to Ptolemy Lathyrus favours a later date, shortly before 107 n.c.

As for Epicrates, out of greed for money he openly betrayed Scythopolis and other places near it to the Jews,<sup>b</sup> but could not bring the siege of Samaria to an end. And so Hyrcanus captured the city after besieging it for a year, but not being content with that alone, he effaced it entirely and left it to be swept away by the mountain-torrents,<sup>c</sup> for he dug beneath it until it fell into the beds of the torrents, and so removed all signs of its ever having been a city.<sup>d</sup> Now about the high priest Hyrcanus an extraordinary story e is told how the Deity communicated with him, for they say that on the very day on which his sons fought with Cyzicenus, Hyrcanus, who was alone in the temple, burning incense as high priest,<sup>f</sup> heard a voice saying that his sons had just defeated occupied the country between Scythopolis (mod. Beisan) and Mount Carmel.

Lev. xvi. 12 ff.; if that is so, there is a chronological discrepancy between this story and the notice in Megillath Ta'anith (cf. above, note d). The rabbinic parallels to Josephus' account do not indicate when Hyrcanus received the revelation.

Antiochus. And on coming out of the temple he revealed this to the entire multitude, and so it actually happened. This, then, was how the affairs of Hyreanus were going.

(4) At this time not only were the Jews in Jeru-salem and in the country (of Judaea) in a flourishing favourable condition, but also those who lived in Alexandria and position of the Jews in in Egypt and Cyprus. For Queen Cleopatra, who was Egypt under at war with her son Ptolemy, surnamed Lathyrus, ap- Cleopatra. pointed as her generals Chelkias<sup>b</sup> and Ananias,<sup>c</sup> sons of the Onias who had built the temple in the nome of Heliopolis, which was similar to the one at Jerusalem, as we have related before.<sup>d</sup> And having entrusted her army to them, Cleopatra did nothing without their approval, as Strabo of Cappadoeia also testifies, when he writes as follows. "For the majority, both those who came back from exile and those who were later sent to Cyprus by Cleopatra, immediately went over to Ptolemy. And only the Jews of the district named for Onias remained faithful to her, because their fellow-citizens<sup>e</sup> Chelkias and Ananias were held in special favour by the queen." <sup>a</sup> The following story of Hyrcanus' break with the Pharisees, §§ 288-298, has a parallel in the Bab. Talmud, Qiddušin 66a, for which see Derenbourg, pp. 79-81; there the Hasmonaean ruler is called Yannai (=Alexander Jannaeus) 372

(5) <sup>a</sup> As for Hyreanus, the envy of the Jews was The aroused against him by his own successes and those Pharisees of his sons b; particularly hostile to him were the Hyrcanus Pharisees, who are one of the Jewish schools, as we to give up have related above.<sup>c</sup> And so great is their influence priesthood. with the masses that even when they speak against a king or high priest,<sup>d</sup> they immediately gain credence. Hyrcanus too was a diseiple of theirs, and was greatly loved by them. And once he invited them to a feast and entertained them hospitably, and when he saw that they were having a very good time, he began by saying that they knew he wished to be righteous and in everything he did tried to please God and them-for the Pharisees profess such beliefs : at the same time he begged them, if they observed him doing anything wrong or straying from the right path, to lead him back to it and correct him. But they testified to his being altogether virtuous, and he was delighted with their praise. However, one of the guests, named Eleazar,<sup>e</sup> who had an evil nature and took pleasure in dissension, said, "Since you have asked to be told the truth, if you wish to be righteous, give up the high-priesthood and be content with governing the people." And when Hyrcanus

<sup>d</sup> As Reinach notes, the distinction here made between the king and the high priest indicates Josephus' use of a source of Herod's time, presumably Nicolas of Damascus. To this I may add the observation that the style of most of the passages on the Jewish sects suggests the hand of Nicolas.

(6) Then a certain Jonathan,<sup>b</sup> one of Hyreanus' Hyreanus elose friends, belonging to the school of Sadducees, forsakes the Pharisees who hold opinions opposed to those of the Pharisees, for the said that it had been with the general approval of Sadducees. all the Pharisees that Eleazar had made his slanderous statement ; and this, he added, would be clear to Hyrcanus if he inquired of them what punishment Eleazar deserved for what he had said. And so Hyrcanus asked the Pharisees what penalty they thought he deserved-for, he said, he would be convinced that <sup>c</sup> the slanderous statement had not been made with their approval if they fixed a penalty commensurate with the crime-, and they replied that Eleazar deserved stripes and chains; for they did not think it right to sentence a man to death for calumny, and anyway the Pharisees are naturally lenient in the matter of punishments. At this Hyrcanus became very angry and began to believe that the fellow had slandered him with their approval. And Jonathan in particular inflamed his anger, and so worked upon him that he brought him to join the Sadducaean party and desert the Pharisces, and to abrogate the regulations d which they had established

Out of this, of course, grew the hatred of the masses for him and his sons, but of this we shall speak hereafter.<sup>a</sup> For the present I wish merely to explain that the Pharisees had passed on to the people certain regulations handed down by former generations and not recorded in the Laws of Moses, for which reason they are rejected by the Sadducaean group, who hold that only those regulations should be considered valid which were written down (in Scripture), and that those which had been handed down by former generations <sup>b</sup> need not be observed. <sup>a</sup> Thus he possessed the attributes of the ideal ruler, according to Stoic belief and Philo; for similar passages in Hellenistic literature cf. P. Wendland, Die hellenistischerömische Kultur, and recent works on Philo, such as those by Bréhier and Goodenough. It should be noted that Josephus (or his source) does not use "prophecy" in the 378

the gift of prophecy a; for the Deity was with him and enabled him to foresee and foretell the future ; so, for example, he foretold of his two elder sons that they would not remain masters of the state. And the story of their downfall is worth relating, to show how far they were from having <sup>b</sup> their father's good fortune.

(xi. 1) After their father's death the eldest son Aristobulus Aristobulus saw fit to transform the government into l becomes a kingdom, which he judged the best form, and he was the title of the first to put a diadem on his head,<sup>c</sup> four hundred king. and eighty-one years and three.months after the time when the people were released from the Babylonian captivity and returned to their own country.<sup>d</sup> Now of his brothers he loved only Antigonus, who was next in age, and considered him worthy of a position like his own, while he kept his other brothers in chains. He also imprisoned his mother, who had disputed the royal power with him-for Hyreanus had left her mistress of the realm-, and carried his eruelty so far that he eaused her to die of starvation in prison. And to the death of his mother he added that of biblical sense, cf. Ant. xii. 318 note e, and Moore, Judaism i. 421.

<sup>b</sup> The variant "how far they surpassed " is obviously corrupt; cf. also the parallel in B.J. i. 69, ἀπέκλιναν.

<sup>c</sup> Strabo, xvi. 2. 40, attributes this innovation to Aristobulus' successor, Alexander Jannacus. The title "king" (melek) does not appear on the Heb. coins of Aristobulus, cf. works eited in Appendix L. The statement below that Hyrcanus left his wife mistress of the realm gives plausibility to Ricciotti's suggestion that stories about Alexander Jannaeus have become confused with those about Aristobulus.

<sup>a</sup> B.J. i. 70 gives 471 years. Both numbers are too large, since the return from Babylon was in 537 u.c.; cf. Dr. Thackeray's note to the parallel in B,J.

his brother Antigonus, whom he seemed especially to love and had made his associate in the kingdom, for he was alienated from him by calumnies which at first he did not believe, disregarding the things that were said, partly because he loved Antigonus and partly because he believed that he was being calumniated out of envy. But on one occasion when Aristobulus Antigonus had returned from a campaign with glory, a becomes of as the season of the festival during which tabernacles his brother are erected to God was at hand, it chanced that Antigonus. Aristobulus fell ill, and Antigonus, arrayed in great splendour and with his heavy-armed soldiers about him, went up to the temple to celebrate the festival and to pray earnestly for his brother's recovery; thereupon the unscrupulous men who were bent on disrupting the harmonious relation between them, found in Antigonus' ambitious display and in the successes he had achieved, a pretext to go to the king and maliciously exaggerate the pomp of his appearanee at the festival, saying that everything that had been done was out of keeping with the behaviour of a private person and that his actions rather had the indications of one who imagined himself a king, and that he had come with a strong body of troops with the intention of killing Aristobulus, reasoning that it would be absurd for him to believe that he had won any great distinction in having a share in high office when he might just as well be king himself.

brother and at the same time thinking of his own safety, stationed his bodyguards at intervals in a dark underground passage-for he was lying ill in the castle afterwards called Antonia a-and gave orders that none of them should touch Antigonus if he were unarmed, but should kill him if he came to the king with his armour on. Moreover he himself sent to Antigonus, asking him to come unarmed. But the queen and the men who were plotting with her against Antigonus persuaded the messenger to say the opposite, namely that his brother had heard that he had equipped himself with arms and military gear,<sup>b</sup> and invited him to come to him armed, in order that he might see his equipment. Accordingly, Antigonus, who had no suspicion of foul play and was confident of his brother's friendly feeling towards him, came to Aristobulus just as he was, in full armour, to show him his arms. But when he reached Straton's Tower, as it is called, just where the very dark passage was, the bodyguards killed him. Now his death clearly proves that there is nothing more powerful than envy and calumny, nor anything that more easily disrupts friendship and the ties of nature than these influences. telling the future, that it would be well for him to die as one who had spoken falsely, since Antigonus was still alive, although he had foretold that he would die at the place called Straton's Tower, and now he saw him alive a; for the place where he had foretold that Antigonus would be murdered was some six hundred stades <sup>b</sup> from where he now was, and the greater part of the day had already passed, so that his prophecy was unfortunately likely to prove false. But as he was saying this and lamenting, the news came that Antigonus had been killed in the underground passage, which was also called Straton's Tower-by the same name, that is, as Caesarea on the sea-eoast.<sup>c</sup> It was this fact, therefore, that had confused the prophet.

And onee one of the servants who waited on him was carrying this blood away and slipped and spilled it-by divine providence, I believe-on the very spot where the stains made by the blood of the murdered Antigonus were still to be seen. Thereupon a cry went up from those who saw this that the servant had spilled the blood there deliberately, and when Aristobulus heard it, he asked what the reason for it was, and as they did not tell him, he became still more determined to find out, for in such cases men naturally suspect the worst in what is covered by silence. But when, under his threats and the constraint of fear, they told him the truth, he was stricken in mind by his consciousness of guilt, and weeping freely, with deep groans exclaimed, "I was not destined, I see, to escape the notice of God in committing such impious and unholy crimes, but swift punishment has overtaken me for the murder of my kin. How long, then, O most shameless body, will you keep within you the life that is forfeit to the spirits of my brother and mother? Why, instead of giving this up to them at one stroke, do I merely offer my blood drop by drop as a libation to those who have been so foully murdered?" a And scarcely had he spoken these words when he died; in his reign of one year,  $^{b}$  with the title of Philhellene,<sup>c</sup> he conferred many benefits on his country, for he made war on the Ituraeans<sup>d</sup> and acquired a good part of their territory for Judaea and compelled the inhabitants, if they wished to remain in their country, to be circumcised and to live in accordance with the laws of the Jews. He had a kindly nature, and was wholly given to modesty, as Strabo also testifies on the authority of Timagenes,<sup>e</sup> writing as follows. " This man was a kindly person and very serviceable to the Jews, for he acquired additional territory for them, and brought over to them a portion of the Ituraean nation, whom he joined to them by the bond of circumcision."

like a Philhellene " can hardly be accepted in preference to the translation given above, as Meyer rightly insists, Ursprung ii. 277 n. 1. The detail about Aristobulus' title and the following section to  $\S$  320 have no parallels in B,J.

<sup>d</sup> They lived in the Lebanon region with the Phoenician hinterland on the W., and the country S. of Damascus on the E.; cf. Strabo 753-756. Aristobulus' conquests must have extended to northern Galilee, cf. B.J. i. 76 and Schürer i. 276.

Her Heb. name was probably Štlamsiyôn (cf.  $\Sigma a \lambda a \mu \mu \omega , Ant. xviii. 170)$ , of which "Salome" might be a diminutive, cf. Derenbourg, p. 102, n. 2. "Salina" is probably a hellenized form of her Heb. name, perhaps influenced by that of her contemporary, Selene (cf. § 420). That Josephus considered Aristobulus' widow to be identical with Alexander Jannaeus' wife Alexandra is clear from the context and chronology, although he does not make this explicit by saying that Salina married Jannaeus. Madden, p. 71, is one of the few scholars who distinguish between the 388

Now the reason for this hatred is said to have been as follows. Of all his sons Hyreanus loved best the two elder ones, Antigonus and Aristobulus; and onee when God appeared to him in his sleep, he asked Him which of his sons was destined to be his successor. And when God showed him the features e of Alexander, he was grieved that this one should be the heir of all his possessions, and so he let him be brought up in Galilee from his birth.<sup>f</sup> God, however, did not deceive Hyrcanus. <sup>c</sup> The Gr. Iannaios is a hellenization of Heb. Yannai, cf. § 288 note a.

<sup>d</sup> Or perhaps  $\mu\epsilon\tau\rho\iota\delta\tau\eta s$  here means, as sometimes in Byzantine Gr., "knowing his place," indicating that Alexandra expected to dominate her second husband. If so, she must have been disappointed, as the sequel shows. The following sections, to § 356 (except for brief phrases in §§ 323 and 337) have no parallels in B.J.

<sup>e</sup> Chamonard translates  $\chi a \rho a \kappa \tau \hat{\eta} \rho a s$  as "letters of the name," and Reinach notes that the meaning of the Gr. is very doubtful. It seems clear to me.

<sup>7</sup> This does not necessarily mean that Galilee was wholly judaized in Hyrcanus' time, cf. Schürer i. 276 n. 10.

For Cleopatra would not permit Ptolemy to provide himself with an army from the neighbouring cities but would come against them with a great force, since she was eager to drive her son out of Cyprus too. Moreover, if Ptolemy were disappointed in his expectations, he could again find a refuge in Cyprus, whereas they themselves would be in the greatest danger. Now though Ptolemy on the way over learned of the change of mind of the people of Ptolemais, he nevertheless sailed on, and landing at Sycamina,<sup>a</sup> as it is called, there disembarked his force. The army with him, both foot and horse, numbered some thirty thousand in all, and these he led to the neighbourhood of Ptolemais and encamped there : but as they would neither admit his envoys nor listen to his proposals he was in great anxiety.

(4) However when Žoilus and the people of Gaza Alexander came to him with the request that he would aid them, Jannaeus as their territory was being ravaged by the Jews to trick under Alexander, Alexander in fear of Ptolemy Lathyrus. raised the siege and led his army home again, and thereafter resorted to eunning; for while secretly sending for Cleopatra to attack Ptolemy, he openly proposed a friendly alliance to him, thus acting a part. He also promised to give him four hundred talents of silver, asking him in return to put the local ruler Zoilus out of the way and to assign his territory to the Jews. And so Ptolemy at that time gladly formed a friendship with Alexander, and laid hands b on Zoilus. But later, when he heard that Alexander had secretly sent <sup>c</sup> to his mother Cleopatra, he broke the sworn agreements he had made with him, and attacked Ptolemais, and when it refused to admit him, besieged it. And at first both sides equally performed deeds of prowess and daring, and great was the slaughter in both armies; but as Alexander's men were getting the upper hand, Philostephanus divided his force and skilfully came to the relief of those who were giving ground. And as no one came to aid that part of the Jewish force which was falling back, it had to flee; and not even those near them helped them, but joined in their flight. Ptolemy's men, however, did just the opposite, for they followed the Jews and killed them, until finally, when they were completely routed, they tracked them down to slaughter them until their swords became blunted with killing, and their hands were utterly tired. Apollodotus, the general of the Gazaeans, fell upon the camp of the Jews by night with two thousand mercenaries and ten thousand slaves,<sup>a</sup> and so long as night lasted, the Gazaeans were victorious, for they made the enemy believe<sup>b</sup> that it was Ptolemy who had attacked them; but when day came, and this belief proved false, the Jews, on learning the true state of things, reformed their ranks and attacked the Gazaeans and slew about a thousand <sup>c</sup> of them. The Gazaeans, however, held their ground and did not yield either through lack of supplies or because of the number of their slain-for they were ready to suffer any fate rather than fall into the hands of the enemy—, and their courage d was heightened by the expectation that Aretas, the king of the Arabs, would come to their assistance.<sup>e</sup> But first, as it happened, Apollodotus was put to death, for his brother Lysimachus, who was envious of his prestige with the people of the city, killed him; he then united<sup>f</sup> the army and delivered the city to Alexander. On first entering, Alexander acted peacefully, but subsequently he loosed his force on the Gazaeans and let his men avenge themselves on them. And so they went off, some in one direction and others in another, killing the Gazaeans. These, however, were by no means meanspirited, but on the contrary defended themselves

<sup>a</sup> One gets the impression from § 358 that the siege of Gaza began soon after Ptolemy Lathyrus and Cleopatra III withdrew from Palestine, c. 102 в.с. But in § 365 Josephus synchronizes the end of the siege with the murder of Antiochus Grypus which took place in 96 в.с. However the phrase "about this same time" may be a vague indication 408 against the Jews with whatever weapons came to hand and slew as many of them as they themselves had lost. And some of them, being left alone, set fire to their houses in order that nothing might remain in them for the enemy to take out as spoil. Others with their own hands made away with their children and wives, this being the means by which they were compelled to deliver them from slavery to their foes. Of the councilmen there were five hundred in all who took refuge in the temple of Apollo-for the attack had come just when they were sitting in council-, but Alexander slew them there, and having pulled the city down upon them, returned to Jerusalem after spending a year on the siege.<sup>a</sup>

(4) About this same time Antiochus, surnamed The Grypus, met death as the victim of a plot formed by fratricidal wars of the Heracleon ; he was forty-five years of age and reigned Seleucids. twenty-nine.<sup>b</sup> And his son Seleucus,<sup>c</sup> on succeeding to his throne, waged war with his father's brother, who was surnamed Cyzicenus, and after defeating him, captured and killed him.<sup>d</sup> But not long afterward Antiochus,<sup>e</sup> the son of Cyzicenus, who<sup>f</sup> was called Eusebes (the Pious), came to Aradus,<sup>g</sup> and having

of time, as elsewhere in Josephus. We may therefore suppose that Gaza was taken nearer 100 B.c. than 96 B.c.

This would make his reign begin 125/4 B.C., the usual reckoning, cf. Schürer i. 176. But Antiochus Grypus began to rule Syria de facto c. 122 B.C., cf. § 272 note a.

(5) <sup>c</sup> As for Alexander, his own people revolted Alexander against him-for the nation was aroused against him Jannaeus —at the celebration of the festival, d and as he stood his Jewish beside the altar and was about to sacrifice, they adversaries. pelted him with citrons, it being a custom among the Jews that at the festival of Tabernaeles everyone holds wands made of palm branches and citronsthese we have described elsewhere "; and they added insult to injury by saying that he was descended from captives and was unfit to hold office f and to sacrifice; and being enraged at this, he killed some six thousand of them, and also placed a wooden barrier about the altar and the temple as far as the coping (of the court) which the priests alone were permitted to enter, and by this means blocked the people's way to him.<sup>g</sup> He also maintained foreign troops of Pisidians and Cilicians, for he could not use Syrians, being at war with them. And after subduing the Arabs of Moab and Galaaditis, whom he forced to pay tribute, he demolished Amathūs, as Theodorus did not venture to meet him in the field.<sup>h</sup> details of §§ 372-373, however, are not found in B.J. For rabbinic parallels to this story and other traditions concerning Alexander Jannaeus see Derenbourg, pp. 96-101.

made the same appeal to the Jews who were with Demetrius. The most powerful of them, however, he shut up and besieged in the city of Bethoma,<sup>c</sup> and after taking the eity and getting them into his power, he brought them back to Jerusalem; and there he did a thing that was as cruel as could be : while he feasted with his concubines in a conspicuous place, he ordered some eight hundred of the Jews to be crucified, and slaughtered their children and wives before the eyes of the still living wretches. This was the revenge he took for the injuries he had suffered ; but the penalty he exacted was inhuman for all that, even though he had, as was natural, gone through very great hardships in the wars he had fought against them, and had finally found himself in danger d of losing both his life and his throne, for they were not Milesius shut the gates on him and kept Damascus safe for Antiochus. And when Antiochus heard of Philip's experience, he returned from Arabia and at once took the field, marching on Judaca<sup>a</sup> with eight thousand heavy-armed soldiers and eight hundred horse. Thereupon<sup>b</sup> Alexander, who feared an invasion by him, dug a deep trench, beginning at Chabarsaba, which is now called Antipatris,<sup>c</sup> as far as the sea at Joppa, where alone it was possible to attack; and he erected a wall and set up wooden towers and firing-platforms d for a distance of a hundred and fifty stades,<sup>e</sup> and then awaited Antiochus's attack. But Antiochus burned all these constructions and so made his army pass through this way to Arabia.<sup>f</sup> At first the Arab king retreated but afterward suddenly appeared with ten thousand horse, and though Antiochus on meeting them fought valiantly, he was killed just as he was gaining the victory and was coming to the aid of part of his army that was in difficulties.<sup>g</sup> And when Antiochus fell, his army fled to the village of Kana,<sup>h</sup> where the greatest part of it perished of hunger.

And when the queen saw that he was on the point of death and no longer held b to any hope of recovery, she wept and beat her breast, lamenting the bereavement that was about to befall her and her children, and said to him, "To whom are you thus leaving me and your children, who are in need of help from others, especially when you know how hostile the nation feels toward you!" Thereupon he advised her to follow his suggestions for keeping the throne secure for herself and her children and to conceal his death from the soldiers until she had captured the fortress. And then, he said, on her return to Jerusalem as from a splendid victory, she should vield a certain amount of power to the Pharisees, for if they praised her in return for this sign of regard, they would dispose the nation favourably toward her.<sup>c</sup> These men, he assured her, had so much influence with their fellow-Jews that they could injure those whom they hated and help those to whom they were friendly; for they had the complete confidence of the masses when they spoke harshly of any person, even when they did so out of envy; and he himself, he added, had come into conflict with the nation because these men had been badly treated by him. power to Alexandra. Of these sons the one, Hyrcanus, was incompetent to govern and in addition much preferred a quiet life, while the younger, Aristobulus, was a man of action a and high spirit. As for the queen herself, she was loved by the masses because she was thought to disapprove of the crimes committed by her husband.

(2) Alexandra then appointed Hyrcanus as high The power priest because of his greater age but more especially of the because of his lack of energy<sup>a</sup>; and she permitted the under Pharisees to do as they liked in all matters, and also Alexandra. commanded the people to obey them ; and whatever regulations, introduced by the Pharisees in accordance with the tradition of their fathers, had been abolished by her father-in-law Hyrcanus, these she again restored.<sup>b</sup> And so, while she had the title of sovereign, the Pharisees had the power. For example, they recalled exiles, and freed prisoners, and, in a word, in no way differed from absolute rulers. Nevertheless the queen took thought for the welfare of the kingdom and recruited a large force of mercenaries and also made her own force twice as large, with the result that she struck terror into the local rulers round her and received hostages from them. And throughout the entire country there was quiet except for the Pharisees; for they worked upon the feelings of the queen and tried to persuade her to kill those who had urged Alexander to put the eight hundred to death.<sup>c</sup> Later they themselves cut down d The leading one of them, named Diogenes, and his death was Jews followed by that of one after the other, until the against the leading citizens came to the palace, Aristobulus among them-for he was obviously resentful of what was taking place, and let it be plainly seen that if only he should get the opportunity, he would not leave his mother any power at all-, and they reminded her of all that they had achieved in the face of danger, whereby they had shown their unwavering a lovalty to their master b and had therefore been judged worthy by him of the greatest honours. And they begged her not to crush their hopes completely,<sup>c</sup> for, they said, after escaping the dangers of war, they were now being slaughtered at home like cattle by their foes, and there was no one to avenge them. They also said <sup>d</sup> that if their adversaries were to be contented with those already slain, they would bear with equanimity what had taken place, out of genuine devotion to their masters ; but if, on the other hand, these men were to continue in the same course, let them, they begged, at least be given their freedom; for they would never bring themselves to seek any means of safety but what should come from her, and would welcome death in her palace so long as they might not have disloyalty on their conscience.<sup>e</sup> It would be disgraceful both for them and for her who ruled as queen, they added, if, being abandoned by her, they should be given shelter by the enemies of her husband; for Aretas the Arab and the other princes would consider it of the utmost value to

But if this could not be, and she had determined to favour the Pharisees above all others, let her, as the next best thing, station each of them in one of the garrisons, for, if some evil genius were thus wroth with the house of Alexander, they at least would show themselves (loval) a even though living in humble circumstances.

(3) Speaking in this vein at great length, they Aristobulus called upon the shades of Alexander to take pity on II denounces those who had been killed and those who were in his mother danger, whereupon all the bystanders burst into ing the tears. And Aristobulus in particular made plain his Pharisees. sentiments by denouncing his mother bitterly. But still they themselves were to blame for their misfortunes, in allowing a woman to reign who madly desired it in her unreasonable love of power, and when her sons were in the prime of life. (4) About this time news came that Tigranes, king Alexandra of Armenia,<sup>b</sup> with an army of three hundred thousand<sup>c</sup> bribes men had invaded Syria and was coming against to leave Judaea.<sup>d</sup> This naturally frightened the queen and her <sup>Judaea</sup> in peace. people. And so they sent many valuable gifts and envoys to him as he was besieging Ptolemais. For Queen Selene, also called Cleopatra,<sup>e</sup> was then ruling over Syria and she induced the inhabitants to shut their gates against Tigranes. The envoys therefore met with him and asked him to grant favourable terms to the queen and her people. Thereupon he commended them for coming so great a distance to do homage to him, and gave them reason to hope for the best. But hardly had Ptolemais been captured when news came to Tigranes that Lucullus,<sup>f</sup> who was pursuing Mithridates,<sup>g</sup> had failed to catch him, as he had fied to the Iberians,<sup>h</sup> and had therefore ravaged

(5) b Some time after this the queen was stricken Alexandra by a serious illness, whereupon Aristobulus decided and the Pharisees to make an attempt to seize power, and slipped are alarmed away by night with one of his servants, and went by Aristo-bulus 11's to the fortresses where his father's friends had been preparastationed. For while he had long resented the seizing things his mother was doing, he was just then especi- power. ally fearful that on her death their whole family might come under the rule of the Pharisees, for he saw the ineapacity of his brother, who was destined to succeed to the throne. The only one informed of his deed was his wife, whom he had left in the city with their children.<sup>c</sup> And he first came to Agaba,<sup>d</sup> where he found Palaestes,<sup>e</sup> one of the leading men, and was given shelter by him. Now on the next day the queen became aware of Aristobulus' flight, and for a time she believed that his departure was not for the purpose of beginning a revolt. But when successive messengers came to report that he had eaptured the first fortress, and after that the second, and after that all of them-for when once the first had made a beginning they all hastened to submit to his will-, then at last both the queen and her people were in the greatest dismay. For they knew that Aristobulus was not far from being able to seize the throne for himself, and they were very much afraid that he might exact satisfaction for the excesses which they had practised on his house. They therefore decided to place his wife and children in the fortress overlooking the temple.<sup>a</sup> And Aristobulus received such large contributions from many sources<sup>b</sup> that there was already a veritable royal train about him. For in barely fifteen days he had occupied twenty-two fortresses, and obtaining resources from these, he gathered an army from Lebanon, Trachonitis and the local princes. These men readily submitted to him, being drawn to the stronger side, and at the same time believing that if they aided Aristobulus they could exploit his kingdom no less than those who were closely related to him,<sup>c</sup> on the ground that they had been the means of his eonquering it. Meanwhile the elders of the Jews and Hyreanus went to the queen and begged her to give them some counsel about the present situation. For, they said, Aristobulus was already master of almost the entire country by virtue of having occupied so many fortresses; but it was not their place, however seriously ill she might be, to make plans by themselves while she was still alive ; and yet the danger was not at all far off.d Thereupon she told them to do whatever they thought expedient,

BOOK XIV

(i. 1) HAVING related the history of Queen Alexandra Introducand her death in the preceding book, we shall now tion to Book XIV. speak of the events that followed immediately thereafter, keeping in mind one thing above all else, which is not to omit anything whether through ignorance or fault of memory. For while the relation and recording of events that are unknown to most people because of their antiquity require charm of exposition, such as is imparted by the choice of words and their proper arrangement and by whatever else contributes elegance to the narrative, in order that readers may receive such information with a certain degree of gratification and pleasure, nevertheless what historians should make their chief aim is to be accurate and hold everything else of less importance than speaking <sup>a</sup> the truth to those who must rely upon them in matters of which they themselves have no knowledge.b

with Book XIV Josephus begins to use Nicolas of Damascus as his chief source (continuing to  $\Delta nt$ . xvii. 206), but it should be noted that Josephus has freely drawn on Nicolas in the preceding book as well, as some of the notes indicate ; see also the Appendix on sources in the last volume of this translation. The reader may also be referred to the detailed but often speculative study of the parallelism between  $\Delta nt$ . xiv. and B.J. i. by R. Laqueur in Der jüdische Historiker Flavius Josephus, 1920, pp. 128-221.

Variant "the high priesthood." The reading "royal power" ( $\beta a \sigma i \lambda \epsilon i a \nu$ ) is supported by B.J. i. 120 and other passages, referred to in the following notes.

<sup>c</sup> The Olympiad and consular years correspond to 70/69 B.C.; thus Hyrcanus would have assumed royal power two years before the death of Alexandra, if she died in 67 B.C., as is most probable. Moreover we are told in Ant. xiv. 97 and xx. 244 that Aristobulus reigned 3 years and 450

(2) a Now when Hyrcanus assumed royal power, b in Hyrcanus II the third year of the hundred and seventy-seventh and Aristo-Olympiad, the Roman consuls being Quintus Hor- make an tensius and Quintus Metellus, the same who was agreement surnamed Creticus, Aristobulus promptly declared Aristobulus war on him, and in the battle which he fought near king, Jericho many of the soldiers of Hyrcanus deserted to his brother. Upon this he fled to the citadel, where Aristobulus' wife and children had been confined by his mother, as we have said before.<sup>d</sup> And those of the opposite faction who had taken refuge in the precincts of the temple he attacked and seized.<sup>e</sup> And after proposing to his brother that they come to an agreement, he ended hostilities on the terms that Aristobulus should be king, while he himself should live without taking part in public affairs, and be undisturbed in the enjoyment of the possessions that he then had.<sup>f</sup> This pact they made under the auspices

6 months, and in Ant. xv. 180 that after Alexandra's death Hyrcanus was king 3 months ; this makes a total of 3 years and 9 months for the two reigns; reckoning back from 63 B.C., when Pompey ended Aristobulus's reign, we arrive at 67 B.C. for the accession of Hyrcanus. Schürer, i. 256 n. 1. is probably right in assuming that Josephus has here relied on a chronological hand-book and has given a date incon-<sup>d</sup> Ant. xiii. 426. sistent with native tradition.

<sup>1</sup> Josephus here and in the parallel, B.J. i. 121, does not make it clear whether Hyrcanus gave up the high priesthood as well as the throne to Aristobulus, though the language in both passages (especially Ant. xiv. 7) suggests that he did. However, in Ant. xiv. 41, 97 and xx. 243-244 Josephus says plainly that Aristobulus became high priest in place of Hyrcanus. There is therefore no reason to assume, as some scholars do, that Hyrcanus continued as high priest between 67 and 63 B.C. See further A. Schalit, BJPOS 6 (1939), 145-148.

&lt;sup>a</sup> Laqueur, pp. 134-136, pointing out that Ant. gives Hyrcanus a less important position than B.J. (which says that "Hyrcanus, while abdicating the throne, should enjoy all his other honours as the king's brother "), attributes this slight difference, as similar ones, to Josephus' altered attitude toward the Herodians, whose ancestor Antipater was responsible for Hyrcanus' later triumph over Aristobulus.

&lt;sup>b</sup> Justin Martyr, Dial. c. Tryph. 52, says that Antipater was an Ascalonite; Julins Africanus, ap. Eusebius, Hist. Eccl. i. 7, 11, says that Antipater's father Herod was a temple-slave of Apollo at Ascalon and that Antipater was 452 of the temple, and after confirming their agreement by oaths and pledges and embracing one another in the sight of all the people, they withdrew, Aristobulus to the palace, and Hyrcanus, as one who was now a private citizen,<sup>a</sup> to the house of Aristobulus.

(3) But there was a certain friend of Hyrcanus, The rise an Idumaean called Antipater, who, having a large of the Idumaean fortune and being by nature a man of action and a Antipater. trouble-maker, was unfriendly to Aristobulus and quarrelled with him because of his friendliness toward Hyrcanus. Nicolas of Damascus, to be sure, says that his family belonged to the leading Jews who came to Judaea from Babylon.<sup>b</sup> But he says this in order to please Antipater's son Herod, who became king of the Jews by a certain turn of fortune, as we shall relate in the proper place.<sup>c</sup> This Antipater, it seems, was first called Antipas, which was also the name of his father, d whom King Alexander e and his wife appointed governor of the whole of Idumaea, and they say that he made friends of the neighbouring carried off by Idumaean robbers as a boy; see further next note.

<sup>c</sup> In Ant. xv. In B.J. i. 123 Josephus says merely tha Antipater was an Idumaean by race and that " his ancestry, wealth and other advantages put him in the front rank of his nation." For a discussion of Josephus' varying attitude toward the father of Herod the Great and his apologist, Nicolas of Damascus, see Schürer i. 292 n. 3, Laqueur, pp. 136-139, Otto, Her. pp. 15, 17-18 and Jacoby, FGH ii. 381 and Commentary to fr. 96, p. 255. The latter argues that Nicolas really did invent a Babylonian Jewish ancestry for Herod, and that Hölscher, in PW ix. 1971 f., is wrong in believing that a Jewish polemicist has falsified Nicolas' account.

Arabs and Gazaeans and Ascalonites, and completely won them over by many large gifts. Now the younger Antipater looked jcalously on Aristobulus' power,ª and fearing that he might suffer harm because of his hatred for him, he stirred up the powerful a Jews against him in secret conversations, saying that it was wrong to ignore the fact that Aristobulus wrongly held royal power and had driven his brother from the throne although he was the elder, and now occupied it though it belonged to the other by right of seniority. These were the arguments he unceasingly continued to address to Hyrcanus, adding that he was in danger of losing his life unless he insured his safety by taking himself out of his way.<sup>b</sup> For Aristobulus' friends, he said, were losing no opportunity of advising him to do away with Hyrcanus, as he would then hold power securely. But Hyrcanus gave no credence to these words, for he was naturally a decent man and because of his kindliness did not readily listen to slander. But his ineffectualness <sup>c</sup> and weakness of will made him scem ignoble and unmanly to those who observed him. Aristobulus, however, was of the opposite nature, being a man of action <sup>c</sup> and alert spirit.

(4) <sup>d</sup> And so when Antipater saw that Hyrcanus was Antipater paying no attention to what he said, he did not let Hyrcanus a day go by without bringing false charges against to seek Aristobulus before him, and slandering him by saying the Arab

When Hyrcanus heard that this would be to his advantage, he was ready to flee to Aretas, for Arabia borders on Judaea.<sup>b</sup> However, he first sent Antipater to the Arab king to receive sworn assurances that if he came to him as a suppliant, Aretas would not deliver him up to his enemies. When Antipater had received these sworn assurances, he returned to Hyrcanus at Jerusalem; and not long afterward he slipped out of the city by night, taking Hyrcanus with him, and after travelling a great distance,<sup>c</sup> brought him to the city called Petra, where the palace of Aretas was. Being a very good friend of the king, he urged him to bring Hyrcanus back to Judaea; and as he did this every day without intermission and offered him gifts in addition, he finally persuaded Aretas.<sup>d</sup> Moreover Hyrcanus also promised him that if he were restored and received his throne, he would return to him the territory and the twelve cities which his father Alexander had taken from the Arabs.<sup>e</sup> These were Medaba,<sup>f</sup> Libba,<sup>g</sup> Dabaloth,<sup>h</sup> Ara-had once in a rainless period praved to God to end the drought, and God had heard his praver and sent rain; this man hid himself when he saw that the civil war continued to rage, but he was taken to the camp of the Jews and was asked to place a curse on Aristobulus and his fellow-rebels, just as he had, by his prayers, put an end to the rainless period. But when in spite of his refusals and excuses he was forced to speak by the mob, he stood up in their midst and said, " O God, king of the universe, since these men standing beside me are Thy people, and those who are besieged are Thy priests, I beseech Thee not to hearken to them against these men nor to bring to pass what these men ask Thee to do to those others." And when he had prayed in this manner the villains among the Jews who stood round him stoned him to death.

(2) But God straightway punished them for this  $_{\text{God}}$  savagery, and exacted satisfaction for the murder of punishes Onias in the following manner. While the priests for killing and Aristobulus were being besieged, there happened Ouias. to come round the festival called Phaska, at which it is our custom to offer numerous sacrifices to God.<sup>a</sup> But as Aristobulus and those with him lacked victims, they asked their countrymen to furnish them with these, and take as much money for the victims as they wished. And when these others demanded that they pay a thousand drachmas for each animal they wished to get, Aristobulus and the pricsts willingly accepted this price and gave them the money, which they let down from the walls by a rope. Their countrymen, however, after receiving the money did not deliver the victims, but went to such lengths of villainy that they violated their pledges and acted impiously toward God by not furnishing the sacrificial victims to those who were in need of them.ª But the priests, on suffering this breach of faith, prayed to God to exact satisfaction on their behalf from their countrymen : and He did not delay their punishment, but sent a mighty and violent wind to destroy the crops of the entire country,<sup>b</sup> so that people at that time had to pay eleven drachmas for a modius of wheat."

(3) <sup>d</sup> Meanwhile Pompey sent Scaurus also <sup>e</sup> to The Roman Syria, as he himself was in Armenia, still making war general on Tigranes.<sup>f</sup> And when Scaurus came to Damascus, favours he found that Lollius and Metellus had just taken the and forces city, and so he hurried on to Judaea. <sup>a</sup> B.J. i. 128 has "Three hundred talents offered by Aristobulus outweighed considerations of justice." Laqueur, pp. 143-145, attributes the more favourable attitude toward Aristobulus and the criticism of Hyrcanus in Ant, to Josephus' later anti-Herodian bias.

<sup>b</sup> Schlatter, p. 393 n. 1, conjectures that this place, otherwise unknown, was somewhere near Jericho. 464 niggardly and held out untrustworthy promises for greater concessions.<sup>a</sup> Nor was it as easy to take by foree a city which was among the most strongly fortified and powerful, as to drive out some fugitives together with the host of Nabataeans, who were not well fitted for warfare. And so he took Aristobulus' side for the reasons mentioned above, and accepting the money, put an end to the siege by commanding Aretas to withdraw or else be declared an enemy of the Romans. Then Scaurus again withdrew to Damascus, while Aristobulus with a large force marched against Aretas and Hyrcanus, and on engaging them at a place called Papyron,<sup>b</sup> defeated them in battle and killed some six thousand of the enemy, among the fallen being Phallion,<sup>c</sup> the brother of Antipater.

(iii. 1) When Pompey not long afterward came to Pompey at Damascus and was advancing into Coele-Syria,<sup>d</sup> there Damascus receives came to him envoys from all of Syria and Egypt and gifts from Judaca. Aristobulus, for example, sent him a fine gift, which was a golden vine worth five hundred talents. This gift is also mentioned by Strabo of Cappadoeia in the following words. "There also came from Egypt an embassy and a crown worth four thousand pieces of gold, and from Judaea

<sup>d</sup> Note that §§ 31-36 refer to the spring of 63 B.C., while §§ 37 ff. (also from Strabo) go back to the autumn of 64 B.c. Josephus has again been careless in combining his new source, Strabo, with his earlier source in B.J., namely Nicolas of Damascus. Pompey's relations with the Jewish factions are also described in Diodorus xl. 2. <sup>a</sup> From the description of the object as a vine or garden it may be conjectured that its Heb. name was 'eden = "delight."

<sup>b</sup> Does the citation from Strabo end with the preceding sentence, as Naber assumes, or continue to the words "five hundred talents," as Niese assumes, or further, to the words "ruler of the Jews," as Reinach and, apparently, Schürer assume? On this depends the answer to the problem who is meant by "we ourselves." Schürer, i. 295 n. 12, points out that if Josephus were here writing in the first person he would have mentioned the burning of the temple of Jupiter in A.D. 69. Reinach, moreover, argues that the phrase  $\tau \delta \nu$  Iov $\delta a \ell \omega \nu \delta \sigma \tau \eta \nu$ , "ruler of the Jews," is not in the style of either Josephus or Nicolas. Though this is not 466 either a vine or garden;  $terpol\bar{e}$  (delight)<sup>a</sup> is what they called this work of art. Moreover we ourselves b have examined this gift, which has been set up in the temple of Jupiter Capitolinus at Rome, and has an inscription reading, 'From Alexander,<sup>e</sup> the king of the Jews.' It was valued at five hundred talents. And it is said to have been sent by Aristobulus, the ruler of the Jews."

(2) And not long afterward  $^{d}$  envoys again came Pompey. to him, Antipater on behalf of Hyrcanus, and Nico- after camdemus<sup>e</sup> on behalf of Aristobulus; the latter, in-Syria, hears deed, also accused Gabinius f and Scaurus of taking the charges of the Jews money from him, Gabinius first getting three hundred against talents, and Scaurus later four hundred talents ; and and Aristoso Aristobulus made these men his enemies in ad-bulus. dition to the others he had. Pompey thereupon told the disputants to come to  $him,^g$  and at the beginning of spring, took his force from their winter quarters, and set out for the region of Damascus.

certain, so far as Nicolas is concerned, it must be admitted that it is more in the style of Strabo. For these reasons I also have assumed that "we ourselves" means Strabo. <sup>c</sup> The Epitome has "Aristobulus," Lat. has "Aristobulus, son of Alexander ": these are probably scribal corrections. It is quite possible that Aristobulus presented a gift with the name of his father Alexander (Jannaeus) inscribed on it, the gift having originally been meant for presentation by Alexander. One may also render the Gr. here, " having an inscription of Alexander, the king of the Jews," i.e. Alexander's name may not have appeared as that of the donor. See Reinach, Textes, p. 93 n. 3.

He also destroyed the fortress of Lysias,<sup>d</sup> of which the Jew Silas was lord. And passing the cities of Heliopolis and Chalcis, he crossed the mountain that divides the region called Coele-Syria from the rest of Syria,e and came to Damascus. Here he heard the case of the Jews and their leaders, Hyreanus and Aristobulus, who were quarrelling with one another, while the nation was against them both and asked not to be ruled by a king, saying that it was the custom of their country to obey the priests of the God who was venerated by them, but that these two, who were descended from the priests, were seeking to change their form of government in order that they might become a nation of slaves. brother, he had been deprived of his rights as firstborn by Aristobulus, and that he had but a small part of the country under his rule,<sup>a</sup> while Aristobulus had the rest, which he had taken by force. He also denounced him as the one who had instigated the raids against neighbouring peoples and the acts of piracy at sea,<sup>b</sup> and added that the nation would not have rebelled against him if he had not been a man given to violence and disorder. In making these accusations he was supported by more than a thousand of the most reputable Jews, whom Antipater had provided for that purpose. Aristobulus, on the other hand, blamed Hyrcanus' fall from power on his own character, which was ineffectual and therefore invited contempt; as for himself, he said that he had of necessity taken over the royal power for fear <sup>c</sup> that it might pass into the hands of others, and that his title was exactly the same as that of his father Alexander. He then called, as witnesses to these statements, some young swaggerers, who offensively displayed their purple robes, long hair, metal ornaments and other finery, which they wore as if they were marching in a festive procession instead of pleading their cause.<sup>d</sup> then he told them to keep the peace; at the same time he treated Aristobulus with deference for fear that he might ineite the country to rebellion and block his passage through it. This, however, was, as it happened, the very thing which Aristobulus did, for without waiting for any of the things to be done of which Pompey had spoken to him, he came to the city of Dium,<sup>a</sup> and from there set out for Judaea.

(4) <sup>b</sup>But Pompey, who was angered by this action, Pompey took the army that he had prepared against the aristobulus Nabataeans, and the auxiliaries from Damaseus and to yield, the rest of Syria, as well as the Roman legions already and is unwillingly at his disposal, and marched against Aristobulus. obeyed. ably. On his making this request Pompey pardoned him and sent Gabinius and some soldiers to get the money and take over the city. None of these promises was carried out, however, and Gabinius returned after being shut out of the city and failing to receive the money; for Aristobulus' soldiers a had not permitted the agreement to be carried out. And b Pompey, being seized with anger at this, placed Aristobulus under arrest, and himself went to the city, which was strongly fortified on all sides except on the north, where it was weak. For it is surrounded by a broad and deep ravine which takes in the temple, and this is very strongly protected by an encircling wall of stone.<sup>c</sup>

(2) But among the men within the city there was The dissension, for they were not of one mind concerning partisans of Aristobulus their situation; to some it seemed best to deliver in Jerusalem the city to Pompey, while those who sympathized prepare to resist with Aristobulus urged that they shut Pompey out Pompey. and make war on him because he held Aristobulus prisoner. It was this party that made the first move and occupied the temple, and cutting the bridge that stretches from it to the eity,<sup>d</sup> prepared themselves for a siege. offer conciliatory terms <sup>a</sup> to those within, but as they would not listen to his proposals, he fortified the surrounding places with walls, with Hyrcanus willingly assisting him in all ways. And at dawn b Pompey pitched his camp on the north <sup>c</sup> side of the temple, where it was open to attack. But even here stood great towers,<sup>d</sup> and a trench had been dug, and the temple was surrounded by a deep ravine; for there was a steep slope on the side toward the city after the bridge was destroyed, and at this spot Pompey by great labour day by day had caused earthworks to be raised, for which the Romans cut down the timber round about. And when these were high enough, though the trench was filled up with difficulty because of its immense depth, he moved up and set in place the siege engines and instruments of war that had been brought from Tyre, and began to batter the temple with his catapults. But if it were not our national custom to rest on the Sabbath day, the earthworks would not have been finished, because the Jews would have prevented this; for the Law permits us to defend ourselves against those who begin a battle and strike us, but it does not allow us to fight against an enemy that does anything else.<sup>e</sup>

 $^{\circ}$  The 179th Olympiad (first year) extended from July 64 to July 63 n.c.; the consulship of Antonius and Cicero was in 63 n.c.; the combination of the two dates gives us the first half of 63 n.c. for the capture of the city. This date cannot be harmonized with the mention of the Fast Day, if by this Josephus means the Day of Atonement, which falls on the 10th of Tishri (roughly October). A plausible ex-480 not shoot at the Jews or meet them in hand to hand combat, but instead they raised earthworks and towers, and brought up their siege-engines in order that these might be put to work the following day. And one may get an idea of the extreme piety which we show toward God and of our strict observance of the laws from the fact that during the siege the priests were not hindered from performing any of the sacred ceremonies through fear, but twice a day, in the morning and at the ninth hour, a they performed the sacred ceremonies at the altar, and did not omit any of the sacrifices even when some difficulty arose because of the attacks. And indeed when the city was taken, in the third month,<sup>b</sup> on the Fast Day, in the hundred and seventy-ninth Olympiad, in the consulship of Gaius Antonius and Marcus Tullius Cicero,<sup>c</sup> and the enemy rushed in and were slaughtering the Jews in the temple, those who were busied with the sacrifices none the less continued to perform the sacred ceremonies; nor were they compelled, either by fear for their lives or by the great number of those already slain, to run away, but thought it better to endure whatever they might have to suffer there beside the altars than to neglect any of the planation of the difficulty was given long ago by Herzfeld (cited by Schürer i. 298 n. 23 and Reinach). Josephus is here supplementing Nicolas' account from those of Strabo and other historians, who, like many pagan writers, erroneously referred to the Sabbath as a fast day; cf. Strabo xvi. 763, who says Pompey took Jerusalem " on a fast day, they say, when the Jews refrain from all work," and Dio Cassius xvvii. 16, who says that the city was taken " on the day of Kronos " (=the Sabbath). The city probably fell about July 63 n.c. if, as Josephus (or Nicolas) says, the siege lasted three months, since Pompey apparently started operations in the spring of 63 n.c. (cf. § 53 note d).

ordinances. And that this is not merely a story to set forth the praises of a fictitious piety, but the truth, is attested by all those who have narrated the exploits of Pompey, among them Strabo and Nicolas and, in addition, Titus Livius, the author of a History of Rome.

(4) Now when the siege-engine was brought up, The Romans the largest of the towers was shaken and fell, making slaughter a breach through which the enemy poured in ; first fenders of among them was Cornelius Faustus, the son of Sulla, the temple. who with his soldiers mounted the wall, and after him the centurion Furius, with those who followed him, on the other side, and between them Fabius, another centurion, with a strong and compact body of men. And there was slaughter everywhere. For some of the Jews were slain by the Romans, and others by their fellows a; and there were some who hurled themselves down the precipices,<sup>b</sup> and setting fire to their houses, burned themselves within them, for they could not bear to accept their fate. And so of the Jews there fell some twelve thousand,<sup>c</sup> but of the Romans only a very few.<sup>d</sup> One of those taken captive was Absalom, the uncle and at the same time father-in-law of Aristobulus.<sup>e</sup> And not light was the sin committed against the sanctuary,<sup>f</sup> which before that time had never been entered or seen. He also bestowed on Faustus and the others who had mounted the wall with alacrity fitting rewards for their bravery. And he made Jerusalem tributary c Pompey's to the Romans, and took from its inhabitants the reorganizacities of Coele-Syria which they had formerly sub-Jewish dued,<sup>d</sup> and placed them under his own governor e; state.

<sup>a</sup> Cf. B.J. i. 159, "and the Arab king was persuaded to pay three hundred talents." Laquenr does not comment on this discrepancy, which, incidentally, is difficult to reconcile with his theory about the anti-Herodian changes in Ant.

<sup>b</sup> Gabinius had been consul in 58 s.c. and came to Syria as proconsul in 57 s.c. In B.J. i, 160 Josephus says that he came as successor to Scaurus, overlooking the two intervening governors, cf. Dr. Thackeray's note ad loc. On Gabinius' extortions from the provincials see Dio Cassius xxxix, 55-56 and Cicero, Pro Sestio 43. came surety for three hundred talents.<sup>a</sup> And on these terms Scaurus ended the war, being no less eager to have this come about than was Aretas.

(2) But some time later, while Alexander, the son Gabinius of Aristobulus, was overrunning Judaea, Gabinius becomes came to Syria from Rome as governor, b and after Syria and achieving many other things worthy of note, also defeats marched against Alexander; for Hyrcanus was no the son of longer able to hold out against the strength of Alexander, who was actually attempting to raise again the wall of Jerusalem which Pompey had destroyed. But this he was stopped from doing by the Romans there.<sup>c</sup> He then went round the country and armed many of the Jews, and soon collected ten thousand heavy-armed soldiers and fifteen hundred horse, and fortified the strongholds of Alexandreion near Coreae and Machaerus d near the mountains of Arabia.<sup>e</sup> Gabinius therefore went out against him. sending ahead Mark Antony with some other officers. These armed the Romans who accompanied them,<sup>f</sup> and beside them the Jews who were submissive, led by Peitholaus and Malichus, and taking along <sup>c</sup> Schalit, p. 35, suggests that these Romans were negotiatores or business agents who had come to exploit Judaea's farms and industries.

<sup>d</sup> On these two fortresses see Ant. xiii. 417 notes c and d. Aristobulus had earlier yielded them to Pompey, cf. §§ 50-52. Presumably Alexander now refortified them.

e Ant, omits the fortress of Hyrcania, mentioned in B.J. i. 161 (on its location see Ant. xiii. 417 note b). Laqueur, p. 217, explains its omission here by supposing that Josephus was ignorant of its location. This seems doubtful, particularly because of its being mentioned together with the other two fortresses below, in § 89.

<sup>b</sup> Josephus omits to say here, as he does in B.J. i. 163, that 492

Antipater's guard also, went to meet Alexander. Gabinius himself followed them with his main body. Alexander therefore retired to the neighbourhood of Jerusalem, where the two forces fell upon each other and a battle took place, in which the Romans killed about three thousand of the enemy, and captured as many alive.b

(3) Meanwhile Gabinius eame to Alexandreion and Gabinins invited those within to cease hostilities, cagreeing to rebuilds pardon them for their past offences. But as many cities in of the enemy were encamped before the stronghold, Judaea. the Romans set upon them; and Mark Antony, who fought with distinction <sup>d</sup> and killed many men, was voted the prize for bravery. Finally Gabinius left a part of his army there until the fortress should be taken by siege, and himself went through the rest of Judaea, and whenever he came upon a ruined eity, he gave directions for it to be rebuilt. And so there were rebuilt Samaria, Azotus, Seythopolis, Anthedon, Raphia, Adora, Marisa, Gaza and not a few others.<sup>e</sup> And as the people obeyed Gabinius' orders, these eities, which had long been desolate, could now be safely inhabited.<sup>f</sup>

(4) Having taken these measures throughout the Alexander eountry, Gabinius returned to Alexandreion, and as submits to Gabinins.

Alexander fled to Alexandreion, which explains why Gabinius attacked it, cf. §§ 86, 89.

he pressed the siege strongly, Alexander sent envoys to him, asking pardon for his offences and giving up the strongholds of Hyrcania and Machaerus, and afterwards Alexandreion as well. And so Gabinius demolished them.<sup>a</sup> For Alexander's mother, who was on the side of the Romans, since her husband and her other children were held at Rome, came to him with the request that he do this, and he granted it; and after settling matters with her, he brought Hyrcanus to Jerusalem, to have charge of the temple. W. F. Albright, From the Stone Age to Christianity, p. 336 n. 10. It may be that Josephus or a scribe wrote "Gadara" for "Gazara" because the former city lav near Amathūs, the next on the list. Albright, in JBL 56 (1937), p. 162 n. 52, insists that Gadara is not Gazara but "one of the many towns derived from the stem gdr." Schalit, p. 31, also reading "Gadara," identifies it with Gadora (mod. Tell Jadur near es-Salt) in Transjordan; but Schürer's objections to the similar theory of Schlatter, p. 224, still hold.

Among others a certain Peitholaus, who was legate <sup>c</sup> at Jerusalem, deserted to him with a thousand men. Many d of those who joined him, however, were unarmed. But Aristobulus, who had decided to retire to Machaerūs, dismissed these men, who were without equipmentfor they were of no use to him in action,-and taking the men who were armed, amounting to some eight thousand, marched away. And as the Romans fell upon them valiantly, they were defeated in battle; for though the Jews fought manfully e and eagerly, the cnemy were too strong for them, and they were put to flight. Some five thousand of them were slain, while the rest were scattered and tried to save themselves as best they could. he found Svria a prey to uprisings and disorder; for Aristobulus' son Alexander had later come into power a second time and had forced many of the Jews to revolt, and was marching over the country with a large army and killing all the Romans he met, and was closely besieging those who had taken refuge on Mount Gerizim, as it is called.

<sup>1</sup> In the only other reference to the mina in Josephus, Ant. ii. 33, he equates it loosely with the Heb. shekel. According to Kranss, Talmudische Archäologie ii. 406, the Heb. mina weighed only  $1\frac{1}{24}$  Roman pounds. Reinach gives 728 grammes for the Heb. mina and 818 for 21 Roman pounds. Thus Josephus' equation here is inaccurate.

Now this bar was in a hollow wooden bar, a fact which was unknown to all others, and which Eleazar alone knew. Crassus, however, although he took this bar with the understanding that he would not touch anything else in the temple, violated his oath and carried off all the gold in the sanctuary.

And there is no lack of witnesses <sup>b</sup> to the great amount of the sums mentioned, nor have they been raised to so great a figure through boastfulness or exaggeration on our part, but there are many historians who bear us out, in particular Strabo of Cappadocia, who writes as follows. "Mithridates <sup>e</sup> sent to Cos and took the money which Queen Cleopatra had deposited there, and eight hundred talents of the Jews." Now there is no public money among us except that which is God's, and it is therefore evident that this money was transferred to Cos by the Jews of Asia because <sup>a</sup> On Cleopatra III of Egypt and her deposit of money in Cos in 102 n.c. see Ant. xii. 349. Reinach conjectures that the 800 talents were deposited at the same time by her Jewish generals Chelkias and Ananias, since the sum is much too large to represent the contributions of the Jews of Asia Minor. Similarly Willrich, Urkundenfülschung, p. 74, insists that it was the Jews of Egypt who took away their money in fear of Ptolemy Lathyrus, and he charges Josephus with ignorance of the real situation in 88 n.c. But Strabo's language suggests that the 800 talents came from a different period (otherwise he would have written, "the money which Cleopatra and the Jews had deposited"). Moreover the 506 of their fear of Mithridates.<sup>a</sup> For it is not likely that those in Judaea, who possessed a fortified city and the temple, would have sent money to Cos, nor is it probable that the Jews living in Alexandria would have done this either, since they had no fear of Mithridates. And this same Strabo in another Strabo on passage testifies that at the time when Sulla crossed the Jews of Cyrene. over to Greece to make war on Mithridates, and sent Lucullus to put down the revolt of our nation in Cyrene,<sup>b</sup> the habitable world was filled with Jews, for he writes as follows. "There were four classes in the state of Cyrene : the first consisted of citizens. the second of farmers, the third of resident aliens sum of 800 talents is not incredible if we remember that contributions to the temple from Jews in the Diaspora consisted of many gifts in addition to the annual didrachm payment, cf. Heichelheim, Rom. Syria, p. 74. However, it would be much easier to accept Josephus' explanation if he had mentioned 80 talents instead of 800. See now J. Cohen. Judaica et Aegyptiaca (1941), pp. 60-64.

<sup>b</sup> The last king of Cyrene, Ptolemy Apion, natural son of Ptolemy VII Physcon, on his death in 96 B.c. bequeathed his kingdom to Rome. For several years the Romans left the government in the hands of the Greek cities of Cyrenaica, which did not become a Roman province until 74 B.C. In the winter of 87/6 B.C. Sulla sent Lucullus to restore order in Cyrene, which, according to Plutarch, Lucullus 2, had been disturbed by "continual tyrannies and wars." The Jews are not mentioned. The passage in Plutarch is prohably based on Strabo (Jacoby, FGH ii. C, p. 294 is non-committal about Plutarch's use of Strabo here), and Strabo, in turn, probably used Posidonius as a source, cf. Schürer i. 42. It may be that Josephus' text originally contained a reference to the Jewish revolt, which has been accidentally omitted, as Niese supposes, or that he has added the reference to the Jewish uprising on his own account, as Jacoby holds. If we accept the former view, we may suppose that the Cyrenaean Jews were dissatisfied with the civic status granted them by the Greek authorities.

The change of tenses in this quotation indicates that Strabo was speaking, in this sentence, and also further on, not of the period of Sulla but also of his own 508 (metics), and the fourth of Jews.<sup>a</sup> This people has <sup>b</sup> already made its way into every city, and it is not easy to find any place in the habitable world which has not received this nation and in which it has not made its power felt.<sup>c</sup> And it has come about that Cyrene, which had the same rulers d as Egypt, has imitated it in many respects, particularly in notably encouraging and aiding the expansion of the organized groups of Jews, which observe the national Jewish laws." In Egypt, for example, territory has been set apart for a Jewish settlement,<sup>f</sup> and in Alexandria a great part of the city has been allocated to this nation.<sup>g</sup> And an ethnarch of their own has been installed, who governs the people and adjudicates suits and supervises contracts and ordinances, just as if he were the head of a sovereign state.<sup>h</sup> And so this nation has flourished in Egypt because the Jews indicates that he has been pretty accurate in quoting Strabo. <sup>b</sup> By other historians. Crassus was defeated near Carrhae in Mesopotania in the spring of 53 n.c. and soon after was killed. Debevoise writes, p. 95, "The disaster which the Roman arms had suffered at Carrhae made certain the 510 were originally Egyptians and because those who left that country made their homes near by a; and they migrated to Cyrene because this country bordered on the kingdom of Egypt, as did Judaea-or rather, it formerly belonged to that kingdom." These are Strabo's own words.

(3) Now when Crassus had arranged everything the Crassus is way he wished, he set out for Parthia and perished killed in Parthia. together with his entire army, as has been related Cassius elsewhere.<sup>b</sup> Cassius,<sup>c</sup> however, fled to Syria and <sup>invades</sup> Judaea. took possession of it,d thus standing in the way of the Parthians who were making incursions into the country as a result of their victory over Crassus. Later he came to Tyre, and then went up to Judaea. Here he fell upon Tarichaeae,<sup>e</sup> which he quickly took, and made slaves of some thirty thousand men. He Antipater's also killed Peitholaus, who had continued the revolt influence. led by Aristobulus; and this he did at the instigation of Antipater, who at that time had great influence with him, and was then held in the greatest esteem by the Idumaeans also, from among whom <sup>f</sup> he took a wife of a distinguished Arab family, named Cypros "; and by her he had four sons, Phasael,

Here again Laqueur tries to show that Josephus' attitude toward Antipater and Herod is less favourable in Ant. than is that of his source (Nicolas) in B.J.; at the same time he admits that Nicolas had probably exaggerated the services of Antipater at the expense of Hyrcanus. So too Motzo in a monograph on this subject, cited by Monigliano, Ricerche, pp. 189-190. See further works cited in Appendix L.

beheading. In this manner he died at Antioch. But his brother and sisters were taken by Ptolemy, the son of Mennaeus,<sup>a</sup> who was prince of Chalcis at the foot of Mount Lebanon. And he sent his son, Philippion, to Ascalon to Aristobulus' wife, telling her to send back with him her son Antigonus and her daughters, one of whom, Alexandra, Philippion fell in love with and married. But afterwards his father Ptolemy put him to death and married Alexandra, and continued to look after her brother and sister.

(viii. 1) <sup>b</sup> When Caesar, after his victory over Pom- Antipater pey and the latter's death, was fighting in Egypt, and Hyrcanus Antipater, the governor d of the Jews, under orders assist from Hyrcanus e proved himself useful to Caesar in Egypt. many ways. For when Mithridates of Pergamum, who was bringing an auxiliary force,<sup>f</sup> was unable to make his way through Pelusium and was delayed quotation from Strabo in § 139, usually = Lat. curator or praefectus, rarely = procurator (Judaeae), as in Ant. xviii. 89. In xvii. 6 it is applied to Saturninus, governor of Svria (=legatus Augusti pro praetore), who is elsewhere called ήγεμών; in B.J. i. 225 Herod is appointed επιμελετής of all Syria, while in the parallel Ant. xiv. 280 he is called orparnyos. From these passages it would seem that Antipater was given a special office in 48 B.C. by Caesar, or earlier (cf. § 103) by Gabinius. He was not made procurator of Judaea, έπίτροπος, until 47 B.C., cf. § 143. Schürer, i. 343 n. 14, suggests that Gabinius had made him procurator, but if so this office must have been extra ordinem, since Judaea had been divided into five districts by Gabinius, as is pointed out by Momigliano, Ricerche, p. 207. It may be, however, that Josephus here anticipates; Caesar came to Egypt in the autumn of 48 B.c. but did not get help from Mithridates and Antipater until the spring of 47 B.c. On this campaign see W. Judeich, Cäsar im Orient, 1885.

<sup>a</sup> As Dr. Thackeray notes in B.J. i. 187, Ascalon was 6 days' march from Pelusium, so that Mithridates must have been warned well in advance of the refusal of passage.

<sup>b</sup> Text slightly uncertain. This Ptolemy is to be distinguished from the son of Mennaeus in the same region. 516 at Ascalon,<sup>a</sup> Antipater arrived with three thousand heavy-armed Jewish soldiers, and also managed to get the chiefs of Arabia to come to his aid; and it was owing to him that all the rulers of Syria furnished aid, not wishing to be outdone in their zeal for Caesar; among these were the prince Jamblichus and Ptolemy, the son of Soemus,<sup>b</sup> who lived on Mount Lebanon, and almost all the cities. Mithri- Antipater dates then left Syria and came to Pelusium, and persuades the Jews as its inhabitants would not admit him, besieged in Egypt the city. Foremost in bravery was Antipater, who to Gaesar was the first to pull down part of the wall, and so opened a way for the others to pour into the city. This was how he took Pelusium. But when Mithridates and Antipater with their men were on their way to Caesar, the Jews ° who inhabitated the district of Onias,<sup>d</sup> as it was called, prevented them from doing so. Antipater, however, persuaded them too to side with his party on the ground of their common nationality, especially when he showed them a letter from the high priest Hyrcanus, in which he urged them to be friendly to Caesar and receive his army hospitably and furnish it with all things necessary. And so, when they saw that Antipater and the

He and Jamblichus are otherwise unknown. Soemus may possibly be the ruler mentioned in Vita 52; the name is Arabic and Nabataean, found in Petra and Ituraea, cf. Ant. xv. 185, xvii. 54, xx. 158 et al. The original form was perhaps Arab. Suhaum, cf. H. Wuthnow, Die semitischen Menschennamen in griech. Inschrift. u. Pap. d. vord. Orients, 1930, p. 130. On the name Jamblichus see Ant. xiii, 131 note c.

<sup>a</sup> The parallel, B.J. i. 190, does not tell how Antipater won the support of the Egyptian Jews by using Hyrcanus' name; cf. above, § 127 note b. 518 high priest had the same wish, they complied.<sup>a</sup> And when those in the neighbourhood of Memphis heard that these Jews had joined Caesar's side, they too invited Mithridates to come to them. Accordingly he came and took them into his army as well.

(2) And when he had passed round the region Caesar comcalled the Delta, he engaged the enemy at the meds Anti-called the Jews,<sup>b</sup> as it is called. Mithridates com-provess in manded the right wing, and Antipater the left. And  $\frac{Battle in}{Egypt}$ . when they met in battle, Mithridates' wing gave way and would have been in danger of suffering a very grave disaster, if Antipater, who had already defeated the enemy (opposite him), had not come running with his own soldiers along the bank of the river and rescued him, at the same time putting to flight the Egyptians who had defeated Mithridates. And continuing in pursuit, he also seized their camp, and brought back <sup>c</sup> Mithridates, who had been separated far from him in the rout. Of the latter's men some eight hundred fell, while Antipater lost only fifty.d Mithridates thereupon wrote an account of this to Caesar, declaring that Antipater had been responsible for their victory and also for their safety; and as a result of this, Caesar commended Antipater on that occasion, and, what is more, made use of him for the most dangerous tasks throughout the entire war. The natural result was that Antipater was wounded in some of the battles.

It is said by many writers that Hyrcanus took part in this eampaign <sup>c</sup> and came to Egypt.<sup>d</sup> And this statement of mine is attested by Strabo of Cappadocia, who writes as follows, on the authority of Asinius." "After Mithridates, Hyrcanus, the high priest of the Jews, also invaded Egypt." And again this same Strabo in another passage writes as follows, on the authority of Hypsierates.<sup>f'''</sup> "Mithridates went out alone, but Antipater, the procurator g of Judaea, was called to Ascalon by him and provided him with an additional three thousand h soldiers, and won over the other princes; and the high priest Hyrcanus also took part in the campaign." i These are Strabo's own words.

(4) But at that time <sup>j</sup> Antigonus, the son of Aristo- Antigonus, bulus, also came to Caesar and bewailed the sad fate k son of of his father, saying that it was on Caesar's account II, appeals that Aristobulus and his brother had died, the one to Caesar having been put out of the way by poison, and the usurpation other executed by beheading at the hands of Scipio<sup>a</sup>; and he begged Caesar to take pity on him for having been driven from his realm; and in this connexion he accused Hyrcanus and Antipater of governing the people by violence and having acted lawlessly toward him.<sup>b</sup> But Antipater, who was present, defended himself on these points of the accusation which he saw had been brought against him, and declared that Antigonus and his fellows were revolutionaries and fomenters of sedition<sup>c</sup>; at the same time he recalled how he had laboured on behalf of the Romans and assisted them in their plans of war, speaking of things to which his own person testified d; with justice, he added, had Aristobulus been deported to Rome, for he had always been hostile to the Romans and never well-disposed toward them. As for the brother of Antigonus who had been punished e for brigandage by Scipio, he had met the fate he deserved, and if he had suffered this punishment it was not because of any violence or injustice on the part of him who had inflicted it.

It also omits Antigonus' charge that his adversaries had supported Caesar in Egypt not out of goodwill but ont of fear.

(5) After Antipater had made this speech, Caesar Caesar and appointed Hyrcanus high priest,<sup>f</sup> and gave Antipater Senate power to rule in whatever form he preferred. And honour as the latter left the decision to him, he appointed and

<sup>a</sup> There is no reason why Josephus' source should give the date of a Roman decree in terms of the Macedonian calendar; moreover the decree is dated internally on the Ides of December, while Panemus = June-July. The sentence evidently refers to the following Athenian decree, which is to be dated in the time of Hyreanus I (see notes following); we must, however, emend "ninth" to "twenty-ninth," as Homolle proposes, which would give us 106/5 B.C., agreeing with the date of the archonship of Agathoeles; we must 526

This took place in the ninth year of Hyrcanus the high priest and ethnarch, in the month Panemus.<sup>a</sup> Among the Athenian people The also Hyrcanus obtained honours, for he had been of Athenians great service to them. And they wrote and sent him Hyrcanus. a resolution, of which the contents were as follows. " In the presidency and priesthood of Dionysius, son of Asclepiades, on the fifth day before the end of the month of Panemus, a decree of the Athenians was delivered to the magistrates.<sup>b</sup> In the archonship of Agathocles,<sup>c</sup> when Eucles, son of Xenander, of the Aithalidean deme,<sup>d</sup> was scribe, on the eleventh of the month of Munychion,<sup>e</sup> on the eleventh day<sup>f</sup> of the prytany, a meeting of the presiding officers (proedroi) being held in the theatre, Dorotheus of the Erchian deme $^{g}$  and his fellow presiding officers

<sup>b</sup> The text and meaning of the last clause are slightly uncertain. Reinach emends to read, "and that all may rival the one thus honoured (i.e. Hyrcanus) in zeal toward us." But Reinach's "thus " ( $\hat{\omega}\delta\epsilon$ ) would have to be obvers, as Prof. B. D. disorders therein by both threatening and advising the people to remain quiet. For, he said, those who were on the side of Hyreanus would be left in peace and could live undisturbed in the enjoyment of their own possessions, but if they elung to the hope of achieving something by revolution and were counting on any gains therefrom, they would have in him a master in place of a protector, and in Hyrcanus a tyrant in place of a king,<sup>a</sup> and in the Romans and Caesar bitter enemies in place of rulers.<sup>b</sup> For they would not allow any man to be removed from office whom they themselves had placed therein. This achievement of his was greatly admired by the Syrians, for he had cleared their country of a gang of bandits of whom they longed to be rid. And so they sang his praises for this deed throughout their villages and cities, saving that he had given them peace and the secure enjoyment of their possessions. And through this action he became known to Sextus Caesar, a kinsman of the great Caesar and governor of Syria.<sup>a</sup> Thereupon the desire to emulate Herod's Antipater's achievements seized his brother Phasael, and being Phasael moved by the thought of the reputation Herod had ably governs won, he was ambitious not to be behind him in achieving like fame; and so he made the inhabitants of Jerusalem feel very friendly toward him, and though he kept the city under his own rule, he did not show any lack of discretion in governing it  $^{b}$  or abuse his authority. This situation made it possible for Antipater to receive from the nation the respect shown a king and such honour as might be enjoyed by one who is an absolute master. With all this glory, however, he did not, as so often seems to happen,<sup>b</sup> in any way alter his friendship and loyalty to Hyrcanus.

Moreover Antipater had formed a friendship with the Roman generals, and after persuading Hyrcanus to send them money, he took this gift and appropriated it for himself, and then sent it as though it came from him and were not a gift from Hyrcanus. Hyrcanus heard of this but gave the matter no thought; on the contrary he was actually pleased.<sup>a</sup> But the chief Jews were in great fear when they saw how powerful and reckless Herod was and how much he desired to be a dictator.<sup>b</sup> And so they came to Hyrcanus and now openly accused Antipater, saying, "How long will you keep quiet in the face of what is happening ? However Sextus, the governor of Syria, wrote to urge Hyrcanus to acquit Herod of the charge, and added threats as to what would happen if he disobeyed.<sup>e</sup> The letter from Sextus gave Hyrcanus a pretext for letting Herod go without suffering any harm from the Synhedrion; for he loved him as a <sup>e</sup> The compulsion exercised by Sextus Caesar is eited by Schalit, p. 60, as evidence that Judaea at this time was still in the position of a civitas stipendiaria, to which it had been reduced by Pompey and Gabinius. But as Julius Caesar had already improved, or was about to improve, the political status of Judaea, it may be that Sextus Caesar was exceeding his authority. See further works listed in Appendix L.

<sup>a</sup> Josephus' accounts of Herod's trial in B.J. and Ant. are rather confusing. In B.J. i. 211 he states that Hyreanus acquitted Herod on orders from Sextus Caesar; in §§ 212 ff. Herod, after being appointed governor of Coele-Syria, came to Jerusalem with an army, prepared to depose Hyreanus if summoned to a second trial. Whether the second trial was held or why it should be held after Herod's acquittal (cf. Mishnah, Sanhedrin, iv. 1) is not clear. Josephus' statement in Ant., § 170, that Hyreanus let Herod go ( $d\pi o \lambda d\sigma a$ ) evidently refers to an acquittal. The story that follows in §§ 171-176 (which has no parallel in B.J.) should logically precede the statement about Herod's acquittal; it seems to be a later insertion, probably based on Jewish tradition (for 540 son.<sup>a</sup> But when Herod stood in the Synhedrion<sup>b</sup> with his troops, he overawed them all, and no one of those who had denounced him before his arrival dared to accuse him thereafter : instead there was silence and doubt about what was to be done. While they were Samaias in this state, someone named Samaias, c an upright rebukes the synchedrion man and for that reason superior to fear, arose and for its said, "Fellow councillors and King, I do not myself toward know of, nor do I suppose that you can name, any-Herod. one who when summoned before you d for trial has ever presented such an appearance. For no matter who it was that came before this Synhedrion for trial, he has shown himself humble and has assumed the manner of one who is fearful and seeks mercy e from you<sup>f</sup> by letting his hair grow long and wearing a black garment. But this fine fellow Herod, who is accused of murder and has been summoned on no less grave a charge than this, stands here clothed in purple, with the hair of his head carefully arranged and with his a rabbinic parallel see Derenbourg, pp. 146-148). But another difficulty remains in Ant. In § 177 Josephus tells us that Hyrcanus postponed Herod's trial; in § 182 he states that Herod's friends reminded him of his acquittal (adéaews). Thus neither of the two parallel accounts makes it clear whether Herod was tried and acquitted or was released without an actual trial. Incidentally, according to Mishnah, Sanhedrin, ii. 2, the king was not competent to act as a judge.

<sup>b</sup> The Synhedrion (Heb. Sanhedrin) was the supreme legislative and judicial body of the Jewish state, meeting at Jerusalem.

soldiers round him, in order to kill us if we condemn him as the law prescribes, and to save himself by outraging justice. But it is not Herod whom I should blame for this or for putting his own interests above the law, but you and the king, for giving him such great licence. Be assured, however, that God is great, and this man, whom you now wish to release for Hyrcanus' sake, will one day punish you and the king as well." And he was not mistaken in either part of his prediction. For when Herod assumed roval power, he killed Hyrcanus and all the other members of the Synhedrion with the exception of Samaias. Him he held in the greatest honour, both because of his uprightness and because when the city was later besieged by Herod and Sossius, he advised the people to admit Herod, and said that on account of their sins they would not be able to escape him. And of these events we shall speak in the proper place.a

<sup>a</sup> In B.J. i. 212 it is not the Synhedrion but the "knaves" ( $ol_{\pi\sigma\nu\eta\rhool}$ ) at court who instigate Hyrcanus against Herod. <sup>b</sup> B.J. does not mention Hyrcanus' "cowardice and folly"; instead, it says that he was inactive because "he 5144 to persuade Hyrcanus that all these things were directed against him.<sup>a</sup> But though he was not unaware of this, he was incompetent to do anything, because of his cowardice and folly.<sup>b</sup> And when Sextus made Herod governor of Coele-Syria e-for he gave him this title in return for money-,d Hyrcanus was afraid that Herod would march against him. Nor was this fear long in being realized, for Herod did come against him with an army, being angry because of the trial and because he had been summoned to render an account of himself to the Synhedrion. Herod, how-Herod's ever, was prevented from attacking Jerusalem <sup>e</sup> by father and brother dishis father Antipater and his brother, who went out suade him to meet him and quieted his impetuosity, urging attacking him not to undertake any violent action, but merely Hyrcanus. to strike terror into Hyrcanus by threats and not proceed further against one who had made it possible for him to attain to his present high office. And as he expressed indignation at having been summoned to stand trial, they begged him to remember his acquittal and to be grateful for it rather than consider the unpleasant side f and be ungrateful for his deliverance. He ought, they said, to reflect that if the Deity decides the changing fortunes of war, the injustice <sup>g</sup> of his cause might weigh more heavily than his military skill<sup>h</sup>; for that reason he should not be very saw that his adversary had greater strength" (we ewpa confident of a victory when he was planning to make war on his king and comrade, one who had conferred many benefits upon him but had never done him any unkindness; as for the things of which he complained, if Hyrcanus had given him the merest suspicion and shadow of harsh treatment, it was through evil counsellors and not of his own accord. is not quoting literally but paraphrasing the text of a senatus consultum (Sóyµa, § 198) issued at the end of 47 B.C.; so also Momigliano, Ricerche, p. 201.

<sup>c</sup> MS. P " in the city," meaning Rome. According to the other Mss. Caesar was providing for hospitality to the Jewish envoys in the cities of Asia while en route.

<sup>d</sup> If this means Caesar's first dictatorship (48 B.C.), we should have to add to δεύτερον after υπατος, cf. Holmes iii. 567. Momigliano dates it in 48 B.C., other scholars in 47, 46 or 44 B.C., see works listed in Appendix J.

<sup>b</sup> This would be in 44 B.C. Some scholars, however, emend "fifth time" to "second time" and refer the document to 47 B.C., although Caesar was not Consul in that year, or to 46 B.C.; see next note.

<sup>c</sup> As Schürer points out, i. 346 n. 24, Caesar had given Hyrcanus permission to rebuild the walls of Jerusalem in 47 B.c., cf. § 144. Niese therefore assumes that we have here a senatus consultum of 44 B.c. confirming the oral decrees given by Caesar a few years earlier. Mendelssohn and Viereck also assume that a senatus consultum of Feb. 44 B.c. 554 as those under which their forefathers uninterruptedly held the office of priest." a

And that in the second year of the rent-term  $^{d}$  one kor  $^{e}$  shall be deducted from the tax paid by the Jews, and no one shall make profit out of them, nor shall they pay the same tribute."

(6) "Gaius Caesar, Imperator for the second time,  $f_{Julius}$ has ruled that they shall pay a tax for the city of Caesar on Jerusalem, Joppa excluded, every year except in the privileges seventh year," which they call the sabbatical year, enjoyed by

included parts of the following sections, 205-211. See works listed in Appendix J.

<sup>d</sup> μίσθωσις "rent-term" was probably taken over from Ptolemaic usage, cf. W. Westermann in AJP 59 (1938), 9. If the "second year of the rent-term " here coincides with a sabbatical year (as one naturally supposes), it confirms the dating of the document in 44 B.C., as the sabbatical year would be that which extended from Oct. 44 to Oct. 43 B.c. This dating, moreover, fits in perfectly with the reckoning of sabbatical years given above, Ant. xii. 378 note a; see also below, § 375.

<sup>e</sup> The kor = 370 litres or 11 bushels. Either the Romans used the Hebrew name in dealing with Palestine or Josephus (or his source) has substituted the Hebrew name for the Greek.

<sup>7</sup> Niese suggests reading, with Lat., "Imperator and Dietator for the second time." Caesar's second dietatorship fell in 47 B.C. Niese earlier suggested emending to δεύτερον to το δ' " for the fourth time," i.e. in 44 B.C.

<sup>9</sup> The Lat. reads, "the inhabitants of Joppa shall pay tribute to the city of Jerusalem except in the seventh year "; presumably this means the tribute formerly paid to the Romans, but see below, § 205.

" The variant omits " or possess."

<sup>9</sup> The words "shall pay" are conjecturally supplied; one MS. adds "shall have" after "Hyreanus." The sentence is differently translated by Heichelheim, Rom. Syria, p. 232, "and that Hyreanus, the son of Alexander, and his sons, have as tribute of that eity from those that occupy the land and for what they export every year to Sidon, etc." But this rendering requires emendation of the Greek, which Heichelheim does not supply.

amount of twenty thousand six hundred and seventyfive modii every year except in the seventh year, which they call the sabbatical year, wherein they neither plow nor take fruit from the trees. As for the villages in the Great Plain,<sup>a</sup> which Hyrcanus and his forefathers before him possessed, it is the pleasure of the Senate b that Hyrcanus and the Jews shall retain them with the same rights as they formerly had, and that the ancient rights which the Jews and their high priests and priests <sup>e</sup> had in relation to each other should continue, and also the privileges which they received by vote of the people and the Senate. And that they be permitted to enjoy these rights at Lydda also.<sup>d</sup> As for the places, lands and farms, the fruits of which the kings of Syria and Phoenicia,<sup>e</sup> as allies of the Romans, were permitted to enjoy by their gift, these the Senate decrees that the ethnarch Hyrcanus and the Jews shall have. And that to Hyrcanus and his children and to the envoys sent by him shall be given the right to sit with the members of the senatorial order as spectators of the contests of gladiators and wild beasts; and f that when they request permission of the Dictator or Master of the horse  $\hat{g}$  to enter the Senate chamber,

<sup>e</sup> These kings are probably dynasts of Syria, to whom Pompey had granted Jewish territory, as Schürer suggests, i. 347 n. 25, not the Seleucid kings, as Reinach suggests. The allusion to their being "allies of the Romans" makes the latter supposition improbable.

the neighbouring Jews, some of your a envoys also being present, have appealed to me and declared that you are preventing them by statute from observing their national customs and sacred rites. Now it displeases me that such statutes should be made against our friends and allies and that they should be forbidden to live in accordance with their customs and to contribute money to common meals and sacred rites, for this they are not forbidden to do even in Rome. For example, Gaius Caesar, our consular praetor,<sup>b</sup> by edict forbade religious societies to assemble in the city, but these people alone he did not forbid to do so or to collect contributions of money or to hold common meals.<sup>c</sup> Similarly do I forbid other religious societies but permit these people alone to assemble and feast in accordance with their native customs and ordinances. They were dated the fifth day before the Ides of February  $^{d}$  in the Temple of Coneord.<sup>e</sup> The envoys from the high priest Hyrcanus were the following : Lysimachus, son of Pausanias, Alexander, son of Theodorus, Patroclus, son of Chaireas, and Jonathan, son of Onias."

And this request he readily obtained; for Dolabella, on receiving the letter from Hyrcanus, without even taking counsel, sent to all (the officials) in Asia, and wrote to Ephesus,

<sup>1</sup> Dolabella was appointed governor of Syria (not of the province of Asia) in June, 44 B.C., and set out for Syria at the end of the year. On his way through Asia he killed Tre-bonius, governor of Asia, who had been one of Caesar's assassins. Soon after, in 43 B.C., Dolabella was blockaded in Laodicea by Cassius, and committed suicide.

(12) "In the presidency of Artemon, on the first polabella's day of the month of Lenacon,<sup>a</sup> Dolabella, Imperator, letter to to the magistrates, council and people of Ephesus, greeting. Alexander, son of Theodorus, the envoy of Hyrcanus, son of Alexander, the high priest and ethnarch of the Jews, has explained to me that his co-religionists b cannot undertake military service because they may not bear arms or march on the days of the Sabbath; nor can they obtain the native foods to which they are accustomed. I, therefore, like the governors before me, grant them exemption from military service and allow them to follow their native customs and to come together for sacred and holy rites in accordance with their law, and to make offerings for their sacrifices; and it is my wish that you write these instructions to the various cities."

<sup>a</sup> Exactly what priestly revenues (for Jerusalem) are meant is not clear; καρπός in the LXX sometimes means "first-fruits." but here it may include tithes, as Reinach suggests.

<sup>a</sup> Most scholars assume that this is Antiochus IX Cyzicenus, son of Antiochus VII Sidetes, cf. Ant. xiii, 246 ff., 270 ff. Some scholars, however, propose to read "son of Demetrius," meaning Antiochus Sidetes, son of Demetrius I (less probably Antiochus VIII Grypus, son of Demetrius II). With the latter I agree. The emendation "son of Demetrius" is not too arbitrary, considering that in several places Josephus' text gives the wrong surname to a Seleueid ruler; see further the following notes.

<sup>b</sup> This seems to be a reference to the harbours, including Joppa, taken from the Jews by Antiochus Sidetes, cf. Ant. xiii. 261.

 $^{\rm c}$  The variant " shall not be lawful " makes no sense if " for them " means " for the Jews."

that King Antiochus, son of Antiochus,<sup>a</sup> shall do no injury to the Jews, the allies of the Romans; and that the fortresses, harbours, territory and whatever else he may have taken from them shall be restored to them b; and that it shall be lawful<sup>c</sup> for them to export goods from their harbours and that no king or people exporting goods from the territory of the Jews or from their harbours shall be untaxed except only Ptolemy, king of Alexandria,<sup>d</sup> because he is our ally and friend; and that the garrison in Joppa shall be expelled, as they have requested. And one of our council, Lucius Pettius,<sup>e</sup> a worthy and excellent man, has given orders that we shall take care that these things are done as the Senate has decreed, and that we shall see to the safe return of the envoys to their homes. We have also admitted Theodorus to the council and assembly, accepting from him the letter and the decree of the Senate : and after he had addressed us with great earnest-

<sup>d</sup> Reinach suggests that Ptolemy 1X Alexander is meant; he was called to Egypt from Cyprus by his mother Cleopatra III in 107 B.C. If the Pergamene decree is to be dated in the reign of Antiochus Sidetes (who died in 129 B.C.), Reinach's conjecture is impossible, and Ptolemy VII Euergetes II (Physcon) must be meant. On his friendly relations with Rome, cf. Diodorus xxxii. 28 a; he says that Scipio Aemilianus and his colleagues visited Egypt (c. 135 B.C.) and Syria,  $\tau h \nu \pi \rho o \tilde{\nu} \pi \delta \rho v o \sigma a \nu \tau o \hat{s} \phi i \lambda i a \nu \tau o \hat{s} a \pi a \tau \tau a s a varea$ or a due to.

<sup>e</sup> F. Münzer in PW 19 (1938), 1381 suggests that in spite of the wording of the text L. Pettius may have been a member of a Commission of the Roman Senate or even a practor in Rome. This would be more likely if we accepted Reinach's emendation of  $\tau_{\hat{\eta}} \beta o \nu \lambda_{\hat{\eta}}$  for  $\tau_{\hat{\eta}s} \beta \rho v \lambda_{\hat{\eta}s}$ , meaning that L. Pettius gave orders to the council of Pergamum, not that he was one of the council.

So also Reinach had earlier noted that  $\pi o \lambda i \tau a \iota$  is "très embarrassant," and may be an error arising from the following  $\pi o \lambda \lambda \dot{a}$ or else mean πολîται 'Ρωμαΐοι. Conceivably, however, the members of a Jewish politeuma within the Hellenistic polis may have been called πολίται (for iσοπολίται). (xi. 1) <sup>a</sup> About the same time disturbances broke Antipater out in Syria for the following reason. Bassus the Caecilius, one of Pompey's sympathizers,<sup>b</sup> formed a Caesarians plot against Sextus Caesar,<sup>c</sup> and after killing him, Pompeians. took over his army and made himself master of the country<sup>d</sup>; thereupon a great war began <sup>e</sup> near Apamea, for Caesar's generals f marched against him with a force of cavalry and infantry. Antipater also sent them reinforcements together with his sons, being mindful of the benefits they had received from Caesar and on that account thinking it just to avenge Sextus and exact satisfaction from his murderer. As the war was prolonged, Murcus <sup>g</sup> came from Rome to take Sextus' command, and (Julius) Caesar was killed by Cassius, Brutus and their followers in the Senate-house, after having held power for three <sup>b</sup> Holmes, iii. 326 n. 5, accepts this statement that Bassus was a Pompeian sympathizer (with which Livy and Dio Cassius agree) as more accurate than other ancient accounts that Julius Caesar had left a legion in Syria under Bassus.

Worst of all was his treatment of Judaea, from which he exacted seven hundred e talents of silver. But Antipater, secing that affairs were in fearful disorder,<sup>f</sup> apportioned the exacting of money and gave each of his sons a part to collect, and gave orders that some of it was to be raised by Malichus,<sup>g</sup> who was hostile toward him, and the rest by others. And Herod, being the first to raise the sum set for him from Galilee,<sup>h</sup> became especially friendly with Cassius. For he thought it prudent to court the Romans and secure their goodwill at the expense of others.<sup>i</sup> But the officials of the other cities, every last man of them, were sold as slaves, and at that time Cassius reduced to servitude four eities, of which the most important were Gophna<sup>a</sup> and Emmaus,<sup>b</sup> the others being Lydda<sup>c</sup> and Thamna.<sup>d</sup> And Cassius was moved by anger to the point of doing away with Malichus-for he had started to attack him e-had not Hyrcanus through the agency of Antipater sent him a hundred talents of his own money f and so stopped his hostile move.

Whether Josephus here refers to the events of the first half of 43 B.c., when Cassius was preparing to fight Dolabella (§ 223) or of the first half of 42 B.C., when he was preparing to fight Mark Antony and Octavian, is not clear. If the latter, he is anticipating events that took place after the murder of Antipater in 43 B.c. (§ 282); cf. Otto, Herodes, pp. 21-22.

<sup>h</sup> In B.J. Malichus is said to have plotted against Antipater "to remove one who was an obstacle to his malpractices." This difference of motive is duly stressed by Laqueur, p. 188.

soldiers there, he restored order in the eity. But to Herod and Phasael, who, on learning of the plot against their father, were incensed, Maliehus again denied any part in it and professed to have no knowledge of the murder. This was the manner in which Antipater died, a man distinguished for piety, justice and devotion to his country.<sup>a</sup> But while one of his sons, Herod, resolved to avenge his father at once by leading his army against Malichus, the elder son Phasael thought it better to get their man by cunning lest it should be thought that they were beginning a civil war. He<sup>b</sup> therefore accepted Malichus' defence and pretended to believe that he had done nothing criminal in connexion with Antipater's death; he then arranged the burial of his father. As for Herod, he came to Samaria and finding it in a sorry condition, repaired the damage, and put an end to the quarrels among its people.

(5) Not long afterwards, when the festival <sup>c</sup> took Herod place at Jerusalem, he came to the eity with his enters Jerusalem soldiers, and Malichus in fear sought to persuade in defiance Hyrcanus not to permit him to enter. So they came out, and meeting him near the city on the seashore, stabbed him to death. Hyrcanus was struck speechless with amazement at what had been done, and on recovering with some difficulty, inquired of Herod's men what this act might mean and who had had Malichus slain. But when they said that Cassius had ordered this, he commended the deed, saying that Malichus was a very bad man and a conspirator against his country.<sup>c</sup> Such, then, was the penalty which Malichus paid for his lawless act against Antipater.

<sup>9</sup> Reinach queries whether this Fabius may not have been the nephew left by Cassius in Syria, whose name is not given by Appian, Bell. Civ. iv. 63 (cf. § 280 note d). Schürer, however, eiting Noris, Cenotaphia Pisana, 1681, p. 280, suggests that the nephew was Lucius Cassius, later killed at Philippi, according to Appian, Bell. Civ. iv. 135. If this is true, Fabius must have been the governor appointed to succeed Cassius' nephew, probably early in 42 B.C.

but although he wished to rush to his brother's side, was prevented by illness; finally Phasael by his own efforts got the better of Helix and shut him up in a tower, but later let him go under a truce; he also reproached Hyrcanus for acting with his foes although he had received many kindnesses from him. For Malichus' brother, having stirred up a revolt, was then guarding a good many fortresses, including Masada,<sup>a</sup> the strongest of all. Accordingly when Herod had recovered from his illness, he came against him and took from him all the fortresses he held, after which he released him under a truce.

(xii. 1) But Antigonus, the son of Aristobulus, who Herod had collected an army and sought the favour of Aristobulus, who Herod Fabius with bribes, was brought back to his country by Ptolemy, the son of Mennaeus, because of their kinship.<sup>b</sup> He was also aided by Marion, whom Cassius had left as prince <sup>c</sup> of Tyre, for that worthy on occupying Syria had controlled it through small principalities.<sup>d</sup> Marion therefore invaded Galilee, which lay on his borders, and captured three strongholds, in which he placed garrisons. But Herod came against him also and took from him all these places <sup>e</sup>; the Tyrian garrison, however, he considerately released, and even gave gifts to some of them out of goodwill to their city.<sup>f</sup> After achieving these things, he went to meet Antigonus, and joining battle with him, defeated him and drove him out of Judaea before he had time to penetrate further than its border.<sup>a</sup> And when he arrived in Jerusalem, Hyrcanus and the people wreathed his head with crowns.<sup>b</sup> As Herod had already become connected by an agreement of marriage with the family of Hyrcanus, he was for that reason the more protective of him; he was, in fact, about to marry the daughter of Aristobulus' son Alexander and granddaughter of Hyrcanus,<sup>c</sup> by whom he was to become the father of three sons and two daughters.<sup>d</sup> He had previously married a plebeian woman of his own nation,<sup>e</sup> named Doris, by whom he had his eldest son Antipater.

sent you my edict, and it is my wish that you take care to register it in the public tablets in Latin and Greek characters, and, when it is written, keep it in the most conspicuous place in order that it may be read by all. 'Statement of Marcus Antonius, Imperator, one of the triumvirs appointed to govern the republic.ª Whereas Gaius Cassius in the late rebellion b seized a province which did not belong to him, and after occupying it with armed forces, plundered it and our allies,<sup>c</sup> and forced the surrender of the Jewish nation, which was a friend of the Roman people, we, therefore, having overcome his madness by our arms, do establish order by our edicts and decisions in the territories plundered by him, so that they may be restored to our allies. And whatever was sold belonging to the Jews, whether persons or possessions, shall be released, the slaves to be free, as they were originally, and the possessions to be returned to their former owners. And it is my wish that whoever disobeys my edict shall be brought to trial, and if such a person is convicted, it shall be my concern to prosecute the offender in accordance with the seriousness of his act.' "

<sup>b</sup> In the late summer of 41 B.C. Antony had summoned her to answer a charge (not founded in fact) of aiding Cassius. It was on this occasion that Cleopatra, adorned as Aphrodite, 620

And once again <sup>c</sup> a hundred of the most Herod. influential Jews came before him to accuse Herod and his friends,<sup>d</sup> putting forward their most skilful speakers. But Messala<sup>e</sup> spoke against them on behalf of the young men in the presence of Hyrcanus, who had by then become Herod's kinsman by marriage. And when Antony had listened to both sides at Daphne<sup>g</sup> and inquired of Hyrcanus which were the better leaders of the nation, he replied, "Herod and his people," whereupon Antony, who had from of old been friendly with them because of the hospitable relations which he had formed with their father when he was with Gabinius,<sup>h</sup> appointed both Herod and Phasael tetrarchs, i and entrusted to them the government of the Jews; he also wrote letters (to this effect), and put in chains fifteen of their adversaries,<sup>j</sup>

<sup>i</sup> This (with the parallel B.J. i. 244) is the first occurrence in Josephus of this title, so well known from the New Testament in connexion with the later Herodians. Whatever the official position of Herod and Phasael as tetrarchs (see works listed in Appendix L), it is likely that the Romans still regarded Hyrcanus, the ethnarch, as nominally head of the state.

<sup>i</sup> Variant "of the rebels." These fifteen were of the influential Jewish spokesmen mentioned above, as B.J. makes clear.

(2) Not even on their return from the embassy, The Romans however, did they remain quiet, but again a thousand attack some of men met Antony at Tyre, where he had decided to Herod's go. And as Antony had already been heavily bribed opponents. by Herod and his brother,<sup>b</sup> he ordered the local magistrate to punish the envoys of the Jews, who were bent on revolution, and to establish Herod<sup>c</sup> in power. But Herod hastily went out to them-for they d had taken up a position on the beach before the city-, and urged them, Hyrcanus being with him,<sup>e</sup> to go away, saying that great harm would befall them if they proceeded to a contest. But as they refused to take his advice, the Romans f immediately rushed upon them with their daggers and killed some and wounded a still greater number,<sup>g</sup> while the rest escaped to their homes and remained there in great terror without moving.<sup>h</sup> But when the populace cried out against Herod, Antony in a rage killed those who had been taken prisoners.

<sup>h</sup> Ant. omits the statement, in B.J. i. 246, that "burial for the dead and medical attention for the wounded were granted by Hyrcanus."

<sup>i</sup> The parallelism between §§ 330-369 and B.J. i. 248-273. dealing largely with the Parthians, is discussed by Laqueur, pp. 189-193.

<sup>j</sup> The dating seems to be from about the time of the battle of Philippi (cf. § 301), as the Parthians invaded Syria in 40 s.c. (spring). Olmstead, JAOS 56 (1936), 255 sees an allusion to the Parthian invasion in Enoch, ch. 56. For rabbinic traditions see works listed in Appendix K.

At the same time Ptolemy, the from the Parthians. son of Mennaeus, died,<sup>c</sup> and his son Lysanias on succeeding to his throne made a pact of friendship with Antigonus, the son of Aristobulus, in which matter he found the satrap useful, for he had great influence with him.<sup>d</sup> And Antigonus promised to give the Parthians a thousand talents and five hundred women e if they would deprive Hyrcanus of power and give it over to him, and destroy Herod and his people.<sup>f</sup> He did not in fact give them these,<sup>g</sup> but nevertheless the Parthians for the sake of these rewards marched against Judaea, bringing Antigonus back to his country; Pacorus went along the sea-coast while the satrap Barzaphranes went through the interior. Now whereas the Tyrians excluded Pacorus, the people of Sidon and Ptolemais admitted him. However, Pacorus sent out a troop of cavalry to Judaea to make a reconnaissance of the country and also to co-operate with Antigonus under the command of the cupbearer of the king, who had the same name as himself.<sup>h</sup> And as some of the Jews near Mount <sup>d</sup> Niese's slight alteration of the text (one consonant), here adopted, makes the clause mean that the satrap had great influence with Antigonus; the Mss. reading means that Lysanias had great influence with the satrap.

<sup>e</sup> According to B.J. i. 248 it was Lysanias who promised the bribe to the Parthians. From this and similar discrepancies, Laqueur argues (unconvincingly) that Ant. shows a more intense nationalism than B.J. But in B.J. i. 257 Antigonus is cited as the one responsible for the promised bribe-a passage that Laqueur does not mention.

<sup>c</sup> Apparently the Plain of Sharon is meant, cf. Abel, GP i. 414 (who refers to Strabo xvi. 2. 27 f., as does Debevoise, 626 Carmel came to Antigonus<sup>a</sup> and were ready to join him in the invasion, Antigonus expected to take some part of the territory with their help,<sup>b</sup> namely, the place called The Grove (Drymoi)<sup>c</sup>; and although some opponents engaged them, these men got away to Jerusalem,<sup>d</sup> and on being joined by others, formed a large body and came against the palace, which they proceeded to besiege. But Phasael and Herod e came to the assistance of the besieged, and in the battle which was fought in the market-place the young men f defeated the enemy; and after pursuing them into the temple, they sent some soldiers g to the adjacent houses to guard them, but as the soldiers were left without reinforcements,<sup>h</sup> the people rose against them and burnt them to death in the houses. For this outrage Herod, however, soon afterwards took vengeance on his adversaries, and engaging them in battle, killed many of them.

<sup>d</sup> B.J. i. 250 says that Antigonus' partisans " repulsed the enemy and rushed in pursuit to Jerusalem."

<sup>i</sup> B.J. i. 253 speaks of the arrival of the country people but does not say that the Herodians' enemies were waiting for them. The use of the word "enemies" here points to a source favourable to Herod, i.e. Nicolas of Damascus.

round the temple. The newcomers held the temple and the city except for the palaee and its environs, for these Herod was protecting with a few soldiers. And so, while Phasael guarded the wall, Herod with a company attacked the enemy in the suburbs and after a stout fight routed many tens of thousands a; some of them fled to the city, others to the temple, and still others to some outer ramparts which were there. And Phasael also gave him assistance. Thereupon Pacorus, the Parthian general,<sup>b</sup> at Antigonus' request came to the city with a few horsemen,° ostensibly to put an end to the uprising, but in reality to help Antigonus obtain power. And when Phasael met him and received him hospitably,<sup>d</sup> Pacorus persuaded him to go on an embassy himself to Barzaphranes, for this was part of a plot he had devised against him. Phasael, suspecting nothing, let himself be persuaded although Herod did not approve of what was being done because of the faithlessness of the barbarians, and advised him, instead, to attack Paeorus and the others who had come.<sup>e</sup>

Galilee, those of the enemy who were stationed in that region a met them with arms. And though Barzaphranes at first received them cordially and gave them gifts, he then began to plot against them. Phasael and his party were thereupon brought to Ecdippa  $^{b}$  overlooking the sea; and when they there heard that Antigonus had promised the Parthians a thousand talents and five hundred women at their expense,<sup>c</sup> they now had suspicions of the barbarians. Furthermore someone informed them that a plot was being hatched against them to be carried out by night, and that an unseen guard was placed round them; and they would have been seized had it not been that the enemy were waiting until the Parthians at Jerusalem should have seized Herod lest upon their doing away with the envoys first, Herod should learn of it and escape. And these reports were actually so, and their guards were seen. Accordingly some of the men urged Phasael to mount his horse immediately and not wait any longer; especially was he pressed to do this by Ophellius, who had heard these things from Saramalla, at that time the wealthiest man in Syria, and he promised him boats for his flight, for the sea was near. $\hat{d}$  Phasael, however, did not think it right to desert Hyrcanus or to endanger his brother e; but he went to Barzaphranes and told him that he was doing the wrong thing in

But they, although they knew everything, deceitfully pretended innocence and said that he should go with them before the wall in order to meet the bearers of letters, for they had not yet been seized by their adversaries but had come with a report of all that Phasael had accomplished. &lt;sup>a</sup> Alexandra, the mother of Mariamme (on the betrothal see above § 300). B.J. i. 262 has "Mariamme, the daughter of Hyrcanus, most sagacious of women"; there, it seems, 634 daughter,<sup>a</sup> to whose daughter he was betrothed, he became still more suspicious of the Parthians. Now though the others paid no attention to her, he himself had faith in her as a very sensible woman.

(7) While the Parthians deliberated what they Herod should do-for they did not like the idea of openly with his attacking so powerful a man-and postponed the family to matter to the next day, Herod, who was in great perturbation and gave more weight to what he had heard about his brother and the Parthians' plot than to the other side, decided when evening came to take this opportunity to flee and not to delay as if there were some uncertainty of danger from the enemy.<sup>b</sup> Accordingly he set out with those soldiers whom he had there, and mounted the women on beasts of burden, including his mother and sister and the daughter of Alexander, the son of Aristobulus, whom he was to marry, and her mother, who was a daughter of Hyrcanus; he also took his youngest brother and all the servants and the rest of the crowd that was with them, and unknown to the enemy followed the road to Idumaea.<sup>c</sup> And no enemy would have been found so hard of heart that on witnessing what was taking place at that time he would not have pitied their fate as the wretehed women led their infants and with tears and wailing left behind their native either "Mariamme" is a gloss or the text should read "the daughter of Hyrcanus and the mother of Mariamme," since the description of the woman fits the mother better than the daughter, as Dr. Thackeray points out in his note on the

And so at Herod's exhortation they tried to bear their troubles. But once when a wagon overturned and his mother was in danger of death, he was near to taking his own life because of his anguish on her account and his fear that as a result of the delay caused by the overturn the enemy might overtake them in pursuit. Indeed he had drawn his sword and was about to stab himself when those about him restrained him and prevailed upon him by their number and also by telling him that it was not right for him to abandon them and leave them in the power of their foes, for it was not the act of a noble man to free himself from danger and disregard that of his friends. And so, being forced to desist from his rash act against himself by shame at their words and by the number of those who stayed his hand from carrying out his plan, he revived his mother and procured for her such care as was possible in the short time at his disposal, and continued on his way, making the journey to the fortress of Masada <sup>c</sup> at great speed. The latter statement seems to be a conflation of the two accounts in Josephus; "cut off" is a strange verb in combination with " teeth."

should never come to him another time, because he was now mutilated, and the law requires that this office should belong only to those who are sound of body.<sup>a</sup> As for Phasael, one must admire his courage, for though he knew that he was marked for slaughter. he did not look upon death as terrible in itself bat believed that it was a most bitter and shameful thing to suffer at the hands of a foe; and so, not having his hands free to destroy himself because of his chains, he dashed his head against a rock and removed himself from the world of the living, which he thought was the best thing to do in view of his helpless position. and thus he deprived the enemy of the power of killing him as they pleased. But some say that when he had incurred this serious wound, Antigonus quietly sent physicians as if to heal it, and had him killed by deadly poisons which they applied to his wound.<sup>b</sup> However, before he breathed his last, Phasael heard from some woman that his brother Herod had escaped the enemy, and so he bore his death with cheerfulness, for he left behind one who would avenge his death and was able to punish his foes.°

For as he did not know what had happened to his brother, he was in haste to ransom him from the enemy, being ready to pay as his ransom as much as three hundred talents in coin. And for this purpose he also took along Phasael's son, who was seven years old, to offer him as security to the Arabs.<sup>b</sup> But he was met by messengers from Malchus, who through them ordered Herod to retire, for the Parthians, he said, had instructed him not to receive Herod; this he used as a pretext for not repaying his debts, and the influential Arabs urged him on to this in order that they might withhold from Herod the sums which they had received in deposit from Antipater. Thereupon he replied to them that he had come to them with no thought of making trouble but only to discuss matters which were of the greatest importance to him.<sup>c</sup>

went to Rome where he first of all related to Antony<sup>a</sup> what had befallen him in Judaea, and how his brother Phasael had been seized by the Parthians and put to death, and that Hyrcanus was being held a prisoner by them, and that they had set up Antigonus as king after his promise to give them a thousand talents and five hundred women, who were to be of the first families and of their own race,<sup>b</sup> and that he had removed the women by night and had escaped from the hands of his foes after enduring many hardships. Then he said <sup>c</sup> that his relatives shared his danger by being besieged, and told how he had sailed through a storm, and how he had made light of every danger in his haste to reach Antony, in whom lay his hope and only help.

(4) Antony was moved to pity by the reverses of Antony and Herod, and indulged in the familiar reflection con-Octavius promise to cerning those who are placed in so high a station, aid Herod, that they too are subject to the rule of fortune; and partly in memory of Antipater's hospitality,<sup>d</sup> partly because of the money which Herod promised to give him if he became king, e as he had promised once before when he was appointed tetrarch, f but chiefly because of his hatred of Antigonus-for he considered him and the marriage of Antony to Octavian's sister Octavia (November).

<sup>d</sup> B.J. does not mention Octavian's desire to do Antony a favour; instead, it says that Octavian recognized Herod's 650 a seditious person and an enemy of the Romans  $a_{--}$ . he was eager to give Herod the assistance he asked for. As for Caesar,<sup>b</sup> because of the campaigns in Egypt on which Antipater had served with his father,<sup>c</sup> and his hospitality and goodwill at all times, and also as a favour to Antony, who was very zealous on Herod's behalf, he was more ready to grant this rank and to co-operate in the things which Herod wished.<sup>d</sup> And so Messala<sup>e</sup> and Atratinus<sup>f</sup> after him convened the Senate, and presenting Herod, dwelt on the good deeds of his father, and recalled the loyalty which Herod himself had shown toward the Romans ; at the same time they brought accusations against Antigonus, whom they declared an enemy, not only because of the first offence he had eommitted against them<sup>g</sup> but because he had received his kingly title from the Parthians, thus showing no regard for the Romans. And when the Senate had been aroused by these charges, Antony eame forward and informed them that it was also an advantage in their war with the Parthians that Herod should be king. And as this proposal was acceptable to all, they voted accordingly.<sup>h</sup>

"enterprising character." Laqueur, pp. 194-195, mistranslating έτοιμότερος in § 383 (as Prof. Post notes), remarks that Ant, does not clearly explain why Octavian showed himself even more zealous than Antony in Herod's behalf.

(5) <sup>a</sup> But this was the greatest sign of Antony's The honour devotion to Herod, that not only did he obtain the shown Herod by kingship for him, which he had not hoped for-he the Roman had come to the capital not to claim the kingship for rulers. himself, for he did not believe the Romans would offer it to him, since it was their eustom to give it to one of the reigning family, but to claim it for his wife's brother,<sup>b</sup> who was a grandson of Aristobulus on his father's side and of Hyrcanus on his mother's ° -but he also made it possible for Herod in only seven days altogether to obtain these unexpected grants and leave Italy.<sup>d</sup> This youth, however, Herod put to death, as we shall relate at the proper time." Now when the Senate was adjourned, Antony and Caesar went out with Herod between them, and the consuls and other magistrates leading the way, in order to sacrifice and to deposit the decree in the Capitol. Then Antony entertained him on the first day of his reign. Thus did Herod take over royal power. receiving it in the hundred and eighty-fourth

<sup>d</sup> Otto, Herodes, p. 28, expresses scepticism about Herod's original intention of claiming the throne for Aristobulus, not for himself, on the ground that Herod was in Italy so short a time ; he sees in this passage an attempt to clear Herod of overweening ambition. On the other hand, Laqueur, pp. 195-199, in the interest of his theory about the anti-Herodian alterations and additions in Ant., resorts to a rather artificial explanation of secondary changes in Ant. to make the point that far from clearing Herod here, Josephus is criticising him for making use of Aristobulus in the belief that the Roman policy of retaining the reigning dynasty would make his own appointment as king impossible. Laquenr combines §§ 386-388 with 403-405 and 489 as anti-Herodian revisions of Josephus' source, here supposedly the memoirs of Herod <sup>e</sup> Ant. xv. 53 ff. himself.

but in order that his extortion a might not be detected, he left Silo<sup>b</sup> behind with a certain number of soldiers ; to him also Antigonus paid court in order that he might not cause any trouble, hoping at the same time that the Parthians would once more give him help.

And so while Ventidius was quieting the disturbances that had been created in the cities by the Parthians, Silo remained in Judaea, having been corrupted by bribes from Antigonus. Nevertheless Herod's strength increased day by day as he went forward, and all Galilee, except for a few of its inhabitants, came over to his side. But when he set out to reach those in Masada—for it was essential to save the people who were being besieged in the fortress, since they were his relatives-he found Joppa in his way, and as it was hostile to him, he had first to capture it in order that no stronghold should be left on his rear in the enemy's hands while he was moving on Jerusalem. (2) Thus a strong force had been collected, and as Herod and it advanced, Antigonus occupied the most suitable Antigonus places for passage with snares and ambushes, but in Jerusalem did not the least, or at best only slight, damage thereby to the enemy. Then Herod having recovered his relatives from Masada and taken the fortress of Oresa,<sup>b</sup> went on to Jerusalem, where he was joined <sup>c</sup> by Silo's army and many from the city who were intimidated by his strength. When he encamped on the western side of the city, the guards who had been stationed in this quarter hurled javelins and shot arrows at them, while some ran out in a compact body and fought hand to hand with his front-line men; but Herod gave orders that his men should first make a proclamation before the wall that he had come for the good of the citizens and the welfare of the city, bearing no grudge even against those who were openly his foes, but, on the contrary, being ready to forget the offences which his most determined adversaries had committed against him. But Antigonus in answer to Herod's proclamation told Silo and the Roman army that it would be contrary to their own notion of right if they gave the kingship to Herod who was a commoner and an Idumaean, that is, a half-Jew, when they ought to offer it to those who were of the (royal) family, as was their custom. And, he argued, if they were now illdisposed toward him and were determined to deprive him of the kingship on the ground that he had received it from the Parthians, there were at least many of his family who might lawfully receive the kingship, for they had committed no offence against the Romans, and were priests; and thus they would be unworthily treated if they were deprived of this rank.<sup>a</sup> Such things they said to one another and were proceeding to imprecations when Antigonus permitted his men to battle with Herod's men from the wall.<sup>b</sup> But the enemy shot their arrows and opposed them with so much spirit that they easily drove them from the towers.

ravaging by Antigonus' soldiers; and so he began to move his camp and attempted to withdraw. But Herod persisted in urging the officers under Silo and their soldiers not to desert him, for Caesar as well as Antony and the Senate had given him encouragement a; he would, he said, take care that they should have plenty of provisions, and would readily furnish them with an abundance of the things they wanted. After making this plea he at once set out into the country and left Silo no longer any pretext for withdrawing, for he brought back a greater mass of provisions than anyone had hoped for, and also instructed those around Samaria who had become friendly toward him<sup>b</sup> to bring down to Jerieho grain, wine, oil, cattle and all other things in order that there should be no lack of supplies for the soldiers for some days to come. But these activities did not remain unknown to Antigonus, who at once sent off men throughout the country to obstruct and wavlay those who were collecting food : and in obedience to Antigonus' orders they mustered a large body of armed men near Jericho, and taking up posts in the hills, kept a look-out for the men who were bringing provisions. Herod, however, did not remain still while this was being done, but took ten cohorts, five Roman and five Jewish, and a mixed mercenary force, to which he added a few mounted men, and marched on Jericho; and while he found the city deserted. he seized five hundred men occupying the heights with their wives and families, but after capturing

And after leaving a garrison at Jerieho, the king returned and dismissed his Roman army to their winter quarters in the districts which had joined his side, a namely Idumaea, b Galilee and Samaria. At the same time Antigonus through bribery obtained Silo's consent to quarter a part of his army in Lydda,<sup>c</sup> seeking to win Antony's favour thereby. Meanwhile Silo and the officers of the men who were in winter quarters came to him because Antigonus was unwilling to furnish them with food : that worthy had fed them for a month and no longer; he had, moreover, sent out orders to the inhabitants round about that they were to gather up all the provisions throughout the country and flee to the hills in order that the Romans might be entirely without necessary food and so perish of hunger. (5) About the same time, while Antony was staying How Herod at Athens,<sup>b</sup> Ventidius in Svria sent for Silo to join him the Galilean against the Parthians,<sup>c</sup> but instructed him first to brigands in their caves, assist Herod in the present war and then summon their allies to the Romans' own war. But Herod, who was hastening against the brigands in the caves, sent d Silo off to Ventidius, and set out against them by himself. Now their caves were in hills that were altogether rugged, having their entrances half-way up the sheer cliffs and being surrounded by sharp rocks: in such dens did they lurk with all their people. Thereupon the king, whose men were unable either to climb up from below or creep upon them from above because of the steepness of the hill, had cribs built and lowered these upon them with iron chains as they were suspended by a machine from the summit of the hill. The cribs were filled with armed men holding great grappling hooks, with which they were supposed to draw toward them any of the brigands who opposed them, and kill them by hurling them to the ground. The lowering of the cribs was proving to be a risky business because of the immense depth that lay below them, although the men within them had everything they needed. But when the cribs were let down, none of the men standing near the entrances of the caves dared come forward; instead, they remained quiet out of fear, whereupon one of the soldiers in irritation at the delay caused by the brigands who dared not come out, girded on his sword, and holding on with both hands to the chain from which the crib was suspended, lowered himself to the entrance of a cave. And when he came opposite an entrance, he first drove back with javelins most of those who were standing there, and then with his grappling hook drew his opponents toward him and pushed them over the precipice; after this he attacked those within and slaughtered many of them, whereupon he re-entered the crib and rested. Then fear seized the others as they heard the shrieking, and they despaired of their lives; all action, however, was halted by the coming on of night a; and many, after sending spokesmen with the king's consent,<sup>b</sup> surrendered and made their submission.<sup>c</sup> The same method of attack was used the following day, when the men in the baskets <sup>d</sup> fell upon them still more fiercely and fought at their doors and threw flaming fire inside, and so the caves, which had much wood in them, were set on fire. Now there was an old man shut up within one of the caves with his seven children and his wife : and when they begged him to let them slip through to the enemy, he stood at the entrance and cut down each of his sons as he came out, and afterwards his wife, and after hurling their dead bodies over the precipice, threw himself down upon them, thus submitting to death rather than to slavery. But before doing so, he bitterly reviled Herod for his meanness of spirit, although the king-for he was a witness of what was happening-stretched out his right hand and promised him full immunity. By such methods, then, all the caves were finally taken.

Ptolemy, however, was unsuccessful in his command. and the men who had formerly disturbed Galilee fell upon him and took his life; after doing this, they fled in a body to the marshes and other inaccessible places, harrying and plundering the entire country thereabout. But Herod returned and punished them: some of the rebels he slew, and those who had taken refuge in fortified places he subjected to a siege and killed, and demolished their strongholds as well. After putting an end to the rebellion in this way, he also fined the cities a hundred talents.

<sup>b</sup> The preceding account of Machaeras' actions differs in some important details from the parallel,  $B_{sJ}$ , i. 317-319, which says that Antigonus, complaining bitterly of Herod, tried to bribe Machaeras, but the bribe was refused because Machaeras respected the orders of Ventidius and was also tempted by a larger bribe offered by Herod; after being repulsed by Antigonus, Machaeras in shame (nothing is said of his belated recognition of the soundness of Herod's advice) 674 Now Machaeras, being invited by Antigonus and bribed by him, went off against Herod's wish, as if to reconnoitre his position ; but Antigonus, suspecting his intentions in coming, did not admit him, but kept him away with sling-shots, and so revealed his own purpose. Thereupon Machaeras, perceiving that Herod had given him excellent advice and that he himself had made a mistake in disregarding his counsel, withdrew to the city of Emmaus<sup>a</sup> and slaughtered all the Jews whom he met on the way, whether friends or foes, in anger at the treatment he had suffered.<sup>b</sup> Enraged at these acts, the king went to Samaria, for he had decided to go to Antony about these matters and say that he had no need of such allies, who would do more harm to him than to his enemies, and that he was quite able to crush Antigonus by himself.<sup>c</sup> But Machaeras, who accompanied him, begged him to remain, or, if he were bent on going, at least to leave his brother Joseph as their associate in the war with  $Antigonus.^d$  And so, at was forced to retire to Emmaus and rejoin Herod, on the way killing all the Jews he met, not sparing even the Herodians. Otto, Herodes, p. 31 note, assumes that in  $\Delta ht$ . Josephus used two contradictory sources, while Laqueur, pp. 202-205, argues that Josephus has tendentiously altered B.J. in writing  $\Delta ht$ , out of hostility to Antigonus (while still being hostile to his opponent Herod). But so far as Antigonus is concerned the only difference between B.J. and  $\Delta nt$ , is that in the former he tries to bribe Machaeras unsuccessfully, and in the latter succeeds in bribing him. Thus the alleged anti-Antigonus revision of  $\Delta ht$ , is not very clear.

<sup>d</sup> Herod's brother Joseph is not mentioned by Machaeras in the parallel, B.J. i. 320.

<sup>a</sup> In B.J. Herod's warning to Joseph not to engage Antigonus (nothing is said about quarrelling with Machaeras, although his untrustworthiness is mentioned) follows the account of the siege of Samosata instead of preceding it, as here.

the earnest entreaty of Maehaeras, Herod became reconciled and left his brother Joseph there with an army, warning him not to take any risks or to quarrel with Machaeras.a

But two days' march from Samosata e there was an ambush of barbarians lying in wait for those who were on their way to Antony. And as there were thickets covering the entrance to the plains, they had there placed in ambush f not a few horsemen to remain quiet until those passing through should reach the place where see Laqueur, pp. 205-210, who assumes that in Ant. Josephus used a second source beside Nicolas of Damascus, namely the Memoirs of Herod himself. But this assumption seems to contradict Laqueur's theory that Ant. is more anti-Herodian than B.J.

<sup>c</sup> Antony had come to supersede Ventidius who was besieging the Parthians' ally Antiochus of Commagene, For the ancient sources see W. W. Tarn in CAH x. 53 note 3 and Debevoise, p. 120 note 103.

<sup>d</sup> B.J. adds that "Herod quickened his pace, as he saw in this a favourable opportunity for displaying his courage and strengthening his hold upon Antony's affection." The details of Herod's march and reception by Antony in §§ 439-444 are not found in the corresponding sections, B.J. i. 321-322.

horses could be used. As the first men went through, Herod was guarding the rear, and when the men in ambush, numbering some five hundred, suddenly a fell upon them and routed those in front, the king rushed up and by the force of his charge at once drove the enemy back; at the same time he raised the spirits of his men and filled them with courage ; and when those who had before been fleeing turned back to fight, the barbarians were killed on all sides. But the king pressed on, slaving as he went, and after recovering all the plunder that had been taken, consisting of a great many pack-animals and slaves, he went ahead. And being attacked by a larger number of men in the thickets near the entrance to the plain, he engaged them too with a stout body of men and routed and killed many of them. thus making the road safe for those who followed. Thereupon they hailed him as their saviour and protector.

(9) And when he came near Samosata, Antony Antony sent his army with his own equipment to meet him, welcomes assigning these men as an honour to Herod and also Samosata. as an aid to him ; for he had heard of the barbarians' attacks upon them. Moreover when Herod arrived, he was very glad to see him, and on learning of his feats on the way, he clasped his hand and expressed admiration of his prowess ; and Antony himself welcomed him with an embrace on seeing him,<sup>b</sup> and showed him special honour, for he had recently appointed him king.<sup>c</sup> But not long afterwards

Antiochus<sup>a</sup> surrendered the stronghold,<sup>b</sup> and thus the war came to an end; thereupon Antony entrusted Syria c to Sossius with instructions to aid Herod, and himself departed for Egypt.<sup>d</sup> And so Sossius sent two legions ahead to Judaea to assist Herod, and himself followed with the greater part of his army.

(10) Before this, however, Joseph had met his Joseph is death in Judaea under the following circumstances. killed in battle at Forgetting the orders which his brother had given Jericho. him when going off to Antony, he pitched camp in the hills-for when Machaeras gave him five cohorts, he hastened to Jericho with the intention of reaping all their grain-and as the Roman army was newly recruited and had no experience of war, being raised mostly from Syria, he was left in a difficult position when the enemy attacked him there, and so he was killed, fighting bravely; his entire army was also lost, six cohorts being destroyed.<sup>f</sup> And Antigonus seized the dead bodies<sup>g</sup> and cut off Joseph's head, which his brother Pheroras ransomed for fifty talents. And after this the Galilaeans rebelled against the nobles in their country and drowned the partisans peace with Antiochus on the latter's payment of 300 talents (instead of 1000 earlier demanded by Ventidius). Tarn, loc. cit., calls this story " absurd."

" Syria " is conjecturally supplied from B.J.

<sup>d</sup> According to Plutarch, loc. cit., Antony returned to Athens from Syria. In B.J. the instructions to Sossius are mentioned after the account of Joseph's defeat at Jericho, instead of before it, as here ; § 447 = B.J. i, 327, while §§ 448-450 = B.J. i. 323-326.

" Tarn remarks, CAH x. 54, that this was a " rare instance of a foreigner commanding Roman troops."

<sup>d</sup> B.J.'s language is more dramatic, " springing in dismay from his bed, he was met by the messengers bringing news of the catastrophe."

<sup>e</sup> The stop at Ptolemais is not mentioned in B.J. Laqueur, pp. 206-207, argues that in Ant. Josephus has deliberately suppressed the details of his source which showed Herod's passionate haste to avenge his brother. But B.J. is simply more rhetorical than Ant., see preceding note and below, on § 458.

Antigonus then sent a general named Pappus with a force <sup>e</sup> to Samaria, wishing to give the enemy the impression that he was fighting with men to spare. And while he occupied himself with the general Machaeras, Herod took five eities, and after slaughtering those who were caught f in them-about two thousand-and burning the cities themselves, returned to face Pappus, who had pitched his camp near a village called Isana.<sup>g</sup>

<sup>a</sup> Variant "from Jericho and Judaea"; B.J. "from Jericho and the rest of the country  $(\chi \omega \rho a_s)$ "—probably meaning Judaea. B.J. adds that these recruits came, "some drawn by hatred of Antigonus, others by his own successes, the majority by a blind love of change." 686

Meanwhile many people streamed to him from Jericho and the rest of Judaea<sup>a</sup>; and when he drew near the enemy, they boldly advanced to attack him, but on engaging them in battle he overcame them, and to avenge his brother b he followed and killed them as they fled to the village. The houses were filled with armed men, and many c took refuge on the housetops, but he seized these, and on pulling down the roofs of the houses, saw the space below filled with soldiers wedged in tightly together. Accordingly his men hurled stones at them from above d and slew them in heaps, one upon another. And the most terrible sight of any during the war was this mass of countless dead bodies lying one upon another within the walls of the houses." It was this action which did most to break the spirits of the enemy, who were waiting to see what would happen; for great crowds were seen coming together from a distance about the village, and they now fled ; and if a severe storm ' had not prevented, the king's army, made confident by their victory, would have marched on Jerusalem as well and ended the whole business ; for Antigonus was already considering headlong flight and withdrawal from the eity.

<sup>b</sup> This is more dramatically expressed in B.J. i. 336, "with his memories of his murdered brother, hazarding all to be avenged on his murderers." There are several other dramatic phrases in these sections of B.J. not paralleled in Ant.

' Variant " some "; B.J. supports our text.

(13) <sup>a</sup> At this point the king ordered his soldiers to Herod's have their supper, as it was late, and he himself, escape from being tired out, went into a room to bathe. And assassinahere he came into very great danger, but by the providence of God, escaped it. For he was naked b and taking his bath, with only a single servant in attendance, in an inner chamber, where several of the enemy, who were armed, had taken refuge out of fear ; and while he was bathing, one of them stole by <sup>c</sup> with his sword drawn, and went out through the door, and after him a second and a third who were similarly armed, but in their consternation they did the king no injury, and were content to have got away into the open without suffering any harm. The following day he cut off the head of Pappus, who had already been slain, and sent it to Pheroras in revenge for what his brother had suffered. For it was Pappus who had been his executioner.<sup>d</sup>

And everything on the land outside the city d had been carried off, so that nothing was left that might serve as food for men or beasts; and by secret raids also they caused a lack of provisions. But e when Herod observed this, he took steps against the raids, on the one hand, by posting ambushes in the most suitable places, and against the lack of provisions, on the other hand, by sending divisions of armed men to gather supplies from a distance, so that within a short time they had a great abundance of necessities. And the three lines of earthworks had been raised with ease, for there were a great number of hands now continuously f at work, and as it was summer,<sup>g</sup> there was no hindrance to their erection either from the weather or from the workmen; and so they brought up their engines and battered the wall, trying every expedient. They did not, however, intimidate those within the city, who on their part contrived a good many counterdevices against those of their enemies ; they would dash out and set fire to their works, some of them half-finished, others completed; they would also

<sup>a</sup> This is another detail not found in B.J. Josephus here seems to say that the siege took place during a sabbatical year, namely that which extended from Oct. 38 to Oct. 37 B.C., as most scholars assume. But there is good reason to believe that this sabbatical year extended from Oct. 37 to Oct. 36 B.c. (see the notes on Ant. xii. 378, xiii. 234, xiv. 201 and below, § 487). We must therefore, it seems, make one of the three following assumptions: (1) Josephus knew that the siege occurred in the summer of the year corresponding to 37 B.c. but was mistaken in saying (or implying) that this fell in a sabbatical year (beginning Oct. 38 B.c.). (2) Josephus assumed that the siege took place during a sabbatical year, in the summer of 36 n.c. This seems to be borne out by the statement below, § 488, that Sossius and Herod captured Jerusalem 27 years after Pompey had done so (63 B.C.) ; thus Jerusalem fell in 36 B.c. as maintained by Gumpach and Caspari (ap. Schürer i. 358 n. 11). Zeitlin's argument, MT, 694 fight hand to hand, but while they were not inferior to the Romans in daring, they fell short of them in science. Against the siege-engines they devised counter-defences when their first constructions gave way, and fought underground when they met the enemy in the mines; and acting in desperation rather than with foresight, they persevered in the war to the very end-this in spite of the fact that a great army surrounded them and that they were distressed by famine and the lack of necessities, for a sabbatical year happened to fall at that time.<sup>a</sup> The Jerusalem first to mount the wall were twenty b picked men, and falls to Herod and after these came Sossius' centurions. The first wall Sossius. was taken in forty days,<sup>c</sup> and the second in fifteen more; and some of the porticoes round the temple were burnt, which Herod accused Antigonus of

pp. 20-27, that the 27 years do not give 36 B.c. but Jan. (10th of Tebet), 37 B.c., reckoning 26 years and a fraction from Pompey's entry in the summer of 63 B.C., is invalidated by, among other things, the reference to the summer in § 473. (3) Josephus knew that the siege took place in the summer of 37 s.c. and was referring, rather vaguely, to a sabbatical year that began soon after the fall of Jerusalem, that is, in Oct. 37 B.C. This is not so improbable as it may seem at first. If the inhabitants of Jerusalem were distressed by famine in the summer of 37 B.C., they would not be able to lay in an extra supply of provisions for the latter part of the sabbatical year beginning in October-hence their desperation. To be sure, the 27 years of § 488 make a difficulty here, and we should have to assume that Josephus made a slip in arithmetic.

One hardly knows which assumption to prefer, in view of the apparently irreconcilable inconsistencies in Josephus himself, apart from his inconsistency with other ancient sources (see below, § 487-488 notes).

setting on fire, making an effort to draw upon him the hatred of the Jews by this charge.<sup>a</sup> And when the outer precincts of the temple and the Lower City had been captured, the Jews fled into the inner precinct of the temple and the Upper City<sup>b</sup>; and fearing that the Romans would prevent them from offering the daily sacrifices to God, they sent an embassy to beg that they would permit them to have only victims brought in for them; and this request he granted, in the belief that they would yield. But when he saw that none of the things he expected of them was being done, and that, on the contrary, they were resisting strongly for the sake of Antigonus' kingship, he attacked them and took the city by storm. And soon every quarter was filled with the blood of the slain,<sup>c</sup> for the Romans were furious at the length of the siege,<sup>d</sup> while the Jews on Herod's side were anxious not to leave a single adversary alive. And so they were slaughtered in heaps, whether crowded together in alleys and houses or seeking refuge in the temple; no pity was shown either to infants or the aged, nor were weak women spared, but even though the king sent word around, urging them to forbear, not one of them held his hand, but like madmen they fell upon persons of every age. It was then that Antigonus, without stopping to reflect either on his former or his present fortunes, came down from the castle, and fell at Sossius' feet.

<sup>6</sup> At this point is resumed the close parallelism with B.J.; §§ 479-486 = B.J. i. 351-356.

<sup>d</sup> According to B.J. i. 351 the Jews sustained the siege into the fifth month, while Ant., below, § 487, appears to state that the city fell in the third month (of the siege) or even less (see above, § 476); but the point of time to which "the third month" refers in Ant. is by no means certain.

He, however, did not in the least pity him for suffering a change of fortune, but applauded him a unrestrainedly, and called him Antigone b; nevertheless he did not leave him unguarded, as a woman would have been, but had him put in chains and kept under guard.

(3) And Herod, after checking his enemies, took Herod care also to check his foreign allies; for the crowd restrains of strangers was bent on getting a view of the temple of his and the holy things in the sanctuary, and the king allies. held them back, in some cases by appeals, in others by threats, and sometimes even by arms, for he regarded victory as something more bitter than defeat if any of the things forbidden to men's eyes should be seen by them. He also tried to prevent the plundering that went on throughout the city by strenuously arguing with Sossius that if the Romans emptied the city of its wealth and its men, they would leave him king of a wilderness, and that he would eonsider the sovereignty of the habitable world a poor recompense for the murder of so many citizens. And when Sossius said that he had been right to permit his soldiers this plundering in return for their labours in the siege, Herod replied that he himself would distribute rewards to each of them out of his own purse. In this way he purchased security for the rest of the city, and fulfilled his promise; for he gave splendid gifts to every soldier and proportionate gifts to their officers, while to Sossius himself he made most regal presents, so that all went away with a goodly share of wealth.

<sup>a</sup> That is, ironically; conjectured variant "jeered at him." B.J. has "burst into immoderate laughter at him." <sup>b</sup> The feminine form of the name Antigonus.

But Herod feared that if Antigonus were kept under guard by Antony and brought to Rome by him, he might plead the justice of his cause before the Senate and show that he was descended from kings while Herod was a commoner, and that his sons ought to reign by virtue of their lineage, even though he himself had committed offences against the Romans f;

been considerable discussion of the actual date of the city's fall, and various attempts have been made to reconcile the conflicting data; see the detailed discussions (with bibliography) in Schürer i. 358 n. 11, Otto, Herodes, p. 33 n. 2, Zeitlin, MT, pp. 20-27, Laqueur, pp. 211-212 and Kugler, pp. 418-422. Here it may suffice to remark that while the year 37 B.c. is certain, the month cannot be determined with absolute certainty, but was probably July and not October. The former is more likely if we assume, with Otto, that the reference to the Day of Atonement (if vnoreias here means that fast day and not an earlier fast day in the calendar, e.g. the fast of the month Tammuz) is based on a popular tradition that sought to discredit Herod by making him responsible for invading the city on the very sacred Day of Atonement.

<sup>e</sup> Antony had left Italy for Greece in the autumn of 37 B.c. and soon after went to Antioch. It was here that Antigonus was brought to him in the winter of that year, cf. Wilcken in PW i. 2420 and Tarn in CAH x. 54-55.

<sup>1</sup> Apparently Herod had no confidence that the Romans would continue to prefer him to the Hasmonaeans as they had done in 40 B.C., see above, § 386.

<sup>a</sup> B.J. i. 357 says that Antigonus fell beneath the axe. According to Dio Cassius, xlix. 22, Antony had Antigonus scourged while bound to a cross, a punishment " which no and because of this fear Herod gave Antony a large bribe and persuaded him to put Antigonus out of the way.<sup>a</sup> And when this was done, Herod was freed of his fear, and at the same time the rule of the Asamonaean line came to an end after a hundred and twenty-six years.<sup>b</sup> Theirs was a splendid and renowned house because of both their lineage and their priestly office, as well as the things which its founders achieved on behalf of the nation. But they lost their royal power through internal strife, and it passed to Herod, the son of Antipater, who came from a house of common people and from a private family that was subject to the kings.<sup>c</sup> Such, then, is the account we have received of the end of the Asamonaean line.

other king had suffered at the hands of the Romans," and then had him beheaded or had his throat cut  $(a\pi\epsilon\sigma\phi a\xi\epsilon\nu)$ .

<sup>b</sup> This would take us back to 163 or 162 B.c. Apparently Josephus is placing the beginning of the Hasmonaean dynasty at about the time when the last Oniad high priest, Onias IV, fled to Egypt, cf. Ant. xii. 385-388.
